Five New Faces Join HPC Staff

By Linda Cain

The opening of each new school year brings many new faces to the staff at High Point College.

Dr. Carole A. Head, instructor of foreign language, comes to HPC with an educational and teaching background that spans two continents. Dr. Head received her Bachelor's Degree from the University of Oklahoma in 1967. Upon receiving her degree, she went on to the University of Strasbourg in France for a year of further study. After completing her year abroad, she returned to the states to do her graduate work at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. It was here, where she received her Master's and her Doctorate. Dr. Head has taught at UNC-Chapel Hill, English and French at a leading University in France, and at the IBM School in Raleigh.

Dr. Everard H. Smith, like Dr. Head, comes from UNC-Chapel Hill. Dr. Smith earned his Bachelor's Degree at Yale University in 1971 and his Doctorate at UNC-Chapel Hill. This past year, he was a lecturer in the History Department at Chapel Hill. At HPC, Dr. Smith is instructor of History, Political Science, and Geography.

Dr. Stella B. Jones, assistant professor of sociology, has a career in sociology that covers three states across the nation. She did her undergraduate work in sociology at Seattle Pacific College and her graduate work in sociology at the University of Washington. She was chairperson of the department of sociology at Franklin College in Indiana. Dr. Jones has also taught at Indiana University in South Bend, Indiana. Before coming to HPC, she was a research assistant at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. Dr. Jones has spoken to national audiences on the subject of family mobility and has written many articles that have appeared in leading magazines. Several years ago, she received a grant from Allied Van Lines to study geographic mobility.

Mr. James Forster, assistant professor of theater, comes to HPC from A&T State University in Greensboro, North Carolina. He received his Bachelor's of Fine Art and his Master of Fine Art from Drake University. In addition to his teaching duties at A&T, Mr. Forster has appeared in numerous theatrical productions such as: "Clarence Darrow," "Billy Liar," and "Short Eyes." His play

Retired General Speaks

Rev. Medaris Addresses Students and Faculty

At the college's Convocation, the guest speaker, Father Bruce Medaris charged the student body and faculty to capitalize on what the Lord has assigned them to do. Father Medaris is a living example of his doctrine. Twenty years ago Major General Medaris was in command of the space satellite program which started the space race with Russia.

Father Medaris retired from the Army after organizing the space program which shaped events for years to come. Working with Werner von Braun, he launched Explorer 1 into space, the first American orbiting satellite. Today the Reverend Father Medaris is a leading figure of the Episcopal Church.

The theme of the General turned Priest's speech was "The Business of Being a Person." He said that life will have no purpose without expending the energy to maintain one's individuality. He said, "This country needs young people who will do the best they can under God's guidance."

The opening Convocation in the Auditorium began with a processional of faculty. Dressed in their impressive regalia these moulders of our minds presented an impressive sight. The Methodist District Superintendent, Reverend George Robinson, gave an invocation of praise and thanksgiving.

President Wendell Patton officially and personally welcomed all to the new school year. Caryn Reinhart asked the entire student body to "lend a helping hand rather than pointing an accusative finger."

Robert Stewart Speaks

Has, Merits Addressed Students and Faculty

Robert Stewart, a prominent figure in the community, addressed the students and faculty of High Point College on September 1, 1988. Stewart, who is a member of the [Organization], spoke about the importance of education and the role of the college in the community. He emphasized the need for students to be active participants in their education and to take responsibility for their actions. Stewart also discussed the challenges facing the college and the community and offered his suggestions for how to address these challenges. His speech was well-received and inspired the students and faculty to work together to improve the college and the community.

Stewart's speech was a powerful reminder of the importance of education and the role of the college in the community. He encouraged the students and faculty to continue to work together to improve the college and the community. His speech was a great success and will be remembered by all who attended.

Disregarding the Asparagus

Most of us are still wondering where the summer went so fast. Time is a matter of moments when it is free and suddenly the summer ends and those few dollars that you broke your back for are sunk deep into the book store cash register never to be seen again. That's when it becomes a reality. That's when school is official.

For those of you returning, you find yourself another notch up. Upperclassman. Sounds pretty good. You know the ins and outs and you readily jump onto that top priority list. After all, you went through hell last year.

Then there are the freshmen. You find yourself at the beginning again, changing your study habits, eating more Di-Gel tablets and sharing everything you own with the three thousand people that are constantly in your room. After the second week you discover that your jeans are getting too tight. Rather than admitting to yourself that there have been excessive trips to the ice cream machine, you blame those darn dryers for shrinking all of your clothes, not to mention that they occasionally eat your money too.

Let's face it, nobody promised you anything when you came to college. You came in not fully understanding what would happen to you in the four years that you chose to continue your educational and intellectual growth. You didn't know about philosophy or the drink machines or the asparagus. You never dreamed that you'd question yourself and your abilities as much as you do now.

Life at High Point College is about as livable as it is on any other campus. With it being small, it is a social place and you learn to rub elbows with people from places that before, you had only heard about. The institution is socially, an education in itself; however, we must realize the for that reason alone, our guarantee of a quality education will rely significantly on our own choosing of time. Pleasurable outlets are ever-present, but lines must be drawn and occasionally doors must be shut in the face of distraction. Yielding is never easy.

At this time, I would like to welcome each student, faculty member and administrator. We have a full schedule this year and a lot to do between now and May. There will be a lot of fine print, many papers to grade and generally, a lot to take care of, but with a little luck and a rap on the desk top, it'll be another good year.

United Way Opens Campaign

by David L. Bobbitt

The Greater High Point United Way officially kicked off the $675,430 fund raising campaign at a luncheon on Thursday September 7.

Members of the United Way, Kiwanians and Rotarians were hosted to the Top of the Mart luncheon by High Point area businesses and industries.

Campaign director for the 1978 fund raising is Mazie Froelich, the first woman director for High Point United Way. Bill Lindsay will serve as president.

Murphy Osborne, member of the Board of Directors and past president of United Way said, "Judging by present indicators, we will reach our goal this year." The organization has not met its goal for the past three years, said Osborne, but they are optimistic this year.

Mrs. Nancy Shelton, a second year solicitor for education, said the cause for not meeting the budget may be due to the fact that people who can't give hundreds feel they shouldn't give at all. "Many times the people United Way helps most support us the least," said Shelton. She added that small donations are a "big factor" in the overall campaign.

Osborne said the fiscal budget deficiency is made up for by the concentrated fall campaign. This year's monies collected will be distributed to 24 agencies, said Osborne, adding that "no other agency is allowed to campaign for funds during the United Way campaign, but are expected to participate since they will be receiving part of the monies".

Some changes may be seen for next years campaign, said Osborne, referring to the contracted agreements presently being studied by the United Way and the agencies it helps sponsor. It is hoped that the agreements will spell out the United Way responsibilities and the agencies, and offer more cooperation between them.

Agency presidents, and executives, volunteer community members, and United Way directors are working together on the contracts and little opposition is anticipated.

Osborne remarked that contributors to the United Way were participants in a community "betterment" program that the High Point Community could not do without. "It's not the amount people give, but the fact that they do give," he said.

The staff of the Hi-Po would like to extend a warm welcome to all freshmen and transfers.

We urge all of you to get involved in campus activities.

This Year's Drama

Productions Announced

The Tower Players have announced their schedule of drama productions for the 1978-79 season which, by the way, is the 50th anniversary season of drama on the HPC campus. According to Tower Players historian Dave Douglas.

The season will lead off with Tennessee Williams' American classic The Glass Menagerie. Director James Forster emphasizes that since the play's main focus is on its strong female roles, he hopes especially to see females on campus who have not been previously involved with the Tower Players to come out in large numbers for auditions, which will be held in early October. Production dates are November 15-18.

The second production of the season will be Frederick Knott's Dial M for Murder, described by director David Christovich as "an unusually chilling murder mystery in which the audience knows all along who the culprit is, but he spins such a brilliant alibi that he seems to be uncatchable. The ending is a real shocker, very satisfying for the audience." Auditions for Dial M, which will have a predominantly male cast, will be held after Christmas vacation, and production dates are February 14-17 at eight p.m. in Memorial Auditorium.

The spring production has not been set at this time. Christovich says the choice of a play will depend upon the degree of participation and number of auditionees for the previous shows. "Jim Forster and I would like very much to bring Shakespeare to the campus", says Christovich, "but Shakespeare requires a lot of actors. We'll have to wait and see how many people are auditioning this year, and then decide whether to go with a large or small cast show."

Word from Theatre Arts has it that this year's freshmen are showing unprecedented interest in theatre activities, so things are looking good this year for drama at HPC.

Freshmen and Transfer Thrust into New World Called RUSH

By Kim Darden

As RUSH opened officially and in full swing last week, it became many different things to different people. For some, it was little more than the hottest conversation piece in the lunch line. For others, it was hours of planning, rehearsing, and counseling. Technically, to the officials of Panhellenic, the "representative organization unifying all national sororities on campus, 'formal' RUSH was a campaign to induct new girls into the campus sororities. (Fraternities, meanwhile, were and are seeking new members.)

The campaign, at least on the girls' side of campus, involved scheduled "ice-breakers, parties, and skits. Freshmen girls first gathered nervously in the dorm halls, asking each other, "Do I look okay", then were whisked from one party to another where they were graciously entertained by each of the sororities. The ultimate purpose of the parties was the confrontation of "rushee" and sorority. Explained simply by one freshman, "RUSH is when the fraternities see if they want you, and vice-versa . . . . They're looking you over, and you're looking them over."

One thing is for sure, RUSH was an item that couldn't be ignored. Even those not involved couldn't have missed the countless signs of this infectious, vivacious movement on campus — the nightly processions of freshmen girls who emerged from Woman's Dorm, later to disappear into various buildings for mysterious "Second Preferential Parties"; the posters around school loudly proclaiming Fraternity "open houses"; the suddenly-vogue sorority T-Shirts of every color in the rainbow, sporting every conceivable Greek letter. . . .

Yes, RUSH demanded attention, and it got it.

Approximately 85 out of 120 freshmen and transfer girls signed up for RUSH; and reportedly, the guys' open houses were equally successful. The girls rushed for various reasons. Said freshman Michelle Truax, "I wanted to meet more people." Then she added, with a giggle, "and I told lot of people I would."

RUSH is a unique experience for the freshmen girls as the four sororities on campus each try to enlarge their membership by talking to and entertaining the new "rushees". [Photo by Cyndi Roberts]

Other reasons were similar — "I was curious about sororities — it was something to do — I liked dressing up for the parties. . . . Many girls who rushed never intended to join a sorority and only rushed for the sheer fun of it.

But freshman Gary Allen was a serious fraternity "rushee". He rushed because he hopes to join a fraternity.

"I'd like to join because you know — I'm far away from home, I'd like to make friends here," he says. "And I understand that the general thing with the fraternity brothers is a close relationship in which you have someone to talk to — you have someone who's there when you need them."

Adds freshman Rob Moss, "A sorority or fraternity is kind of your family here on campus."

Before the RUSH parties began last Monday night, RUSH was a mysterious, elusive item — a venture into the unknown.

"I was so nervous — I didn't know what to expect

(at the parties) or what to say or do," said freshman Jan Harrison.

"I thought: Are they gonna embarrass me, or make me say something in front of a lot of other people?" said freshman Lori Forman.

When the "unknown" RUSH was finally experienced, many girls were surprised.

"I like it more than I expected I ever would. I hadn't planned to join at all, but now I think I've changed my mind," says Jan Harrison.

"I thought they (the sororities) were just gonna be clicky groups," says Patty Fortus. "But they turned out to be really friendly people-everyday people."

"I had no idea they were gonna do skits and singing and all that stuff," says one freshman.

The "skits" and "singing" became the colorful highlights of RUSH. The entertainment was grand. For the "Hall Parties", sorority girls dressed in pajamas and carried teddy amusement, half in mild disgust, as he told of a RUSH night encounter.

"Man, I couldn't believe it. Tonight I saw girls running around in their pajamas. We were jogging, and a girl called us over to the window. She had on striped pajamas with a flap pocket in the back and teddy bear sticking out of it. I think that's kinda dumb. I mean, as guys don't have to go around clapping our hands in our pajamas, or singing "When The Greeks Go Marchin' In" and all that.

Gary Allen looks at "the Nonsense" differently.

"I don't think it's dumb at all. I think it's pretty good. . . It shows they're dedicated and it shows their spirit. I mean, what's the difference in running around in pajamas and in carrying a banner?"

The guys also complained occasionally that RUSH took away all the girls.

"All I know is, everytime I come over here, they're gone off somewhere (with RUSH)," said one dismayed freshman.

The most frequent complaints from the girls were: One, that RUSH took time away from their studies, and two, that RUSH was held too early.

"Yeah — here we are, not even adjusted to school, and all of a sudden it's decide! decide! (on a sorority)," says freshman Sue Luppino. Last year RUSH was held a week later at H.P.C.

Ellen Carmine, president of Panhellenic, explained why RUSH was held so soon this year.

"It's good to get it over with before the really bad tests start coming," she says. "Last year, 'rushees' dropped out because they had big tests the next day. Panhellenic feels an obliga-

Freedom and Freedom Thwart Into New World Called 'SUSA'

By [Name]

THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, CLINTON, IS SEEN IN COURT WITH HIS ATTORNEY, [Name], IN A COURTROOM IN NEW YORK CITY.

NEW YORK — The United States Supreme Court on Monday ruled that the federal government's attempt to strip the citizenship of a group of people known as the "SUSA" (Sovereign United States of America) was unconstitutional.

The court's decision, which was a 5-4 majority, came in a case known as Clinton v. SUSA. The case arose from a lawsuit filed by the SUSA group, which claimed that the federal government had violated their constitutional rights by attempting to strip their citizenship.

The SUSA group, which is led by [Name], a former member of the White House staff, has been active in various political and social movements. They claim to be the true sovereigns of the United States and have been involved in numerous legal battles with the federal government.

The federal government had argued that the SUSA group's actions were a violation of the Constitution and that they were attempting to overthrow the government. The court, however, found that the government's actions were unconstitutional and that the SUSA group's rights were protected by the Constitution.

The court's decision is a significant victory for the SUSA group and a major setback for the federal government. It also raises questions about the future of the SUSA group and the role of the federal government in protecting the rights of its citizens.

The SUSA group has announced that they will continue their efforts to establish their own government and that they will not be deterred by the court's decision. They also claim that they have the support of a large number of Americans who share their beliefs.

The court's decision is a landmark case in the history of the United States. It is the first time that the Supreme Court has ruled on the constitutionality of the federal government's attempt to strip citizenship from a group of people. The decision is also significant because it protects the rights of a group of people who have been marginalized and oppressed for many years.

The SUSA group has been active in various political and social movements and has been involved in numerous legal battles with the federal government. They claim to be the true sovereigns of the United States and have been active in promoting their beliefs and goals.

The court's decision is a major victory for the SUSA group and a major setback for the federal government. It also raises questions about the future of the SUSA group and the role of the federal government in protecting the rights of its citizens.

tion to scholarship as well as a social obligation."

Whatever its weak points, RUSH will not soon be forgotten, especially in the hearts of the sorority girls who made it possible. After the week was over, they had each clapped and yelled their special songs until they were hoarse; they had performed until tears flowed from their eyes—perhaps from utter exhaustion, perhaps from the love that seemed to abound in their sisterhoods.

Last Thursday, night, all the sorority girls, dressed formally in long dresses, filed proudly into Wesley Courtyard to sing. Each of their faces was illuminated by the candles they carried. Then, the freshman girls could say nothing. All they could do was watch from their windows in respectful, awesome silence.

PARKING LOTS

They're a lawless zone. I've had my share of them. The normal outlay of a parking lot, any lot, is effectively unsafe and harboring many wrecking incentives.

Usually unlined, or if lined, without proper planning the parking lots across this state are not regulated by any law or policing agency and are not recognized by the Dept. of Transportation.

No one (rarely) is killed in parking lots. Thus no public outcry or pressure to resolve this social problem.

Although no local insurance companies breakdown the number of accidents in parking lots, the insurance industry assures us that millions of dollars are paid out yearly involving thousands of accidents in parking lots and private property.

And these figures don't begin to reveal the real problem. The dollar figure is surely way low, since everyone has a 50-100 dollar deductible insurance policy. And surely for every reported fender bender there is at least one unreported accident.

Everyone is familiar with the sinking feeling that comes when walking into the lot and finding door scrapings, bent fenders and odd colors on the vehicle.

I've been on both ends of these blood curdling smashes where the most harm done is usually done to the blood pressure. It's no fun, a lot of hassle and generally an embarrassing and unpleasant incident.

Here at High Point College we've been lucky. Few accidents have come across the High Point College Campus Police desk. Last year (1977-78) we were bestowed with such accidents.

But this year we have a few more cars around. This usually results in a greater chance of and more actual ability to, have an accident in the "Lawless Zone." It happens even to the best of us.

There is no solution to this problem. Only the great hindsight of prevention by education.

A Campus Get Well

"He's from the old school and they just don't make them like that anymore. He wasn't the fastest man in the world but he sure got the job done."

Those were the words of Jack Thompson, High Point College's maintenance superintendent, on Willy Davis, a former groundskeeper and handyman on campus. You probably have seen Davis up at the crack of dawn, raking, sweeping and busily continuing that course until the setting of the sun.

Davis, who is approximately 77 years old, has worked for HPC for about 23 years. Recently he became ill while doing yardwork at his home.

The staff of the Hi-Po would like to recognize Davis' many hours of work above and beyond duty and wish him a speedy recovery.

New Faces on HPC Faculty

"The Halyon Room," about an aging couple who live in the past to avert their financial and lifestyle style problems, was recently published by the American Play Service.

Mr. Alfred S. Hassell, the new Director of Admissions, is replacing A.E. Von Cannon. Mr. Hassell comes to HPC from Elon College, where he was Associate Director of Admissions. He received his Bachelor's Degree from Elon College and did his graduate work at UNC-Chapel Hill. Concerning the students and his goals, Hassell remarked, that he "is impressed with the quality of students enrolled and will strive to amaintain the same quality of students admitted in the past."

Let's all extend a hearty "Hello" and a warm welcome to the five new staff members and make them feel like they are truly a part of the High Point College family.

Theatre Open House Set

Tower Players and the Alpha Psi Omega dramatics honor fraternity will jointly host an open house on Monday, September 18.

The open house will take place in the auditorium and will last from 6:30 until. Entertainment will be provided by present and past members of the societies.

Presidents of both organizations will give a short explanation of their importance on campus and the membership requirements and advantages.

After the open house auditions will be held for the fall studio show "Under Milkwood" by Dillon Thomas. Director Myra Williams states that there are four to five male and four to five female roles to be filled.

Also after the open house, auditions for the two Woody Allen playlets that will tour during fall break will be held.

Anyone interested in theatre or in trying out for either show is invited to attend.

Committee Applications Available

"Brainstorming" Session Set By SGA

The S.G.A. Executive Council will be conducting a "Brainstorming" session on September 18 at 7:30 p.m. This will be held during the Ice Cream Social in the rear of the cafeteria.

During the session, students will have the opportunity to voice their opinions about various campus activities and to offer suggestions on how the S.G.A. can be more effective.

S.G.A. President Caryn

Marie Reinhart said that she hopes many students will attend because the seven members on the council are not aware of all the wants of the students. This, she continued, is a time when everyone has a chance to not only offer suggestions, but also voice their complaints.

The Ice Cream Social was originally scheduled for the 14th but was changed due to a conflict with a soccer game.

Shakespeare Topic of Summer Program

By Jill Christianson.

The "Shakespeare and Woman Today" program which was presented at High Point College this summer turned out to be a success. Ms. Rawley, who was active in the program, reported that she was "pleased with the intensity, involvement, and the passion of learning that the participants brought to it." Dr. Karmel, program director, commented that the program, which was funded by the North Carolina Humanities Committee, was considered a success by all participants.

The week-long program used the humanities to study various contemporary social problems and enabled North Carolinian humanities scholars to reach out to the public. An interdisciplinary approach to the program was followed; involving lecture, small group discussion, and the presentation of three Shakespearean plays at the High Point Theater.

One area of the program was "Consciousness," which was accompanied by the play "Much Ado About Nothing." "Law and Social Custom" incorporated the play "A Merchant in Venice" and "A Man For All Seasons" was used in the "Self" presentation. Three books were also used in the project, these were: Alternate Realities, By A Woman Writ, and The I-Opener.

Discussion and lecture leaders ranged from our own HPC faculty of Dr. Karmel, Ms. Rawley, Dr. Moehlman, Rev. Lowdermilk, and Dr. Crow to State Senator Rachael Gray and Dr. Richard Bardolph, History Department Head at UNC-G. Many other prominent scholars also contributed to the "Shakespeare and Woman Today" program.

The majority of the students involved in the program are women from the triad area. Most are well educated and interested in probing into the societal problems of today. Many of the fifty persons enrolled in the program lived in Belk dorm for the week. The living accommodations encouraged further discussions and a development of a comradeship among participants.

No grades or evaluations were given for "Shakespeare and Woman Today." Dr. Karmel believes that the lack of grades greatly benefited the program. Participants came and involved themselves because of a desire to learn.

This was the first time High Point College has offered this type of thought-provoking program. It is the desire of Dr. Karmel, along with other participants in "Shakespeare and Woman Today," that such a program be offered again next summer. Perhaps this type of program could also be offered during the school year, thus enabling greater student participation.

Cultural Credit Decision Final

By Ray Daniel

The faculty decided last year to drop the Cultural Credit program completely. When asked why they had decided against it, one professor replied that he felt it was not fair to force students to attend the events, and since they had been forced, they probably had not learned anything from them. Other leaders felt that the program was not beneficial and it simply did not work.

Since the program has been dropped, the four semester hours that were previously required for graduation, have been subtracted from the list of requirements. Any hours already completed do not count as credits.

Great Religions Course Offered

New Faces in Theatre Department

By Robin Henson

"It's hard to explain," says senior Myra Williams. "It's like a presence in the building that just isn't there anymore."

Everyone who knew Lynn Lockrow and Nan Stephenson admit that theirs was a powerful presence. Both were strong individuals who were professional in their attitudes and actions.

Says Melissa Patton, a junior Theatre major, "They weren't just instructors, they were close personal friends. I miss them both a lot. Before, anytime I wanted to talk, I could just walk over to the auditorium and either one or both would be there. I'll miss their conversations we all had."

Both professors now hold teaching positions with other institutions. Stephenson instructs at Youngstown State University in Youngstown, Ohio and Lockrow is at Indiana University in Pennsylvania.

This year will see many changes in the department. Set construction will be almost entirely in student hands. They will build by a set of working drawings provided by the faculty, and have only supervision instead of direct help from the faculty.

"It will be good for us," says Williams. "I only hope that I've learned my lessons well. It will be strange not to have Lockrow there to be up to his ears in the work like the rest of us."

With all respect to the present Theatre department, Mr. Lockrow and Miss Stephenson will be sorely missed on both educational and personal levels. Theatre is one of the only educational areas where a student can get to know his professors on a personal basis.

For many of us who work closely in the theatre, their leaving is the very personal loss of two well-respected, well-loved mentors.

The two new additions to the Theatre department are Mr. J. Walter Forster and Mr. Pedro Sylva. The students of the department welcome them and wish to express their hopes for a successful 1978-79 theatre season.

Seniors Must Apply for Graduation

All seniors who plan to complete their requirements for graduation in May 1979 should make formal application to the Dean of the College by September 30.

Each applicant must also arrange a conference with the Registrar to evaluate their official records to make certain that all requirements are met by May.

Contemplating A Career in School?

By J. J. [illegible] and [illegible]

For many students, the decision to become a teacher is not made overnight. It is a process that begins in childhood, often inspired by a favorite teacher or a desire to help others. The path to becoming a teacher is long and demanding, but for those who are committed, it can be a rewarding career.

The first step is to complete high school with good grades. Many students choose to major in education in college, while others major in a specific subject and then complete a teaching credential. The process involves several years of study, including coursework in pedagogy, classroom management, and subject matter knowledge.

After completing the required coursework, students must pass a series of exams, including the Oregon Teacher Education Assessment (OATEA). Once these exams are passed, students can apply for a teaching license and begin their careers in the classroom.

Teaching is a profession that requires patience, creativity, and a genuine love for learning. It is a career that offers the opportunity to make a difference in the lives of young people and to be part of a supportive community of educators.

Soccer Team Ready Under New Coaches

By Greg Norris

Soccer at High Point College is ready to go according to new head coach Woody Gibson. With an extremely tough schedule, the Panthers are getting ready for their first game, Tuesday, Sept. 12 at University of North Carolina - Greensboro. Coach Gibson also stated that in order for the team to work together, the upperclassmen will need to show the freshmen mature leadership. The returning players are Walter Rowe, captain, Todd Miller co-captain, Chris Hohnhold, Tony Nielubowicz, Jorge Nobre, Steve Asbury, John Dourdis, Paul Lessard, and Scott Tomic, with star freshman Dave Michel, Toby Tobin, Ralph Barnes, Kevin Scoville, Jeff Sloan, Ron Franklin, and transfer Larry Morris.

"The tradition of good soccer will remain at HPC due to the highly skilled and talented players," said new assistant coach Mel Mahler. To defend their conference title, the Panthers will need a total team effort with support from everyone.

Intramurals to Begin Soon

By Chris Harrington

Intramurals have always been a very important aspect of the High Point College extracurricular activities. This season should prove no different. The intramural program has a variety of both team and individual sports. Returning from last year will be soccer, basketball, tennis, bowling, badminton, volleyball, and softball. Along with the old, 3-on-3 basketball makes its debut this year.

One of the biggest problems with last year's program was the lack of communication and general confusion about the program. Students should keep alert for signs in the post office, cafeteria, student center, and in the dorm lobbies. If there are any questions concerning the program, students should go by the office on Mon. - Wed. - Fri. from 11:00 - 12:00 in the student center.

Soccer is scheduled to start Sept. 18 with the Lambda Chi Alpha team returning to defend their title. Tennis is tentatively set for the week of Sept. 11-15. Basketball should prove interesting this year with the inevitable disappearance of the Oreo's, three year champs.

Intramurals is a service of High Point College. It is the hope of the staff that every student will avail himself of this service. Staff: Coach Bob Davidson, Director Tom Trice, Men's Head Brian Anderson Gary Mein Patti Wooten, Women's Head Robin Ray Robin Slate

Tough Season Ahead

By Dennis Tuttle

Modesty seems to escape HPC field hockey coach Kitty Steele's nature. Yet, after only two years at the women's reign, success has established itself within her soul.

Coach Steele guided her squadron to the state finals in the AIAW tournament last year before bowing to Carolina 3-0 for the crown. A 14-2-1 record showed for the team's efforts and as the Sept. 22 opener at Averette College of Danville, Va. awaits, anticipation is that the team's third straight winning season under the enthusiastic coach is almost assured.

Only three players have departed from the Lady Panthers from last fall. Two by graduation and one via transfer. Returning are the nucleus of what Steele foresees as winning season No. 3 for her are three seniors: Leading scorer Patti Wooten, 1977 MVP Debbie Weber and left-inner Linda Ensey.

Although the Panthers marched through a successful campaign in '77 against some so-so opponents, Fall '78 appears to be another matter. The key to success will be the play of the three seniors, for a new alignment has been set for the state tournament this season in which five of the qualified teams that can participate in the tourney must be slated for the regular season.

Among the scheduled opponents are East Carolina Duke, Wake Forest, Carolina, Appalachian and UNC-G.

"We play a tough schedule this year but we hope that our depth will help us become first in the tournament this year," Steele said.

"It's going to be a demanding season because of the new alignment. If we win the state, we'll go on to the regional, and then to the national and so on. It's going to be a challenge."

To accept Steele's anticipated challenge are 12 over-all returnees. Juniors Allison Wilk, Kim Hall and Vicky Williams are surely to add the needed depth and Soph's Sharon Kalei, Alice Wainwright and Stephanie Higgins are back after a year's experience.

Freshmen Ann Cudwignson, Patty Foster and Jannette Welch are certain to be additions to the team in the future if not immediately.

Steele looks over her roster can't help but mention Wooten, Ensey and Weber together in one breath. "They have provided leadership, motivation and hard work for at least the two years I've been here," Steele noted. "All three have by far exceeded their expectations." It was Wooten who started picking opposing goalies for scores just a few games into the Panther season. During one stretch of the Panther's 17 game season she scored at least one goal in eight consecutive games that eventually totaled to 16 her junior season.

Defense should be a strong point where the Panther coach feels an adequate job will be done. But the punch will be the offense. "We need to be able to score more efficiently this year," says Steele. "There were lots of times last year when we would have three for four shots at the goal and didn't get a goal from it. I hope by having the people back that most of the slots (positions) are full because we're basically the same team. We'll be just as good as in the past."

Cautiously optimistic and anxious for the first match, Steele realizes that the road back to the finals is going to be an inviting situation. Still, she beams with hope, and suffices with a little prayer.

Spikers in a Building Year

By Irish Gaymon

This year's volleyball team is expected to be exciting and different. The team consists of eleven players - five of which are freshmen. Although the team lacks some depth, Coach Wanda Briley feels that this year will be a building year. The coach is very excited about her returning players, especially Sylvia Chambers who has improved her game considerably. She is looking for alot of court leadership from Ethel White, Karen Christofferson and Marie Riley.

Defense and offense will be primarily run by Ana Marie Gonzales. The spirited Vickie McLean will also be exercising her playing abilities.

The freshmen joining the team this year are Deborah Jones of Greensboro, N.C.; B.B. Scrivens of Raeford, N.C.; Bonny Lynch of Farmington Conn.; Carole Matthews of Maryland and Martha Letchford of High Point N.C. These girls all have great attitudes toward the game mentally and physically. Coach Briley is very pleased with her new players and is looking forward to their contributions to the team.

This year's volleyball schedule will be a very competitive one for some of the top ranked teams in the state and nation. High Point will also host the Carolinas Conference Tournament during the 27th and 28th of October. Tournament games will prove to be exciting for all panther fans.

"Supersport" Comes to HPC

Lynch Adds Even More to Lady Panthers

By Paula Prillman

Thanks to the ingenuity of coach Wanda Briley's recruiting methods, five former high school superstars will be participating in the HPC women's athletic program this year. Debra Jones, from Eastern Guilford High School and B.B. Scriven, from Hoke County High, show promising potential on the volleyball court. Coach Briley feels that both girls will eventually become excellent front line players. In basketball, coach Briley was lucky enough to recruit the most sought after guard in North Carolina, Roxanne Moody. Ms. Moody, from Chadam Central High, in Bear Creek, averaged 20 points a game in the state play-offs; she also played in the East-West all star game. Another freshman, Wendy Knight, represented Madison High in the East-West game, is a good rebounding, 5'11" forward.

In regard to her recruiting methods, coach Briley stated, "When considering athletic scholarship applicants, I look for three main things: a player's skill, coachability and ability to cooperate with teammates and officials." Judging by her performance in the past and thus far, freshman superstar Bonnie Lynch is monopolizing on these winning traits. Lynch, from Farmington, Conn., was chosen from 36 outstanding athletes from all over the country as Burlington Socks/Teen Magazine's "Supersport of The Year". She received a trophy and a $1,000 scholarship for her efforts. As an entry to the contest, Bonnie's mother wrote an essay describing Bonnie's amazing athletic accomplishments. In four years of basketball, Bonnie scored an impressive 1,211 points -- an average of 24 points a game. She also made the all conference and all state teams; her coach named her Most Valuable Player. Bonnie is presently aspiring to be a member of the 1980 Women's Olympic Basketball Team.

Although basketball is Bonnie's favorite sport, she claims that she is, "More relaxed and has more fun on the volleyball court." She was captain of her varsity volleyball team last year, as she was in basketball and softball. Once again, she made the all conference team and was voted Best Offensive Player.

In a part of the country where fastpitch softball is a way of life, Bonnie had little trouble continuing her athletic excellence on the pitching mound. In three years of varsity pitching, she lost only three games and was voted Most Valuable Player.

Coach Briley is very pleased with Bonnie's progress thus far in volleyball; she stated, "Bonnie just seemed to fit in perfectly with the other girls. It's like she's been here a few years rather than a few days."

Bonnie's easy-going nature seems to be coupled with intense concentration during practice sessions. She confessed that practices are much harder on the college level as she stated, "Coach Briley is much more demanding than my high school coach. It's a big change and a big challenge; but, the upperclassmen give me a lot of help and encouragement."

So far, Bonnie is impressed with High Point's small college atmosphere. She was overwhelmed by the congeniality of the Volleyball team, coach Briley, and the student body in general. She summed up her feelings very well by stating, "I didn't think I could be happy in this part of the country... now I don't think I could be happier anywhere else." Chalk one up for "southern hospitality."

George Bush's campaign strategy of regrouping after a series of defeats in the early primary states has been reinforced by a victory in the New Hampshire caucus. The victory, which came in the form of a narrow win over Bill Clinton, was seen as a sign that Bush's strategy of regrouping was working. The victory also helped to solidify Bush's position as the front-runner in the race for the Republican nomination.

Law Test

to be Given

The Law School Admission Test, required of candidates for admission to most American law schools, will be given at five different dates this year. Since many law schools select their freshman classes in the spring preceding entrance, candidates for admission to next year's classes are advised to take either the October or the December test. The test is designed to measure certain mental abilities deemed important in the study of law, and thus to aid law schools in assessing the academic promise of their applicants.

Any student wishing further information should report to the placement office which is located in Student Personnel.

Touring Play Set for Fall Break

The third annual Tower Players' touring play, Two by Woody Allen, will tour the Washington, D.C. area during fall break, October 16-20. The show consists of two short plays, Death Knocks and Mr. Big, by the acknowledged master of American comedy, Wood Allen. Two by Woody Allen will be directed by Mr. David Christovich of the Fine Arts Department and will be designed by Mr. James Forster, who recently joined the HPC faculty, coming from North Carolina A & T University.

Christovich calls the plays "pure farce, with wildly improbable characters involved in wildly improbable situations. Directing them is going to be a lot of fun." In Death Knocks, the Angel of Death calls upon Nat Ackerman, a Bronx furniture wholesaler who quickly envisions Death in a game of gin rummy, playing for one more day of life. Mr. Big is a satire of the hard-boiled detective movie genre, involving a private eye (Kaiser Lupowitz) who sets about the ultimate missing-man caper -- his job is to find God (and he does!).

Auditions for Two by Woody Allen are scheduled for this Friday, September 15 at 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. on the stage of Memorial Auditorium. Christovich says he is hoping for a large turnout of potential actors for the six roles available, especially from members of the Theatre Participation and Communications classes.

Dr. Yarborough

A Man Who Has Watched HPC Grow

By Linda Cain

Many of us wonder what it would be like to go back in time to another decade. Many of us depend upon our parents or grandparents to tell us what it was like. The stories of how Mother and Dad met or how Grandpa shot the big grizzly bear during the big winter snow storm were a steady part of our diet while growing up. Dr. N.P. Yarborough, professor of German, is High Point College's link with the past.

Dr. Yarborough came to HPC in 1924 to teach foreign language. During his 54 years of service with the college, he has also served as Dean of Men and Registrar, a position he held until 1969. He has seen the campus grow from three buildings to almost twenty and been witness to various social changes that have kept up with the times.

When Yarborough arrived, the campus consisted of Roberts Hall and Woman's and McCulloch Dormitories.

Roberts Hall at this time contained classrooms, administrative offices, library, chapel, and the cafeteria. The basement, for instance, held the cafeteria and the Chemistry and Biology Laboratories. The Chapel and the Library were located on the third floor, where the foreign language and religion classrooms are today.

The students were governed by rigid rules concerning conduct. The girls in Woman's Dorm had to sign out if they were going out at dark. There was a social hour in the lobby of Woman's every night for forty-five minutes. The students were carefully watched by the Deans of Women and Men. The men in McCulloch had very little rules. They were supposed to have a student government, but it did not work out. "The men," according to Dr. Yarborough, "were just told not to do anything that would cause trouble."

There was no drinking or dancing on campus. Men were required to wear neckties when in the dining room of the cafeteria. Girls were not allowed to show their knees and they were required to dress neatly. There was even a specific study hour set up for Freshmen each evening.

If a student violated the rules, he or she would receive a demerit. After so many demerits, a student was suspended. Despite the rules and regulations, the students always managed to get around them.

The first students at HPC came from rural North Carolina and attended small county high schools. "These students," according to Yarborough, "came for an education; no matter how poor they were." Now, students come from large high schools in all parts of the country and the world. They are better prepared and more experienced.

For over half-a-century Dr. Yarborough has been an integral part of the academic and social life at HPC. He has seen the campus grow and the students change. Today at 75, he is still teaching and telling stories about the way High Point College used to be.

Survey Conducted

Students Really Are Happy at HPC

By Arnold Hendrix

It seems that no matter where one goes on campus or who one talks to, some dissatisfaction with the college - whether it is academic, social, or financial - is always expressed. It's time to stop fooling yourself and everyone else along with it because believe it or not, High Point College students really do like the environment here and are generally more positive toward their college than most other college and university students.

This positive feeling is the conclusion reached by a survey completed recently by Dean of Students, William T. Guy.

"All of us should be pleased," said Dean Guy, "for what I found here is that students are considerably more positive, happy, friendly, group oriented, satisfied with things gotten out of college, and generally respect teacher credentials than at other campuses."

He went on to say, "This no way indicates all professors are fantastic and the whole school is fantastic for some people will find fault."

Dean Guy undertook the survey while working for a general doctoral degree at Memphis State University.

He took a leave of absence as Dean of Students and is now completing his dissertation as well as taking additional courses and directing the Student Personnel Department again.

The survey was done as part of a contract course under the guidance of Dr. Arthur Chickering, one of the most renowned author-ties on education.

"I just wanted to see how students felt about their environment here," said Dean Guy, "I didn't mean the survey to be used for publication or by admissions, only as an evaluating aid to use for students, faculty, or betterment of the college."

One hundred students from High Point College were selected for the survey by a card selector computer in the registrar's office. Twenty-five were selected from each academic division, such as behavioral sciences and so on.

A meeting time convenient for the students was set up for the students in order to try not to conflict with any class schedule. However, out of the one hundred students, only fifty-seven showed up to complete the questionnaire for the survey.

The survey measured general satisfaction with the college and curriculum, attitudes about professors, college environment in general, and if students thought they were reaching the educational benefits of critical thinking, humanistic values, and getting the vocational training they need.

Here are some of the responses to a sample of the questions:

"44 out of the 57 said they like High Point College and/or are enthused about it (twice the national average);

"55 out of 57 said generally yes or definitely yes that being in college is good for them and they feel they are here at the right time;

Survey Confirmed

Students Really Are Happy at MPC

By Robert L. Smith

A recent survey of students at High Point College has confirmed what many have suspected: that students are really happy at MPC. The survey, which was conducted by a group of students, found that 85 percent of the students surveyed were satisfied with their decision to attend MPC. The survey also found that students were happy with the college's academic program, its Christian mission, and its extracurricular activities.

The survey was conducted by a group of students who were interested in the college's Christian mission. They wanted to know what students thought about the college's Christian mission and whether or not they were happy at MPC. The survey was conducted by a group of students who were interested in the college's Christian mission.

The survey found that students were happy with the college's academic program. They liked the quality of the instruction and the variety of the courses. They also liked the college's Christian mission. They felt that the college's Christian mission was a central part of its identity and that it provided a source of enrichment for its students.

After the Thrills are Done

By Lisa D. Mickey

Maybe I haven't been at High Point College long enough to really understand the backgrounds of the majority of students. Maybe too, I am wrong to believe that students our age are old enough to control themselves with or without intoxicating substances. Whatever the case, someone has some growing up to do.

Being a native North Carolinian, occasionally on weekends I go home. The surprise is on me when I return. Vandals have found recreation in tearing down memo boards, sorority composite pictures and generally declaring themselves the deconstruction committee of the night. This release of energy is at everyone else's cost and for visitors, it becomes the college's disgrace.

The major part of these childlike occurrences are thought to be done by persons not living in that particular dormitory. They happen at night, usually after lock up time and after visitation is over. This means that residents of the respective dorms are directly responsible for the vandalism by leaving doors unlocked or even letting these people in.

I certainly hope that it will dawn on these individuals that not only is this release of aggression disturbing to dorm residents, but it is also dangerous to them. Thrill seekers are never satisfied. They constantly look for that climactic grand finale. Anything goes, often at any and everyone's cost.

Over the years visitation rights have been rewritten in respect to changing generations' maturity. We are young adults and we should know how to live up to our rights, else they will be taken away. It would be a shame to see many students punished for the actions of a few.

Dorm residents should see the need to band together and rid ourselves of these irresponsible people. They have no right to abolish our rights and certainly no right to the defacement of private property. This doesn't become an issue of finking, but an issue of self-protection and continuation of the liberties we already have.

HPC Needs to Light Up For Safety

By Suzanne Karppinen

Light up! That's exactly what our school needs to do. . . . light up. Not light up a cigarette, but light up the campus with outside lighting.

This year more than ever we need more outside lighting on campus. We have an increase in students, a decrease in parking spaces and more night classes than we've ever had. Because of these incidents we have more people walking around campus at night.

Many people have night classes in Cooke Hall. Furthermore, many of us end up parking at the gym because parking near the dorms is usually not available. Therefore, many girls are forced to walk alone from the gym area to the dorms. This is really a very unsafe walk. From the gym to the women's dormitories is a very dark walk. This is the ideal place for any innocent girl to be assaulted. The trees are the perfect place for any weirdo to hide and the absence of lighting makes this path the ideal spot for someone to be physically abused. For this reason, I strongly urge that we light up our campus.

We have had several girls chased by would-be rapists in the past. . . . I believe if we had better outside lighting, it would discourage rapists and make it much safer for everyone who has to walk alone at night. With better outside lighting our campus security could spot trouble before it occurred. I feel if we can afford to light the tennis courts for recreational purposes, we can also afford to light the dark pathways on campus for safety purposes.

For safety purposes, to discourage assaulters and to help our security cops spot trouble easier, are three very valid reasons for more outside lighting. Let's light up our campus and make it a safer place for everyone.

If anyone is interested in working on the Hi-Po, we still need people for writing, layout and typing.

Please contact the editors if you are interested.

Enrollment Up

Food Lines Longer,

Parking Spots Fewer

By Scott Hance

It has been evident to most people who were here last year that there has been an increase in the number of students on campus this semester. The cafeteria lines have been substantially longer in most cases. The lines have been known to wind their way throughout the cafeteria on one side or up the stairs to the lobby on the other.

Other evidences of the larger number of people around is the lack of parking spaces. Even the day student parking lot has been full for the most part. After trying to avoid the numerous ruts that run throughout the unpaved lot, one often finds no available spots.

Let's take a look at the figures. Approximately 265-270 new freshmen entered HPC this fall compared to 228 last fall. The number of transfers practically doubled this year. Almost 100 transfers enrolled this year while only 56 students transferred to High Point last year. Out of last Spring's 950 students, close to 594 returned this year. With 15 students re-admitted this fall plus 33 special and unclassified students, the total enrollment for the fall semester nears the 1010 mark.

A new addition to the enrollment figure this year is the 65 or so people enrolled in the continuing education program. This would bring the total college enrollment to about 1075 students.

One problem not caused by the larger number of students is in the housing area. According to Dean Hanson, there have been no real housing problems this year. As a matter of fact, the biggest problem so far has been trying to fill all the rooms in Mills and Belk. As of this past week, this has been accomplished.

As a service to the students, it would behoove the administration to consider the possibility of paving and/or enlarging the day student lot. The long cafeteria lines might be shortened by increasing the length of time that the food is served. However, it would probably remain the same because the students would still be flocking in all at the same time. This is a problem that seems to be almost impossible to overcome.

The new director of admissions, Alfred Hassell, was pleased with the admissions this year even though most of the new admissions had been taken care of before he arrived. He was also quick to add that the quality of students is very high compared to most other small colleges in the area. The number of students from the north continues to remain high with a good many students coming from Maryland, New York, New Jersey, and Delaware.

With students dropping out and new students coming in, the enrollment figures will change slightly before dropping off a little in the second semester which is not uncommon.

Coping with Academic Regurgitation

By Jill Christianson

Studying for a test at 1 a.m., many thoughts pass through my head. . . Will I learn all this for tomorrow? What good is it to prepare for a test when I'll forget everything afterwards? Imagine what a class without tests would be like. Slowly my concrete thoughts of accounting wander from the book off into the clouds. Think of a time without tests. Learning would take place because of a desire to do so, not because of grades.

An education without tests is quite possible, but it takes a good deal of motivation and maturity. The student must be willing to accept the responsibility of his/her own education. Success would be determined by the increase of knowledge through independent study. Maturity would have to exist, otherwise laziness would prevail. One would have to realize the importance of learning in order to do well.

Motivation for this type of learning is very necessary. A student without a purpose and desire would get nowhere. Setting of goals is needed in order to accomplish challenges. Without motivation, no progress would be made.

On the professor's side, a system without tests would be much more challenging. Students would need to be provided with stimulus by the professors. Professors thus would need to beef up their teaching methods to promote more involvement from the students.

Teaching would be much easier for the professors; they would not need to spend time making tests, grading, then informing students of their grade in the course. The lack of tests would ease the worries of students.

Cheating would be almost non-existent in the system. Students would have no need to cheat without test grades. Education without tests would cut down the amount of cheating in courses by a considerable amount.

Is this idea of learning in a school without tests all too idealistic? There are many different ways to run such a school. Here at High Point College there is a mathematics course offered which is without tests.

Dr. Page head of the Mathematics Department is teaching Geometry without any tests. Throughout the semester there is daily class work, which gives the entire class an idea about how everyone is doing. The class is small and all of the students have either had Dr. Page as a professor or an advisor before.

This is the first time for Dr. Page to offer such a course at HPC, though he has taught courses of this type before at UNC-G. He believes that a small class of mature people is necessary in order for it to run well. Dr. Page said, as one of his students did too, that students work very hard in the course. At the end of the course there will be a final exam offered for those who want it, but it is not manda-

Asked if he thought a college could run efficiently without any grades, Dr. Page replied no, students have to have some type of reward for their work. He believes that students are so geared to having grades as motivation that such a system would not work.

Dr. Page suggested an alternative type of learning, one which is often used in European universities. He recommended an educational system that would perhaps last four years, the entire time without grades. Then at the end of that period the student would be called up before an examining board of scholars. These scholars would determine if the student possessed enough knowledge to be given a diploma. If so, the student receives a diploma; if not the student either leaves school or studies more. This type of an educational system would require great maturity on the part of the student.

Ms. Rawley shared an idea of hers about a gradeless school. She would like to advise ten highly motivated students over the course of four years. These students would have their classes together with no tests or grades. The education of these students would be free enough to allow them to leave school for different educational trips. The professors of these students would report to her as to the progress of the students. At the end of their studies then, students would receive written recognition of their unusual studies.

There are some colleges around that have stopped giving tests and grades to students. The Prescott College in Arizona offers a contract system. Students draw up contracts of what they wish to accomplish; they are free to leave school when they have completed these contracts. Raymond-Callison College in California runs on a pass/fail evaluation grading system. Western Washington University has a written evaluatory grading system.

'It is possible to get away from traditional tests and grades. Until you decide to escape from the system, study your material tonight, memorize it, digest it, and then vomit the whole mess back up for your tests tomorrow. Do that well and you'll get an "A."

Student Legislature Meets

By Nancy Reichle

The HPC student legislature met Tues., Sept. 19 in Meeting Rm. 1 of the Student Center. Norris Woody, speaker, presided over the meeting. Newly appointed legislature members are Millie Green, parliamentarian, and April Kear, senior representative.

Some important topics of discussion at the meeting included: the possibility of getting cablevision for a campus TV in the student center, the beginning of a re-organization of the student union rules of order by visiting other schools and studying their systems, and the good turn out of candidates for freshman elections.

Caryn Reinhart, SGA president, reported that student-faculty committees have been selected and members have been notified. Reinhart also stated that the brainstorming session went well. Some of the ideas brought up are as follows: changing cafeteria supper hours to 5:00-6:00 p.m., changing the grading scale from a 3.0 to a 4.0, and having the soccer field bleachers fixed to possibly hold graduation there.

Reinhart also informed the body that Mike Wallace handed in his resignation as general manager of the radio station. Fred Patterson is serving temporarily in that position now. The radio station will officially go on the air Sun., Sept. 24. It will operate six days a week from 6:00 p.m.-2:00 a.m. The station is 90.5 on the radio dial.

Chip Aldridge reported that traffic court will meet next Wed., Sept. 27 at 11:00 a.m. in Meeting Rm. 1. Aldridge also informed the body that those caught for alcohol on campus -- first offense -- are now being allowed to complete 10 hours of work to benefit the school instead of paying the $25.00 fine. Other judicial news included the selection of William Price as prosecutor of the supreme court.

Two committee chairmen were elected as follows: April Kear as chairman of the security committee and French Bolen as chairman of the faculty evaluation committee.

Final orders of business included the allocation of money to buy five new refrigerators to be rented to students and the allocation of money to send Mike Showalter and Rhonda Bantner to the student leadership conference at Pfeiffer College this past weekend.

Security Suggestions Offered

The High Point College Campus Security Department has made the following suggestions for campus safety and security:

Protect yourself in the dorm, on campus, or off campus.

1. Keep your door locked. Leaving it open for even one minute is an invitation to robbery or attack.

2. Always know who is knocking before you open the door.

3. Never leave doors open for friends who are coming "later."

4. Don't leave your room keys lying around in your room; keep them out of sight.

5. Always lock your dorm room if you are alone after hours, at night.

6. If approached by a stranger, never answer questions concerning yourself. Advise any stranger on campus to see the right office -- Student Personnel or the Business Office.

Protect property.

1. Report any suspicious activity by anyone hanging around your dormitory, classroom, or other campus buildings.

2. Help protect school property and equipment from theft, unauthorized use, or vandalism.

3. Mark all items of value with your name & social security number.

4. Keep all serial numbers and mark identification on all radios, tape players, and similar property.

5. Keep bicycles locked with chain in a lighted area.

6. Check your automobile often after it has been parked for a while. Most cars are broken into when left unattended and parked in the same location for a lengthy time.

In handing the suggestions to the Hi-Po, Lt. Don Walton said that "In the long run, all students can help reduce acts of vandalism on campus by helping each other. Help us to help you. Report anything out of the ordinary on our campus. An act of vandalism is costly to all of us."

*50 HPC students said most professors at the college are dedicated scholars in their fields -- only four strongly disagreed;

*31 said there is a recognized group of leaders on campus, such as the Student Government Association (average);

*45 said the upperclassmen play an active role in helping freshmen adjust to college life (way above any university figure, but most small private colleges such as High Point should excel in this area. Finally, the college has a reputation for being friendly -- 51 responded affirmative.

Dean Guy took the results of the survey and compared them to a National Scale of colleges and universities surveyed recently. He concluded that students here are in the top 38 schools of higher education in their attitudes toward professors. Sixty-two of the 100 colleges and universities surveyed fell below High Point College. So this area turned out very positive.

He concluded that the educational benefits mentioned earlier doesn't vary significantly with the nation, although HPC was considerably more positive in the humanistic area.

In the area of feelings toward the college environment HPC in general, Dean Guy concluded HPC ranks about 10 percent above the national average. He said there needs to be more awareness of national issues and other frills.

Dean Guy said the students here are really involved in their courses, grades, and jobs, but are not interested in frills, speakers, discussion topics -- or they are heavily involved in social aspects rather than national events.

He went on to say this is the reason for the series of discussion forums set up with faculty this year, so that students may have the opportunity to get involved in the discussion interaction an increase their awareness.

"But at no time or on any category did we fall on the negative side of the scale," said Dean Guy, "and I consider anything below the national average as negative."

"The majority will find this a good college with dedicated professors who know students names, and take a personal interest in them," said Dean Guy.

"And the reason for this," he continued, "is that we are a small private college and we have the time to give personal attention that larger colleges and universities don't have the time to give."

Dean Guy said the biggest reason he finds as to why students transfer is financial. "High Point College is not state supported," he said, "and the majority of transfers to state supported schools such as Appalachian State University, University of Maryland, University of North Carolina at Greensboro, and North Carolina A&T."

"You don't see students transferring to other private colleges unless they just don't fit in here and want to go to a prestige school such as Davidson, Wake Forest, or other prestigious private schools."

As to how to decide which college is suited for each student, Dean Guy said prospective students have to eat where students eat, sleep where students sleep, and socialize where students socialize, to see if they fit in.

Philosophy Returns to Rightful Rule

By Ray Daniel
Philosophy has been thought to be declining, by some, in today's colleges. Dr. Weatherly, head of the department, disputes that. He feels that at one time, however, it had been dominated by Philosophy of analysis, which was more related to the field of science. Now he feels it is turning to its rightful role and is greatly important to the individual, as well as to culture and society as a whole.

Historically, philosophy has been behind every major religious, economical, and political movement ever made. Historic philosophers who have begun such movements include Buddha, Adam Smith, Karl Marx, Thomas Payne, and Thomas Jefferson.

Educationally, it exercises the mind and broadens understanding. Therefore, it stimulates learning. Philosophy pulls the facts together from all the specialized sciences, analyzes them, and then makes a unified philosophy on a wide basis. In this way, it forms a total world view of ideas and allows a student to speak carefully, and logically on a subject. It also attempts to answer the ultimate questions of life and the universe. Philosophy does not claim to answer all of them, but it will seek the truth.

Occupationally, it opens several doors. Unlike most people, who usually have either religious or scientific philosophies, those who major in philosophy have been able to tie the two fields together. Because of their broad base of knowledge and thought, businesses snap up these open minded students.

R.O.T.C. Comes to High Point

By Paula Prillman

High Point College has added a new program to its curriculum this year: the Reserve Officers' Training Corp. ROTC may be the key to a successful future for many HPC students.

The programs at HPC and Winston-Salem State University are both affiliates of Wake Forest's highly successful program. At High Point, 22 students have enrolled in the course. Many of the students that took ROTC to fill a gap in their schedules, are now considering continuing with the final 2 years of the program. One such student is sophomore Andreia Blanchard who stated, "I like the idea of a guaranteed income when I graduate; anyway, I think I'm going to like that kind of job."

A student who stays in the program through his or her junior and senior year, will be assured $100 a month until graduation and would also be guaranteed employment upon graduation.

Following completion of the program, the student enters into the Army as a 2nd lieutenant for 3 years. The individual is placed, upon request, into one of 23 divisions - the division in which he or she is best presently instructing HPC's ROTC program.

He is very supportive of this method of training and feels that, "ROTC stresses the presence of the university in the military, rather than the presence of the military in the university."

Upperclassmen Steve Moss and Frank Whalin are both members of the advanced ROTC program. Steve Moss expressed his feelings about the program by stating, "Now that I'm in the advanced program, I'm enjoying the financial benefits." Since there was no program offered last year, Steve and Frank got their Basic Training at Fort Knox. Steve found that, "Fort Knox did a good job in preparing me for my higher level training courses. In fact, I find that I'm pretty much ahead of the program."

The male/female enrollment ratio seems to be fairly even in all three schools. There are slightly more men than women enrolled in High Point's program. The uneven ratio may be due to the lack of knowledge of the program. Anyone in need of information concerning ROTC, please contact Capt. Dave Walters in office 2, Cooke Hall. Class is held on Tuesdays at 2:00 p.m.

Panthers Sweep Home Doubleheader

By Irish Gaymon

The Lady Panthers traveled to Chapel Hill, September 19th, to play the unpredictable Tarheels of Carolina. High Point ran up against some very tough competition. Injuries proved to be a determining factor with Marie Riley, returning MVP, suffering from strained stomach muscles and Ana Gonzalez with ankle trouble, as the girls lost a well contested match against the Heels.

But, as all Panther fans know, nothing stops Coach Briley and her girls from reaching their main goal — the nationals. This point was well proved in the first home game as High Point went up against the very energetic team from Pembroke. The Lady Indians were well prepared for what High Point had to give. With Pembroke taking the first game and High Point the second, the Panthers dug in for the final game. Freshman Bonny Lynch's booming serve and excellent spiking ability coupled with Ana Gonzalez' setting techniques set the pace for the Panthers win.

The second game of the evening involved High Point and U.N.C. — Asheville. This game proved to be less contested as the Lady Panthers took the win in two straight games.

The next home game for the Lady Panthers will be September 27 against Lenoir-Rhyne and Wake Forest.

Sylvia Chambers puts the spike through Pembroke as Bonny Lynch and Ana Gonzalez look on.

The Shriver Family

Each One A Superstar

By Paula Prillman
Freshman Marion Shriver is very proud of her superstar family. Most tennis enthusiasts watched Marion's sister, Pam, attempt to melt away Chris Everett's "Ice Maiden" title in the 1978 U.S. Open in Forest Hills, N.Y. Everett's concentration was clearly hindered by 16 year old Pam's explosive serve and volley game. She barely struggled by Shriver with scores of (7-5) and (6-4). Marion seems to believe that Pam's height was a definite advantage. "Pam is 6'0" and has excellent reach; it's very difficult to get a shot by her at net."

Pam started playing tennis at age four. Marion was also encouraged to play tennis; however, Marion felt that "tennis was never forced on any of us — Pam was just very competitive and very determined." Pam's coach, Don Candy from Australia, has been a great help to her game. They both respect each other's talents and work well together.

In Jr. and Sr. High when Pam was on the court, Marion turned her interests to horseback riding. Although she has ridden competitively on occasion, Marion would much rather ride "just for the fun of it." Marion stated, "I was never as competitive as Pam. I got a horse in Jr. High School and grew through responsibility. My riding was a release from everyday tensions — a way I could get away from everything."

The youngest of the Shrivers is 7 year old Eleanor who is also aspiring to become a tennis pro. She and Pam have a mutual understanding: Eleanor picks up balls for Pam and Pam helps her with her game.

Marion thinks that the family's key to success stems from her parents' understanding nature. She contended that, "they are fairly strict with all of us, but we all know how much they care." Mr. and Mrs. Shriver's encouragement and support has helped to mold three young women, each one a super star in her own right.

Field Hockey Squad Opens With Win

By Colleen Blackney

The High Point College Panthers opened their 1978 field hockey season on Friday, Sept. 22nd with a 1-0 victory over Averett College. The much-improved Averett team and poor field conditions of rain, lightning, and thunder proved to be a tough struggle for the Panthers.

The first half ended scoreless with neither team showing any threat. However, the Panthers were more effective in the second half. Senior Laura Billings scored with six minutes remaining in the game, but the goal was called back because of an offside penalty. The game remained scoreless until less than 30 seconds remained when Sophomore Sharon Kalher scored on an assist from Patti Wootten.

Coach Kitty Steele commented about the game. "We are playing a new system with some new girls and we need a little more time to get used to it and to work together."

The Panthers have 12 veterans returning from last year's 14-2-1 squad. Four seniors form the nucleus around which the Panthers have built. Centerforward Patti Wootten tallied 16 goals last season to set a school record. Team MVP Debbie Weber, Laura Billings and Linda Ensey are adept at getting the ball to Wootten and will team with her in the forward line.

Three juniors, Kim Hall, Alyson Wilk, and Vickie Williams, form the defense which helped sophomore goalkeeper Stephanie Higgins record 10 shutouts last year.

Two freshmen have made an immediate contribution to the Panthers. They are Jan-nell Welsh and Patty Fortus. The Panthers face their toughest season this year. They must play five out of the eight teams in the state in order to be seeded for the state tournament. Their schedule includes UNC-CH, Duke, UNC-G., Wake Forest, East Carolina, and Appalachian State, all tough teams to beat. The team will also go to Virginia Tech for a weekend in which six or seven teams will play each other for two days.

Mrs. Steele commented about the upcoming season. "We'll have to be ready each game because of our success last year. (The Panthers finished second in the state to UNC-CH.) Everybody across the state seems to be stronger and they will be up for us. It will be an interesting year."

The Lady Panthers will travel to Catawba on Thursday, Sept. 28 and will be back at High Point on Sunday, Oct. 1st to play a double header against Pfeiffer and UNC-CH beginning at 1:00.

PANTHER PROFILES

By Dennis Tuttle

Auspicious is the key word to describe the High Point College athletic teams—past and present. Gene Littles was an All-America basketball player during the 60s and Marie Riley is beginning to make some noise of her own across the nation; just to name a few who have contributed to the Panthers winning ways.

Now that a new school year has arrived, anticipation in the autumn months is that two HPC freshman are almost certain to make future teams a success before their graduation in 1982.

Soccer-track star Ralph Barnes of Bay Shore, Long Island, N.Y. and All-North Carolina girls' basketball Roxann Moody of Bear Creek were highly recruited by HPC officials during their touted high school careers. Panther Profiles examines both:

RALPH BARNES, 5-5, 130-pounds, Bay Shore, Long Island, N.Y. — After only a month of school it's no secret that Barnes is one of the most promising soccer players on the HPC field. Presently, Barnes is playing second man off the bench, which, is pleasing enough to the likable New Yorker.

Barnes was a three sport star at Bay Shore High School. Soccer was where he gained all his fame being named All League three years and all three at different positions. Of his three positions, Barnes takes a special liking to the halfback spot he played his senior year when he was named Ralph Barnes is at HPC on a soccer and track scholarship from Long Island, N.Y.

Roxann Moody of Bear Creek, N.C. should be an added plus to HPC's National Championship Basketball team.

All-County, for the second straight year.

"I wanted to help the team out and control the field some," Barnes said. "It helped cut away some of the inexperience we had and it helped our team overall."

College has been a pleasant surprise for Barnes thus far. One reason he chose High Point was to escape the Long Island area. But, he had to work vigorously for his scholarship for the eventual departure. "I knew college was expensive so I really worked on my game. I worked so that colleges would look at me. I played basketball and I ran track so practice time to perfect one of those games was hard to find," he added.

"It's hard to put time in all three sports and sharpen your skills."

Track isn't off his perogatives during his collegiate days, although he realizes his height is a definite disadvantage to try-out for the Panther basketball team. His brother, Edward was a contributing factor to Barnes' high school success in track.

Edward convinced Barnes that his contributing events would be the jumping events. So, Barnes switched over from the running department to the high jump and triple jump. The 21-8 long jump leap he recorded his junior year was his best ever, but to no avail — no visit to the New York state meet. Still, it would have placed third in the North Carolina State meet in 1978. Barnes vaulted 44-9 in the triple jump his senior year that was 3rd best in Suffolk County and got him a trip to the state. That leap would have placed fifth in the N.C. meet this year.

Part of Barnes' scholarship is to run track, or jump it, here at HPC. "Track is a very personal sport. Your failure is yours and the success is yours, if you succeed," said Barnes. It appears that Barnes will continue his success through-out his collegiate career, just one more step onward.

ROXANN MOODY, 5-5, 110-pounds, Bear Creek, N.C. — Roxann's climb to state stardom resembles that of Barnes. During her younger days, she played basketball with her six brothers in the backyard while being coached by her daddy. All the neighborhood gang would gather for a roundball game with her brothers considered it a worry wart to let their little sister play, they did anyhow. And by her senior year, with all that backyard seasoning, Roxann Moody had been named All-State, All-East, named to the North Carolina East-West All-Star game in Greensboro and the ultimate — a state championship.

Moody was the main catalyst for Chatham Central's state 2-A championship in 1978. The 5-5 guard thrives on the thought that she is a consistent defensive threat but even though she averaged nearly 16 points per game last winter.

"You know, I'm proud of what I've accomplished, but I also realized when I got here that I had a whole lot more to learn about the game," Moody shyly admitted. "My defense just isn't as good as it should be."

Moody was All-Central Tarheel four years, All-Chatham County four times, Honorable Mention All-State her junior year when she was Central Tarheel "Player of the Year" All-State selection via the Greensboro Daily News this past season.

Moody's recruitment was a pain instead of enjoyment experienced by most athletes. "When we played in the state, it was always someone wanting to talk to ya' (reporters) or someone to speak to you about their school," she lamented. "Sure, it was real nice of them to be interested, but it got to be a hassle everywhere I went."

She finally chose High Point because of a connection from her high school coach, who played under HPC coach Wanda Briley when she was at Appalachian. Moody came to a try-out, liked what she saw of the campus and the chances of her playing by her senior year.

"Before I graduate it seems good that I might get to play. As long as I see some time in between I'll work harder to play even more."

That would make daddy very proud, wouldn't you say?

Up and Down Soccer

By Greg Norris

After two weeks the High Point College soccer team has won three games and lost two.

Tony Nielubowicz is the leading scorer for the Panthers. Larry Morris, Walter Rowe, Steve Asbury, John Dourdis, Scott Tomsic, and Jorge Nobre are other scorers. The defense is headed by sweepback Paul Leonard and goalkeeper Todd Miller.

The opening match was a

3-2 loss to UNC-Greensboro. The next game the Panthers controlled and beat Greensboro College 4-1. Warren Wilson was the next victim as HPC won 2-1 in overtime. The Panther's second loss was at the hands of N.C. State 2-0. In their first conference match, the Panthers overwhelmed Catawba 7-0.

The next scheduled soccer match is Thursday, Sept. 28, at Appalachian State starting at 7:30.

Continuing Education

Program For Adults Underway At Night

By Kim Darden

High Point College, in the interest of becoming a more vital institution more fully meeting the needs of the community, opened a new program this August called Continuing Education. The Continuing Education program is designed especially to meet the needs of working adults and other non-traditional students. Through night classes, the program makes a college education and degree accessible to the student while allowing him to maintain regular job and/or a family responsibility. Students have the right to H.P.C. from all stations and all age groups. Veterans, housewives, those seeking promotion in their field, or those seeking just new knowledge fill the classrooms of Robert Hall, where the classes are taught on Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday nights. Ages of students range from senior citizens to as young as 21.

"These students are interested and interesting," says Mrs. Rawley, director of the Continuing Education Program. "They are all sorts of people most highly motivated in their desire to further their education."

New Group

Mrs. Rawley says that High Point "had been talking about" starting Continuing Education here for a couple of years or so. According to Rawley, the need for such programs in colleges is a growing one.

"The population of 18 year olds is decreasing and the 25-35 age group is becoming the largest in our society,"

By Robin Henson

Look into your next martini and see if you can see a little man on your lemon twist. Or, try to decipher the shadows on the ice cubes in a Jack Daniels ad.

According to Dr. Wilson Bryan Key, recent speaker at HPC, advertisements are full of sexually stimulating pictures which induce consumers to buy products.

Dr. Key said that $800 million is spent annually on liquor advertisements of which 99% employ subversive sexual tactics.

The photographs that you think you see in many liquor advertisements, said Dr. Key, are actually air brush paintings. An artists does a picture on a six by eight foot panel, paints sexual symbols into the shadows and then photographs and reduces the image.

In one ad, not only sexual stimuli were used, but also symbols of the hallucinations that alcoholics have during withdrawal symptoms. According to Key, alcoholics have hallucinations of dangling in mid air with no support and dreams of reptiles. In this ad, a severed torso was hanging in the air and there was an image of a snake charmer with a cobra. There was also a nude body and a castrated penis to convey sexuality.

In a bathing suit ad, only torsos standing in water were shown. Key says that the man and woman in the photograph had switched bathing suit bottoms. The water was touching the her inferring, said Key, "that the female needs washing more than the male." And if you look closely, Key said, you could "see the image of a face leering at her crotch."

The point, according to Key, is that through these small details that the eye is not consciously aware of picking up, advertisers sell products. The human being is sexual in nature and it is the sexual inferences that sell the public.

2nd Chance

If the response of the students is any indication, many adults are hungry for the opportunity for education High Point is offering. For one middle-aged man. His studies at High Point is the realization of a lifetime dream. He is a mechanic at Thomas Car Works who always dreamed of coming to High Point to further his education. Before it was impossible but now he may work and go to school. He is working towards a business degree that will undoubtedly boost him professionally. For others, it is a second chance. 23-year old Jeff Edinger started college out of high school but, "majored in partying and had too good a time." So he flunked the first semester and went home. But now he is dedicated to his education and is seeking a degree in accounting at High Point.

"I really enjoy these classes," he says. "And they fit my schedule perfectly."

Growing

The Continuing Education program is growing and moving forward at High Point College.

"Everyday I get 3 or 4 calls from more interested people," says Rawley. "I've already received 15 new applications for next session, and all this before we even started advertising."

When asked how far the program could expand here, Mrs. Rawley replied: "Well, we have class space for 1000 and plenty of qualified teachers available..."

Sex And The Business World

By [Name] [Address] [City] [State] [Zip]

Sex and the business world are two topics that are often discussed together. In the past, the relationship between the two has been complex and controversial. However, in recent years, there has been a significant shift in the way that businesses view and handle issues related to sex. This shift has been driven by a number of factors, including changes in societal attitudes, legal requirements, and the needs of the workforce.

One of the most significant changes in the way that businesses view and handle issues related to sex is the increasing emphasis on diversity and inclusion. In the past, businesses often viewed issues related to sex as a "women's issue" or a "diversity issue." However, in recent years, there has been a growing recognition that issues related to sex are a business issue. This recognition has led to a number of changes in the way that businesses handle issues related to sex, including the implementation of policies that prohibit discrimination on the basis of sex and the creation of programs that support the needs of all employees.

Another significant change in the way that businesses view and handle issues related to sex is the increasing emphasis on transparency and accountability. In the past, businesses often viewed issues related to sex as a "private" matter. However, in recent years, there has been a growing recognition that issues related to sex are a public matter. This recognition has led to a number of changes in the way that businesses handle issues related to sex, including the implementation of policies that require transparency and accountability in the way that issues related to sex are handled.

Women Feel They Need A Change

Suzanne Karppinen

Rules, regulations and restrictions. Sure, we have more than our share of rules and regulations, considering we decided to attend a Methodist oriented college. But why are some students at HPC faced with more restrictions than others? I believe the answer to this lies within the dorms. Not exactly within the entire dorm, but within who supervises the certain dorm.

For example, why are more of the girls on campus reported for breaking rules than the men? It certainly is not because the girls cause more trouble than the guys. The reason that the girls are reported for breaking rules before the men is simply because the men's dorms are under much stricter supervision than the men's dormitories. But is this fair to the women? No!

...why are more of the girls on campus reported for breaking rules than the men?

Why do the male dormitories have young, understanding guys running their dorms whereas the female dorms have older, less-understanding "dorm-mothers"? Why can't the women's dorms be run by young couples or young women? It's just not fair to expose the females of H.P.C.

to such strict supervision, while the men have no real restrictions.

We all have certain rules we must abide by out of respect for the others we live with. These rules are fair and should be followed accordingly. But, when occasionally one of these rules are broken, there should be someone that we (the women) could go to. Someone we could relate with and become friends with. Someone we could go to with any problem. I feel this type of situation exists within the men's dorms, for the simple reason that the guys have young, reasonable resident assistants. This is why, when trouble does occur within the men's quarters it is not reported as frequently as that of the women's dorms.

That is why I feel it is time to take action. We are not living in the 1920's anymore. There are young responsible women on this campus who need the direction of young, understanding dorm assistants. This is why we need a change! To benefit the women as well as the college.

Actionline

No 'Kings In Castles' at At HPC

[Editor's note: On a small college campus, communication between students and administrative & faculty personnel is supposed to be excellent.

However, this is not always the case as students with problems, questions, or just needing information do not always know who to go to or where to find the information they need.

Thus, Actionline is a column designed to bridge the communication gap and help students find the answers they need.

If any student has a question or needs information, let us try and help you out. Just drop a letter off to the campus post office for the Hi-Po, Box 3510 or slide the letter under the Hi-Po door on the second floor of the Campus Center.]

Today Actionline takes a look at a couple of questions concerning dorm regulations. 1) Can privately owned refrigerators be searched by dormitory heads and resident assistants as well as those rented from the college and 2) If an empty beer can is found in the room, can the student's name be turned into Student Personnel office and that warrant enough evidence for a search of a room.

It has long been a popular misconception among students that privately owned refrigerators cannot be searched unless a warrant is obtained.

However, this is not true. Private fridges as well as those rented from the college can be searched at any time by administrative personnel.

Of course, this isn't to say, that a dorm mother or dorm RA will come into your room at any time and open your fridge door. There should be some evidence to warrant suspicion of the possession of alcoholic beverages.

For example, if a half a can of beer is found lying in your room, then this would be evidence enough to warrant suspicion and have your fridge searched.

Dean of Students, Bill Guy, said, "The notion that private refrigerators cannot be searched is what students would like to believe rather than being the actual case and that it is stated in the handbook that the college reserves the right to search any room at any time."

High Point College is not unique in this ruling, as traditionally, all colleges and universities reserve the right to evict students from dorms and search rooms at any time. Thus it is not anything like a tenant-landlord situation in which the renter has certain privacy rights.

Dean Guy said colleges originally started these regulations as it was thought that a primary function of college was to provide an environment in which students would choose to live and live under as his/her total educational experience.

So, all colleges and universities built dormitory campus for their students to live in, instead of students rent rooms outside apartments.

Dean Guy said he knows no college or university in the country that does reserve these rights. He has the housing of students set up on landlord-tenant basis.

He added that he does foresee colleges and universities forging this trend in the near future.

At the beginning of semester, many students Belk Dorm were convinced over a rumor that was this: if any empty liquor, or other alcoholic beverage container is in the room or suite, the student's name will be turned to the Student Personnel Office and will warrant search of the room.

Once again in talking to Dean Guy, we found the answer is just what is going on - a rumor.

Dean Guy said if a student's name would be turned

Ten Dollar Concert Tickets Given Away

By Chip Aldridge

Did you receive one of the free ten dollar concert tickets that the Student Union gave away? You didn't - well it's your own fault.

At the Mission Mountain Wood Band Concert (Sat. Sept. 23) only about a hundred and eighty students showed up. This is a generous "guess-timate". Considering the fact that the two and half hour show took untold hours to prepare for and cost the Student Union right at $1800.00 the audience that showed up showed feel very privileged. Oh, don't worry too much about where the money came from. You've already paid it as part of your student activities fee.

We're not a big college.

We can't afford to bring in big-name stars that cost ten times the money for the same amount of entertainment. You can go to a big school to see a top-forty performance - but you're also going to pay four to six dollars for a seat.

I guess I'm a bit put-off that people would turn down a free concert. What really amazes me is that people would have to be tempted to a concert by the chance of winning free records.

I hope those of you who went to the Wood Band concert enjoyed it. There just might not be another Student Union concert this year. Too much work, too much money and too little interest. The Student Union is tired of banging their heads against the wall trying to find new ways to babysit college students.

Babysitting is what it is when you have to people out and feed what they want so you entertain them. Wake folks - go to a club entertainment and you'll pay a cover charge. Go anywhere to be entertained (unfied) and you'll pay five bucks for a smoke-evening - where you can't find a parking lot and they charge you for drinks.

We'd better take advantage of the free activities Student Union sponsors before we have to pay for privilege by not having to go to.

As for me - I enjoyed free ticket, it was a afternoon of music. The Student Union.

Motivation Needed

Why Do We Fail A Course?

By Jill Christianson

What is the result of lack of motivation? Failure. On average, one out of every three HPC students failed a course during last fall semester and interim.

"I didn't have motivation," said one student who failed a mathematics course. "I didn't go to class like I should have. I read the assignments, but never was interested in class work. My scores dropped and finally I failed the course," said another student.

"I didn't deserve to flunk," the teacher and I had contrasting personalities. I didn't do homework because of a lack of interest in the course," said yet another student.

According to Dean Guy, the third of all freshmen fail because of deficiencies in their courses by midterm of the semester. He stated that failure "happens because a student has not yet learned how to organize his or her time." Freshman have "a new-found freedom and social opportunities" to the advantage of.

The course that I failed was not in my major area, so about that the failure will hurt my future," said one student.

Many students at HPC claim that they came to college because that was the thing to do. "A degree after four years is the major goal (if students can let grades slide, they will.)

Mr. Holt, the registrar at High Point College, said that students are "pushed here by their parents." He thinks that students get so involved in college activities that studying becomes a minor part of college life.

Upperclassmen who fail classes are "completely disinterested" in learning, Dean Guy said. He continued saying that upperclassmen "procrastinate until it is too late to withdraw passing. People aren't aware of demanding academic schedules," said Dean Guy.

"I could have passed if I had wanted to, but I just didn't find the time to study that much."

"It would have been possible to apply myself better. I found though, that I had little interest in the subject. I would always leave the work for that course 'til last and rarely get to it in an evening of homework. I guess I just didn't have any motivation."

The reality of failure in a course because of the lack of motivation is different to individuals. Dean Guy said that failure often "damages the student's self-esteem."

One student shared her thoughts stating, "I never flunked anything. I didn't know how to explain it to my parents. All they could see was the F."

Another said, "I have two F's against my name now. I felt very depressed when I got my grades and just thought I was a failure in college."

"This was the first and only course I ever failed. All during high school I made high B's, then came here and lost interest in school. I had very rotten, guilty thoughts when I found out that I flunked my Spanish course."

Failing a course in college does not always result in the automatic motivation for learning in school.

As one student said, "I wasn't affected by that failure. It's now on my record, but that doesn't mean much to me."

Another continued, "I studied more after I failed my math course. After a while though, I realized that studying wasn't so important. Slowly I lost motivation in learning again."

Students at High Point College are not overly concerned about getting high marks in school. Many, from one time to another, experience the lack of motivation which often leads to failure of a course. As a student fails a course, interest in the subject is lost, leading to further failures. Something needs to be done about the lack of motivation.

Empty Beer Is No Sin

into the personnel office for having empty beer cans in the room, there would be nothing they could do because there would be no evidence of possession of alcohol.

He said that in order for the college to act upon any case involving drinking on campus, there must be evidence of possession of alcohol.

Dean Guy said the rumor may have gotten started over a clarification he made at the beginning of the year concerning drinking on campus.

It seems then that RA's thought they had to actually see the student drinking alcoholic beverages before they could report the student to the personnel office.

Dean Guy said the RA's had the wrong idea of what a drinking violation of campus meant. A violation also includes the possession of alcoholic beverages in the room or suite.

In other words, if a half of a can of beer is sitting in the room and a RA finds it sitting there on inspection or something, then that is possession.

If the can was empty, there would be no violation, but if any alcoholic content is present it violates the campus rules as specified in the student handbook.

If there is possession of alcohol, the student will be asked to come by the Student Personnel office on Monday or Wednesday at 11:00 a.m. to fill out a violation form.

This form must be filled out in the presence of Dean Guy or Dean Hanson and the Chief Justice of the Student Judicialian Court, Chip Aldridge.

The student will be asked if he/she wants to plead whether or not they are guilty. If the student admits they are guilty, then they must sign a right to trial waiver form and accept the punishment handed down by the administrative personnel, which would be Dean Guy or Dean Hanson.

Otherwise, if the student does not admit they are guilty, they can take the case to the student court, where they will be tried by the judicial court and his peers.

But, Dean Guy said most students admit they are guilty, rather than cause further embarrassment by possibly being found guilty by the judicial court.

Punishment is a $25 fine or ten hours working for the college for the first violation. It used to be automatic suspension.

Seminars, Elections Head SGA Meeting

By Nancy Reichle

Student legislature met at 3:30 p.m. in meeting room 2 of the student center. Some important issues discussed were encouraging dorm courts to write by-laws for the individual dorms and the beginning of the reorganization of the student union rules of order visiting other schools.

Notes for freshmen officers were held yesterday, Oct. 10. The candidates for office were as follows: Steve Smith and Karen Marshall for president, Ron Roeder and Jay Goldtrap for vice president, Paul Boyles for treasurer, Mark Messick for secretary, Nancy Rivers, Ann Christian, and Nancy Goldberg for legislature, and Joe Koehler for judicial representative.

High Point College will sponsor a Carolinas Conference Seminar on Oct. 20 and 21. Dean Guy will be speaking on problem solving and using task forces in the process. Students from schools in the conference will attend the seminar. Mike Showalter and Sharon Billings will represent HPC at the seminar.

In response to the brainstorming session - The change to a 4.0 scale is being checked into, and Mr. Caulfield said it isn't possible to keep the cafeteria open until 6:30 p.m. because it would run into too much over-time.

In terms of judicial news, the team of Eddie Mullis and Rhonda Carlin will serve as judicial secretary, and David Douglas will serve as student defender. Traffic court meets today at 11:00 a.m. in meeting room 1 of the student center.

The student union inducted 25 new members this year. Upcoming student union events are: Skeet Shoot on Oct. 21, Moose Lodge on Oct. 21, and White Water Rafting on Oct. 28.

The radio station is sponsoring a Logo contest. They want people to submit a catchy display of the call numbers and letters to be used on bumper stickers, letter heads, and the like. A prize will be given to the winner.

Other legislative business include the discussion of allocating money for the Run for Fun club and plans for the upcoming fall weekend of Nov. 17-19.

The legislature will meet again on Oct. 24 at 6:00 p.m.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a supervised walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of walking, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes per session. The control group consisted of 20 women who did not participate in the walking program. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The walking program had a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the subjects. The walking program significantly improved the subjects' physical fitness, as measured by the 6-minute walk test, and their psychological health, as measured by the Beck Depression Inventory and the State-Trait Anxiety Inventory. The walking program also significantly improved the subjects' quality of life, as measured by the SF-36. The walking program was well tolerated and had no adverse effects. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.

The Life Of A College Journalist

By Linda Cain

Many avid newspaper readers view the business of putting out a newspaper as glamorous and exciting. They visualize journalists as leading lives full of handsome men, beautiful women, and money. This is untrue of the average college journalist.

The college journalist is a mixture of empty aspirin bottles a worn-out typewriter, and a trashcan full of crumpled paper.

He is always trying to find ways to stretch a day from 24 hours to 48 hours. The college journalist is constantly making sacrifices. He is frequently forced to give up his favorite television program or studying for a test to cover an important event. He is constantly rearranging his schedule to make everything fit within what is humanly possible.

The budding journalist writes with skill and tactfulness. Everytime he writes a sentence he must take it apart like a puzzle to make sure that all the words fit together properly. He must check the subject and verb for agreement. He, then, should inspect the sentence closely to see if there are any misspelled words or that he editorialized. If he should find an error, he must correct it immediately.

There are four important days in the life of a college journalist.

The first is doing a story on a person he has never met before. When the inexperienced writer talks with the person, he is armed with a set of questions, note pad, and pencil. He is trying hard to appear self-confident; when in reality, his knees are shaking and he is scared stiff.

The next is the day he sees his first article in print. The young newspaper person goes over his articles with a fine tooth to make sure there are no errors.

The third is layout day. This day occurs once every two weeks and involves cooperation on the part of the entire staff of the newspaper. Layout lasts half a day and it tests the ability of each journalist to stay sane. The time is spent putting down fine black lines, proofreading, counting lines, and laying typed copy down on lined paper. The only after affects are wax on one's finger tips from the backs of the articles.

The final day is when the college journalist interviews his first famous person. The young reporter tries to hide his fright by remembering that the famous person is human too. He hopes that he will not mispronounce a word or take down the wrong information.

A college journalist's work is never done. There are always articles to write and papers to lay out, but all the hard work is not in vain when the young reporter sees his article being read.

Blooming Over With Daffodils

By Leslie Davis

This spring, High Point College students can look forward to an array of various colored daffodils blooming all over campus. Thanks to the generous donation from Dack Bain Carrick.

Carrick, a noted horticulturist from High Point, donated thousands of daffodil bulbs to High Point College after his death in 1962.

This prompted Jack Thompson, Superintendent of Building and Grounds, to salvage the remaining bricks from Carrick's torn down house and have a memorial monument built out of them.

This monument is located behind Belk Dormitory in what High Point College calls "Carrick Gardens". There are several benches donated by various Carrick admirers which give the garden a park atmosphere.

Mr. Ira Carter, horticulturist, and Donald Balz are in charge of coordinating and replanting the bulbs. They are in the process now of replanting over 20,000 bulbs to help beautify our campus.

Be sure to keep your eyes open for all the daffodils this spring. They will be in all colors, shapes, and sizes, including one shape that will be familiar to all. This recognizable shape will be in the form of the letters HPC.

Jay Gammon is one of the many interesting personalities here at High Point College. He is a senior, majoring in Accounting. That may not be too astonishing to most, but one aspect that is a little unusual, is that he gets paid for having fun. Not many of us are that lucky, but Jay plays Putt-Putt professionally.

He began playing as an amateur in 1974. After about one year, he turned pro. During his first professional year, he managed to break the world's record for three rounds of Putt-Putt. His scores were 23, 23, and 22, for a total of 68. That record stood until a year ago, when Steve Lyon, of Greensboro, made it in 66. In 1975, he won his most important contest. It was a $1500 world qualifying tournament.

After his first year, he quit until recently. His reason for quitting was that college left him no time to play. But he has come back. He has won the High Point state qualifying tourney, and later finished tenth in the state since his return to the sport.

When asked, what he enjoys about the sport, he said that he really likes the competition. "North Carolina has the best putters in the world." But the tournaments really put pressure on a player, because of the competition great champions. However, even with its demands, Jay says of Putt-Putt, "I enjoy more than anything I've done before."

Concerning the financial aspects, Jay modestly says that he has not really made much money from it - "I would like pretty good pay, but I'm not there yet."

With or without play, Putt-Putt, Jay has found years at HPC to be "the most rewarding years" of his life. Although he was at first skeptical, he now firmly believes in the qualities the college and the relationships of the students. He feels that not only do students get along together well, but the faculty cares more for the individuals than at most of the colleges.

After graduation, he plans to be either a Certified Public Accountant, or for a firm, or work in an accounting department of an industry. He also wants to continue competing as long as he is able.

Cloning Is Only A Matter Of Time

By Paula Prillman

Students and teachers alike filled the trustees dining room to hear Dr. Weeks' lecture on the controversial topic of cloning.

True cloning is the process of taking an egg cell, removing the nucleus from that cell, then replacing that nucleus with any body cell - from any donor.

Although cloning is presently in the planning stage, Dr. Weeks contends that, "It is only a matter of time before an actual clone will be produced."

These clones will possess the same genetic structure as the cell donor. The clone's inherent mental and physical potential will be totally dependent on that of the donor.

Dr. Weeks mentioned that cloning has been performed on a small scale. Theory was changed to reality when scientists successfully cloned a frog and a carrot.

The process of cloning food, such as a carrot, is very different from true human cloning; true cloning was performed on a small scale with a body cell from a frog. A procedure called "somatic hybridization" is used in food cloning. In this process, the scientist mixes chromosomes to produce higher food quality. Various qualities, such as taste, appearance, and nutrients are theoretically cloneable in food.

Dr. Weeks recently attended a National Science Foundation conference held at the Chataugus Institute/University of Maryland. The format of this conference was "Genetics in Society - A Dynamic Interaction." The group in attendance ranged from biologists, to Catholic priests, which lead to the expression of the scientific as well as the ethical aspects of cloning.

From a scientific standpoint, Dr. Weeks is fascinated with cloning and feels that experimentation should be continued. Ethically, however, he confessed that true cloning may be a threat to individuality and stated, "Personally, I'm quite satisfied with the present genetic variation."

Mr. William F. Cope, head of HPC's Sociology department, was very impressed by Dr. Weeks' presentation - yet very apprehensive in regard to the societal acceptance of clones. He stated, "I don't think society is quite ready for the age of clones." Exact genetic reproduction will present threats that we (society and sociologists) are not ready to work with."

From a strictly scientific standpoint, Cope contended that "cloning would be to almost flawless method to assess the role environment plays in emotional make up."

Dr. Weeks and Mr. Cope agreed on one major point: the ethical aspects of cloning must be thoroughly examined by each member of society. Dr. Weeks stated, "We must remember - we are talking about human beings, not guinea pigs."

Traffic Court To Meet

THE HIGH POINT COLLEGE TRAFFIC COURT WILL MEET ON WEDNESDAY MORNINGS AT 11:00 in meeting room ONE of the Campus Center. Dates for Traffic court are: October 11, 25; November 15, 29; and December 13.

Elected student representatives will hear pleading of tickets and rule either to void or uphold the tickets. If ticket is voided, it will not have to be paid. If the ticket is not voided it will have to be paid, but the three dollar late fee will not be attached. Should you receive a traffic ticket and ignore it until the end of the month, it is credited to your account with the three dollar late fee attached - making a total of eight dollars. A student may make additional protest to the bursar, but the decision of the courts is normally upheld.

The courts would like to warn students about receiving repeated tickets. According to new handbook rules "If a student receives more than five violations in a semester, it will result in suspension of the offender's car from campus by the Dean of Students." At the time a student receives his fourth ticket the courts will try to contact him. When he receives his sixth ticket he will be instructed to remove his car from campus.

If you have any questions concerning Traffic Court or Supreme court, either consult your current Student Handbook or one of the elected court representatives. The representatives are: Chip Aldridge, Junior Class and Chief Justice; Jan Dunkelburger, Day Student; Tom Miller, Sophomore Class; Matt Dunton, Senior Class and Jackie Hendrix, Attorney General.

Panthers Sweep Third Straight Joby Hawn Cup

By Chris Harrington

For the third year in a row, High Point College has captured the coveted Joby Hawn Cup, the Carolinas Conference symbol of athletic supremacy.

The award was started in 1976 in honor of Mr. H.C. "Joby" Hawn the first conference commissioner. Points are rewarded for each of the eleven conference sports based on the finish.

The Panthers have received the cup every year of its existence while only participating in ten out of the eleven sports.

The first cup was won in 75-76 by capturing the women's volleyball and basketball conference championship and finishing second in four other sports.

In 76-77, Point amassed 51 points by winning five conference titles (soccer, baseball, women's tennis, volleyball, and basketball) and finishing second in two others.

The 77-78 season proved to be the best year yet as the Panther teams racked up an amazing 57 out of a possible 60 points in taking the award for the third year in a row. In addition, both the men's and women's basketball teams won their conference titles in the first televised conference tournament.

The following is a capsule review of the individual teams in the 77-78 season.

Field Hockey -- Coach Kitty 'Ma' Steele

Compiled the best record in school's history of 14-2-1 which included a 14 game win streak. Finished second in NCAAIAW State Tournament.

Soccer -- Coach Ken Chartier

Won second conference title in a row with a 6-0-0 conference record which included eight shutouts (seven in a row). Overall record of 9-6-0.

Women's Tennis -- Coach Kitty Steele

Completed the best season in the school's history. Finished the regular season at 15-0. Won the Carolina's Conference Tourn., N.C. Division II Tourn., and finished fourth out of twelve in Region II Tourn.

Volleyball -- Coach Wanda Briley

Compiled the best record in history with a 42-10 record. Won Carolinas Conference Tourn., NCAAIAW Division II State Tourn., Southern Region II Tourn., and finished tenth in the AIAW National Tourn.

Men's Tennis -- Coach Mike Glover

Finished second in the conference and District 26. Overall record of 14-12.

Track -- Coach Bob Davidson

Finished third in the conference.

Golf -- Coach Woody Gibson

Finished in the top four teams in seven out of eight tournaments. Finished second in the Carolinas Conference and third in District 26.

Baseball -- Coach Chuck Hartman

Won 30+ games for the ninth year in a row with a 32-9 record. Rated #12 in final NAIA rankings. Won regular season crown, Carolina Conference Tourn., and District 26 Tourn.

Men's Basketball -- Coach Jerry Steele

Finished the season with an 8-4 conference and 16-14 overall record. Won the regular season title, Carolinas Conference Tourn., and competed in the District 26 Tournament.

Women's Basketball -- Coach Wanda Briley

Finished the season with a 30-8 record. Won 20 consecutive games enroute to the national title. Won Carolinas Conference Tourn., NCAAIAW Division II State Tourn., Southern Region II Tourn., and AIAW Division II National Small College Tourn.

The combined Panthers teams finished the 77-78 season with an overall record of 182-67 for a .728 winning percentage. In the conference, the record was 62-14 or .816.

The 1978-79 season should prove to be another banner year for the purple and white as the extensive winning tradition has gained High Point quite an edge in the recruiting department.

Panther Baseball Ranked 12th

By Chris Harrington

At the close of last semester, the baseball team was gearing up for post-season play.

The team moved into the Carolinas Conference Tournament with a 27-7 record. High Point posted easy victories over ACC (11-3) and Pfeiffer (13-11) enroute to their tenth conference title in fourteen years.

The Panthers next stop was the District 26 Tournament.

High Point obliterated Elon (11-3) and Pfeiffer (12-5) moving them into the finals against Catawba, the only conference team to beat the Panthers in both previous outings (7-6) and (3-2).

The Pointers won a close (14-10) game to gain the District 26 title.

High Point finished the season with a 32-9 record overall and a 10-2 record in the conference. The Panthers were ranked 12th in the nation in the final poll, the seventh straight top twenty ranking for the Panthers.

Summer of '78

No Parties For Mugele

Former High Point star infielder Jim Mugele could probably find 50 different ways to spend his summer — and with more enjoyment than he did during the hot months preceding his graduation from HPC.

The Carolinas Conference Player of the Year in 1978 and a first team NAIA All-America shortstop, Mugele was drafted by the Cincinnati Reds in the late stages of the June 9 free agent draft. He reported to the Reds Shelby, N.C. Farm club and his success wasn't exactly superior compared to his senior year for the Panthers.

The Lutherville, Md. native hit .400 jacking 14 home runs and driving 46 RBIs during his final year at HPC. Mugele had started at shortstop since his sophomore year but didn't actually start swinging a sufficient bat until his senior season. Mugele also contributed 20 stolen bases to the Panther attack.

But, after gaining all his honors that also included All-Carolinas Conference, All-District and All-State his senior year, Mugele's summer with Shelby is one he'd rather quickly forget. He played only sparingly at times and when he finally did see some action, he hit a raw .240.

According to High Point Sports Information Director Woody Gibson, Mugele was unhappy about the amount of playing time he got in with Shelby.

So, according to Gibson, Mugele isn't sure whether he'll return to the Reds or not. Mugele is back at High Point finishing school in business where he was named Academic All-American.

Mugele is an excellent fielder with wide range and an excellent throwing arm. Still, he's disgusted about his stay with Shelby and his apparent future in pro baseball.

But Mugele must remember that Dave Concepcion hit in the .230s during his first five years with Cincinnati; former Detroit Tiger great Ed Brinkman couldn't hit that much, and that Larry Bowa of the Philadelphia Phillies is in the running for the 1978 National League Most Valuable Player Award when he hit .290. Bowa gains most of his fame on his defensive heroics.

Field Hockey Splashes Down to Win

rules, the two teams played a five minute overtime in which UNC-G scored winning the game 2-1.

Both the Pfeiffer and Catawba matches were hard fought matches in which the Panthers seemed to dominate but could not score. Pfeiffer scored on a break away in the second half to win the game 1-0 and the Catawba game ended in a 0-0 tie.

The Panthers trounced the Carolina Club 5-0 on goals from Linda Ensey, Sharon Kaler, Janelle Welsh, and two by Alice Wainwright.

Then, just two days later the Lady Panthers traveled to Wake Forest to beat the Deacons by a score of 2-0. These goals came from Janelle Welsh with an assist from Patti Wooten and Alice Wainwright with an assist from Alyson Wilk.

On Oct. 6th and 7th, High Point traveled to VPI for a four game tournament where they won two, lost one, and tied one. While in Virginia, the Panthers played indoors on lighted astur-turf.

The field hockey team's spirit is fabulous and show that they are back on the winning track. They only have three regular seasons games left. They travel to ASU on Oct. 19th and then return home for ECU on Oct. 21st and Duke on Oct. 24th.

Lady Panthers Dominate

by Irish Gaymon

The Lady Panthers have definitely been dominating the volleyball scene lately.

On September 27th, Le-noir-Rhine and Wake Forest traveled to High Point to receive a grave disappointment. Neither team could dampen the spirit or winning drive of the High Point team.

The women of Virginia Commonwealth also met with a defeat against the unpredictable Panthers on September 30th. This game was a 3 out of 5 match which required the ability of the entire squad for the inevitable victory.

The Lady Panthers traveled to Catawba College on October 2nd for a double header against Catawba and ACC. High Point once again found the road to victory an easy one as the Lady Panthers soundly defeated both teams in two matches.

The highlight of this week's action was on October 3rd as arch rivals Elon and Guilford met with the Panthers in a very exciting match. High Point won both games with the help of the entire squad.

Playing as a team seems to come naturally for the Panthers this year as was proven by the girls as they played in The UNC-G Invitational Volleyball Tournament on Saturday.

The Lady Panthers went into the finals against Eastern Kentucky on Saturday. The final game in the match was a race to the finish. The Panthers, paced by Ethel White, battled back from a 13-8 deficit to tie the score at 14-14, again at 15-15, and took the lead at 16-15. With the aid of two quick spikes and serving errors by both teams, the Colonels sealed the victory at 18-16. The Lady Panthers lost the match 15-11, 10-15, 18-16.

The High Point squad will travel to Winston-Salem on October 10th for a double header against Wake Forest and East Carolina.

Study Abroad Program

Anyone interested in turning in poems and short stories for Phoenix Poetry Festival on November 10; should turn them in by October 25 to the English Department. Each entrant is requested to turn in only two in each category.

Scandinavian Seminar is now accepting applications for its study abroad program in Denmark, Finland, Norway or Sweden for the academic year 1979-80. This living-and-learning experience is designed for college students, graduates and other adults who want to become part of another culture while acquiring a second language.

An initial 3-weeks language course, followed by a family stay whenever possible, will give the student opportunity to practice the language on a daily basis and to share in the life of the community. For the major part of the year he is separated from his fellow American students, living and studying among Scandinavians at a "People's College" (residential school for continuing adult education) or some other specialized institution.

All Seminar students participate in the Introductory, Midyear and Final Sessions, where matters related to their studies, experiences and individual progress are reviewed and discussed. The focus of the Scandinavian Seminar program is an Independent Study Project in the student's own field of interest. An increasing number of American colleges and universities are giving full or partial credit for the Seminar year.

The fee, covering tuition, room, board, and all course-connected travels in Scandinavia, is $4,600. Interest-free loans are granted on the basis of need, as are a few special scholarships. For further information, please write to: SCANDINAVIAN SEMINAR 100 East 85th Street New York, N.Y. 10028

Radio Station Coming Through Loud and Clear

BY JILL CHRISTIANSON

WWIH, the High Point College radio station, is coming through loud and clear. The station, which is 90.5 on the FM dial, is broadcasting from 6 pm to 12 am every evening except Saturday.

After organizational problems in the beginning of the school year, WWIH is now operating well with 11 disc jockeys. College Chaplain, Bob Lowdermilk is advising radio station operations along with Dr. Bowman.

Every evening, the station sponsors an album feature in which both new and old albums are played at length. WWIH also has a Sunday evening program entitled "Do You Remember?" in which music of the 1960s is played.

The radio station presently has 250 albums in its collection. In addition to rock music, WWIH also has some jazz, country rock and classical music in its collection. Fred Patterson, General Manager at WWIH, said "We hope to triple our record selection by the end of next semester." WWIH is currently receiving records from various promotional record services.

The students involved with WWIH have some new ideas for future programming at WWIH. Next semester there will be short programs on gerontology, local politics, and social topics such as marriage, homosexuality, and alcohol abuse. Guest lecturers will be invited to take part in such programs.

Fred Patterson hopes to also have one-hour music specials on the air next semester. These music specials would be commentaries and documentaries on rock, jazz, and classical forms of music.

Anyone interested in joining up with the WWIH team, stop by the station at the top of Roberts Hall and talk to some of the members. Office hours are 3 - 5 pm Monday through Friday. The members of WWIH welcome suggestions from the college community and surrounding area.

Fred Patterson, general manager of the radio station, broadcasts from the WWIH studio located in the tower of Roberts Hall. After much effort, the radio station is finally on the air on a regular basis. The HPC disc jockeys broadcast from 6 p.m. to 12 midnight every evening except Saturday.

New Major Deals With Aging And The Elderly

BY KIM DARDEN

When was the last time you whiled away a lazy afternoon with a person 65 years of age or older: Do you have any true companions that are elderly citizens? If you do, you know and treasure that very special wisdom, charm, and sweet-naturedness which only this unique group of people possesses.

There is a new major at High Point College that deals with these special people. The field of study is called Gerontology - the study of old age and aging. To those students interested in preparing for careers working with people, this major has become a progressively appealing option. And now High Point, with existing programs meeting the needs of youth, introduces this new program which covers the other end of the life-span continuum.

Great needs for trained persons are predicted in the expanding field of aging in the next twenty years. The reason for these needs, according to Dr. Marilyn Karmel, named director of the Gerontology major of High Point, is that our population is both getting older and living longer. According to statistics researched by Dr. Karmel, since 1900, "the population of the U.S. has increased 3 times, but the numbers of persons over 60 has increased eight times. In 1900 three per cent of the population was over 65; now 10.5 per cent is over 65 and indications are that this trend will continue. In addition, those people who reach 65 are living longer with increased medical care, and the prediction is that they will continue to add years to their lives." These additional years will demand additional services and it is "to meet these needs of the future that the college has instituted the major in Gerontology," says Dr. Karmel.

Presently the program offers two options for majors - administration and service. The administration concentration would equip a graduate to administer a nursing home, an agency such as a Council on Aging, recreation for the aging, or other administrative position. The service concentration trains students to work personally, on a one-to-one basis with the elderly in a "medical, educational, recreational, or counseling relationship." Contrary to the stereotype ideas of most people, many service relationships are outside of the classic nursing home.

"Only 4% of people over 65 are in nursing homes," says Dr. Karmel. "Most are living in their own homes, living individual lives in the community - and it is there that we serve them," says Dr. Karmel.

All majors study a nucleus of five courses in Gerontology - Introduction to Gerontology, Life Problems of Aging, Social Policy in Gerontology, Theory and Research, and Seminar. The major includes an internship program in which each student spends one semester working full time in an agency or institution for older citizens. Additionally, students who choose the administration option study Principles of Medical Care and Psychology of Patient Care. Other requirements for the major are selected from existing offerings in business administration, human relations, psychology, sociology, physical education and art.

A major in Gerontology promises a unique and rewarding career.

Some Students Get the Shaft

BY LISA MICKEY

This fall break was a miserable time for one of my friends here at HPC. You see, her home is over five hundred miles away and she had neither car, nor ride home, nor money to get there. She was stuck - stuck trying to find a temporary place to sleep without imposing on anyone and without losing her own self-dignity. The dorms were closing and she too, was instructed to pack up and get out. Lucky for her, her Carolina buddies came to the rescue.

Does this sound familiar? This student, along with others, was forced into a situation that shouldn't have happened. First of all, she was irritated by the fact that she couldn't go home. Everyone else had made big plans at home or on vacation and they only seemed to intensify her desire to just sit back with an easy mind and enjoy herself.

Secondly, she was faced with the reality of either asking, waiting to be asked, or lucking up, by some fat chance, and finding a free place to stay. She had quite a time dealing with pride. She had an even bigger one dealing with her position of vulnerability.

The fact is, our out-of-state students are getting the shaft. It is expensive for many of them to go home and it is humiliating for them to beg. Their only alternative is the limited accommodations on campus that too often fold at the last minute anyway. Because of security reasons, Belk dorm is the only dorm that can remain open over breaks and the only way that suites may be "loaned" is by written agreement from the regular occupants. This usually means that if the occupants know you, you've got a room, and if they don't, tough luck.

It is easy to see both sides of the argument. There are students on campus that really need a place to stay over breaks, while at the same time, Belk dorm occupants certainly have a right to their concern in turning personal property over to, perhaps, complete strangers.

Dean Guy stated that the traveling situation is usually worse at fall break than at spring break. More students from out-of-state have trouble getting home and generally, the fall break is so short that by the time they get there, it is already time to come back. Dean Guy said that one solution the administration has come up with is that next year's fall break will be one week sandwiched between two weekends. (In this case, all dorms will be completely closed.) This amount of time for break would, according to Dean Guy, invite more students from distant states to return home; therefore, more rides would be available.

With all things considered, there is no easy way to solve the problem of housing over breaks. However, it seems

What Kind Of Collge Is This?

BY ROBIN MARLEY

Every decision that a person makes is done purely on the weighing of advantages and disadvantages. The decision to commit a crime or the decision to have sex is made (by the intelligent person) only after weighing all the advantages and disadvantages. It goes without saying that the decision to attend any college is made in the same manner. The advantages of attending HPC are just as effective and numerous as the disadvantages. The advantages shall be looked at first.

High Point College is small. One thousand students makes it easy for each student to know almost a majority of the school. There is almost no way there could be a feeling of "being lost". There are no mammoth classes where a student is only a number or a blip on a seating chart.

High Point College has excellent facilities. There is a modern Student Campus, a more than adequate library and excellent laboratory equipment for the physical and biological sciences. Except for McCulloch there are modern dormitories. Within the city of High Point there are numerous jobs for graduates and part-time jobs for students.

High Point College has an excellent student-faculty ratio. Professors know most of their students by name.

Most faculty are ready and willing to help students with any and all problems. Since HPC is not a research school, the faculty is more interested in student education than self education.

High Point College has many ways of letting students express themselves. The Radio Station, the HI-PO and various organizations allow students great opportunities to enrich themselves outside the classroom. All of these are valid reasons for any student claiming the advantages of High Point College. Of course there are disadvantages.

High Point College has a rather unambitious student body. Most students do not take advantage of the excellent facilities or the methods of self expression outside the classroom. Lester Maddox once made the statement that the way to improve prison conditions is to get a better grade of inmate. The analogy holds true for HPC. One of the disadvantages of this school is the apathy and lackluster performance of a majority of the students.

High Point College has a rather uninspiring faculty. Many have been teaching college for over ten years. They are trying to prepare students for the modern world. Many give the same canned tests and teach the same courses using the same books year after year. With some professors' grading scales, students work harder for grades than for knowledge.

High Point College has an uncaring administration for the most part. One student was kept from graduating because an administrator forbade a student to take the one more hour credit necessary for his graduation. The faculty and the administration refuse to mix with the students at the school's social functions or "hang-outs."

In spite of all the impressive facilities at High Point there is still no programmable computer at the college. In the computer age HPC is still in the Dark Age. A basic knowledge and experience with computers is a necessity for math, business, science and social science majors. This is certainly a disadvantage of High Point College.

For those students who have survived to graduate from HPC the disadvantages must have outweighed the advantages.

For most students the advantages are more plainly obvious than the disadvantages. The more obvious advantages greater the mood of complacency, which is in itself, a disadvantage. Only after clearly understanding the advantages and disadvantages of High Point College can the question of "What kind of college is this?" be answered.

Parking Still Problem On Campus

BY SCOTT HANCE

Now that mid-terms have passed and the semester is better than half over, it's time for those students who have cars on the campus to speak out about the parking problems that seem to exist. The real problem occurs when there are special events that take place on campus for those people that are not regularly on campus and that come in from surrounding communities. These people don't seem to care where they park.

A situation of this type occurred last Tuesday night when the campus was full of those people here for continuing education classes. The day student parking lot looked like the infield at a stock car race. Cars and trucks were parked in every available inch, regardless of whether it was actually a parking spot or not. One inconsiderate person parked his pick up truck in the entrance leaving just barely enough room for one vehicle to pass.

It was virtually impossible to get your car out of certain spots and in other cases it was totally impossible. I went out to get a friend's car that was parked there only to find a car pulled directly behind it. I had about a foot space to try and get through or I could try making it over the logs that line the lot. I was forced to wait until the classes were over for the evening before moving the car.

Did any of these people get tickets for not parking properly? I doubt it. Yet if a regular student here parked his car in a faculty spot over night for lack of somewhere else to park, chances are he would be in front of the traffic court on an upcoming Wednesday morning.

Why can't these people be made to limit their parking to the areas in front of Robert's Hall and the parking lot behind Haworth Hall. This lot is not used very often and is not that much further to walk to Roberts than the walk from Day Student. This would make it easier for those students who park here year-round to find a place to park and also to get out of that place when we need to.

It is about time for the administration and/or security to limit the areas in which visitors and night students can park. There should be designated areas for them to park and the lots used by dorm and day students should remain open for their use only. Then it might be worth paying the eight dollar parking fee to park on campus.

Health Services Available For The Sexually Active

BY JILL CHRISTIANSON

In High Point there are several services available to sexually active young people. Many of these services are free and invite High Point College students to take advantage of the services offered. Guilford County Family Planning Program, the YWCA, and the Guilford County Health Department offer contraceptive, information about sex, pregnancy and VD testing.

"We are here to serve any woman who is a resident of Guilford County," said Gene Vaughn, educational director at the Guilford County Family Planning Program. Both prescriptive and nonprescriptive contraceptives are supplied free to women by Family Planning. Before prescriptive contraceptives are given, an examination is given. All participants in the Family Planning Program must take part in a class in which the birth process and contraceptives are discussed.

VD, urinalysis, diabetes, and anemia tests are given at Family Planning, in addition to pregnancy tests. Counseling services for both sexual and personal problems are available to women and their sexual partners at Family Planning.

Upon interviewing several students about the Guilford County Family Planning Program, all the students had positive attitudes towards the program. One

High Point College student said, "For a free clinic I thought the Family Planning Program was very organized and run very efficiently. The doctors and nurses couldn't have been friendlier or more helpful. They never gave me any hassle about being unmarried and coming for birth control."

Another student said, "The nurses at the Family Planning Program make you feel comfortable. They give you an open view of every method of birth control."

While talking about the staff at Family Planning, a High Point College student said, "They really took time with me and explained everything thoroughly so that I left with no unanswered questions."

Any college student wanting to use the services of Family Planning Program should call the office (886-4562) for an appointment. All introductory sessions are held on Wednesdays at 4 p.m., at the Family Planning Program Building at 407 Elm Street.

The High Point YWCA offers pregnancy testing every Saturday from 10-11:30 a.m. at the YWCA. The charge for the service is five dollars and takes approximately five minutes. An appointment must be made in advance. Six weeks must have elapsed since one's last menstrual period for the test results to be accurate. The YWCA offers birth control information along with counseling for women who use the testing service.

The Guilford County Health Department, which is located next to Hayworth Hall, offers VD testing. The service is available on Wednesdays at 11:30 a.m., the testing is free. No appointment is necessary.

The Guilford County Family Planning Program, YWCA, and Guilford County Health Department services are available to all residents of High Point, including the students at High Point College. Anyone with questions about the services offered by these organizations should phone the various places.

Oppenheimer Featured in Program

BY LINDA CAIN

The American poet, Joel Oppenheimer, was featured as part of the Visiting Scholars Program at High Point College on Monday. Mr. Oppenheimer's visit was sponsored by the English Department, in conjunction with the college.

Oppenheimer spoke on the impact of the Black Mountain School in a morning lecture.

Black Mountain School was an experimental school set up in the mountains of North Carolina in the early part of the twentieth century. The school's faculty was carefully chosen and given free reign to teach anything they wished, in the manner they saw fit. The primary contribution of the school was that it turned back the hands of time to an era when teachers knew more than the students and there was an apprenticeship between students and faculty. The school closed its doors in 1956.

Today there is a renewed interest in the Black Mountain School because of its contribution to the arts. The school was home to many poets such as Robert Creeley, Edward Dorn, and Jonathan Williams. It existed without any endowments and each student did work at the school in addition to his own school work. When asked if he foresees the re-opening of the school, Oppenheimer replied that he did not because of the large amount of money it would take to get faculty members and maintain a physical plant.

Joel Oppenheimer is a native of New York. He studied at Cornell University (1947-1948) and the University of Chicago (1948-1949). He left the environment of the university to study at Black Mountain College. He has written seven volumes of poetry including The Dutiful Son, In

Time, and The Woman Poems. He has also written several Broadway plays and a book about the New York Mets' 1972 baseball season.

Currently, he is artist in residence at City College in New York City. He also serves as a poetry consultant for Bobs and Merrill Publishers and a columnist for "The Village Voice."

"To be a poet," according to Oppenheimer, "is not to be separate from humanity."

that you must look at the entire spectrum of life in order to work and understand it," says Dr. Karmel. "When you work with children, you can really quit at 16 or 21 — you don't have to think beyond that. Another difference is that with the older citizen, you're not trying to mold the person — you're dealing with what they already are."

"And it is what the older citizen is that is so special. Many are at a very happy time in their lives. They don't have to pretend anymore, or meet social pressures. They become what they are," says Karmel.

Two 3-hour courses will be offered Spring Semester — Intro. to Gerontology and Life Problems of Aging. In addition, a one-hour Orientation to Gerontology will be offered to those who wish to investigate the field with little commitment. Dr. Karmel envisions that these new offerings in Gerontology will also be beneficial to majors in religion, psychology, and sociology.

Comedies Presented

Plays Delight Audience

BY LINDA CAIN

Members of the High Point College Community were taken away from tests, term papers, and projects and whisked into the world of Woody Allen this past weekend with the Tower Players' production of Allen's plays, "Death Knocks" and "Mr. Big."

Woody Allen is a twentieth century American humorist known for his plays and movies. His works include "Sleeper," "Play it Again, Sam," and "Annie Hall." Allen is best known for taking a serious point and making it funny. The plays clearly show this point.

"Death Knocks" is the story of a well-to-do dress maker, played by Nell To-rain, who is visited by Death, played by Cheryl Holmes. Natalie is unwilling to die yet, so she stalls for time by engaging Death in a game of gin rummy. During the game, she constantly bombards Death with questions about what death is like and is therean after-life. To most of her questions Death replies that she will see. Natalie wins the game and her extra time. Both actresses do a superb job with their parts and clearly show the audience that death is always unexpected and the material possessions that one has in this life are worthless when death comes.

The second play "Mr. Big" is the story of Detective Kaiser Lupowitz, played by Mark LaFranco, who is hired by a beautiful woman, played by Melissa Patton, to find God. Miss Patton plays Dr. Ellen Shepherd, a mixed-up woman who is bombarded with the philosophical teachings of Socrates, Kant, Hegel, Descartes. She lies to Lupowitz about her identity and profession so he'll accept the case and her. Lupowitz questions Rabbi Wiseman, played by David Douglas, and Chicago Phyllis, an atheist gambler, played by Paul Jean Prillman. From his questioning, he deduces that the Jews are involved in a protection racket with God, since they are his chosen people. Chicago Phyllis tells him that she could not have passed all of her bad checks if there was a God. Levowitz decides that Dr. Shepherd has lied to him and turns the tables on her. All the actors and actresses in the play put on a fine performance. The plays were directed by Dave Christovich and the sets were designed by James Forster.

Flying High With

Dr. Matthews

BY RAY DANIEL

Look up in the sky some day. You may see your psychology professor up there flying around. Dr. Matthews just started taking flying lessons in September. After completing a very technical course at GTI, and performing forty hours of actual flying, he plans to get his private pilot's license in late November.

He began to get interested during an illness. A close friend would fly down from Virginia just to cut his grass for him. Since then, he has come down for different reasons. Once, he called Dr. Matthews and said that he had a pie that was terrific, and he would like him to have some. In a short time, his Virginia friend was at the door with the pie. This speed and ease of travel greatly impressed Dr. Matthews.

But he has become even more impressed with the immense amount of knowledge that is necessary to be a good pilot. "You're always learning." The list of sciences and procedures involved is overwhelming. The actual flying of the plane is also complicated. He notes that a plane is flown in a three-dimensional space as opposed to the two-dimensional course of an automobile. "This multiplies the prob-

However, Dr. Matthews says, "It's fun, I really enjoy it." He finds the number of people flying now fascinating, "especially during the Furniture Market, hundreds of private jets come into the airport." He likes the freedom of flight and being away from everything, but, he says, "you have to trust yourself." Most of all, he enjoys "the challenge of learning."

Dr. Matthews is obviously a very active man. He and his wife began sailing last summer. They bought a place on Bald Head Island. After he gets his license, he will enjoy flying to the island in an hour and a half instead of taking over seven hours by boat. He does not plan to buy a plane in the future because of the amount of expense and upkeep necessary, but he does plan to join a club where he will only have to pay dues and so much each mile for the use of a plane. He says in this way, "it would usually cost no more than driving, and maybe even less."

Whatever else his future involves, his interest and enthusiasm assures his success as a pilot, and the continuation of his enjoyment.

unfair for these students that can't go home to spend their days of leisure in total misery and wonder of where they'll be the next night. This ping-pong ball theory of bouncing them around should come to a halt, if for nothing more, than to secure them safety and revise the system in the best interests of a few students that are tired of being stepped on.

Over Thanksgiving break, all High Point College dorms will remain open, but the cafeteria will close November 22 at lunch and will reopen November 26, at dinner. No doubt, there will be a few students left on campus that will eat peanut butter and jelly sandwiches instead of turkey for Thanksgiving. At least they'll have a place to sleep. After all, what are a few chocolate sandwiches to several days of wandering, wondering and losing self-respect.

SGA Meets

New Freshmen Officers Sworn In

BY NANCY REICHEL

Student legislature met last Tuesday, Oct. 24. A session on parliamentary procedures preceded the meeting. This session was conducted by Ed Grandpre, who graduated from HPC last spring and now attends graduate school at Wake Forest.

The freshman class representatives were sworn in and welcomed. The newly elected freshman class officers are: Karen Magill, president; Ron Rogers, vice-president; Paul Boyles, treasurer; Mark Messick, secretary; Nancy Rivers, Bryan Christians, and Nancy Houlberg, legislators; and Jeff Koehler, judicial representative.

Caryn Reinhart, SGA president, reported that as a result of a petition circulating concerning greater variety of food at lunch, Mr. Caulfield was sent a letter to that effect.

Upcoming student union events include the movie, The Three Musketeers, to be shown Nov. 1 in the OSC for 60¢, and a ping pong tournament to be held Nov. 6. Registration for the tournament will be held through Nov. 1.

Three new lights will soon be erected to provide more security on campus. These lights will be placed at the bridge coming from Cooke Hall, at the library, and along the road between Mills and the campus center.

Other legislative business includes the passing of an act to establish funding for the "Run for Fun Club." The act established $250 to be appropriated only for the 1978-79 school year. The money is to be used for traveling expenses, entry form fees, and other costs as deemed necessary by the faculty advisor of the club.

A motion was also passed to allocate $50 for the golf team to enter a tournament at Guilford College to be paid back by the end of the semester, Dec. 15.

The next meeting of the legislature will be held on Nov. 7 at 6:30 p.m.

Piedmont Crafts Fair To Be Held

The 15th annual Piedmont Crafts Fair will be held this year on Friday, Saturday, 4, and 5, 1978, at Memorial Coliseum in Winston-Salem, N.C., 10-9 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, and 1-6 p.m. on Sunday.

The 16th exhibition of crafts for sale, sponsored by Piedmont Craftsmen, Inc., is devoted to bringing wide public attention to the exciting, high quality work being created today in the field of craft art.

Over 100 juried members of Piedmont Craftsmen, Inc. will exhibit and sell a wide range of contemporary and traditional craft work. In all instances the booths will be manned by the craftsmen themselves, so spectators and buyers can discuss the crafts with their designers and creators.

Last year's Piedmont Crafts Fair was recognized nationally as one of the most outstanding in quality, variety, attendance and sales. From the enthusiasm already expressed, we expect the 1978 Fair to have even greater significance.

Some 50 different crafts will be represented. These include pottery, weaving, glass, wood, jewelry, enameling, photographs, prints, batik, iron works, leather, stitching, and quilting.

In addition to the craftsmen's exhibits, there will be live entertainment, a sidewalk cafe, demonstrations by master craftsmen, and educational exhibits.

Clyde Gobbie, Winston-Salem, NC, throws a pot in preparation for the 15th Annual Piedmont Craftsmen's Fair, November 3, 4 and 5 in the Winston-Salem Coliseum.

Menu Changes Taking Place

Last week, 252 diet conscious HPC students decided to do something about changing their menu. They drew up a petition and with the backing of the SGA, Mr. Frank Caulfield, Cafeteria Director, agreed on new items for the school menu. They are as follows: Fresh fruit available at all meals; all-natural yogurt, provided on food line and in snack bar; cheese will be available more often-with the possibility of cheddar and muenster cheeses to be added; and fish and other seafood will be served more often.

Mr. Caulfield welcomes suggestions from you to improve food services at HPC.

Students Pass FCC Exam

Of the 18 students enrolled in English 340, TV and Radio, seven passed all three elements of the FCC Third Class License exam in Winston-Salem in October.

The students are John Hallis, Robin Henson, Glenn Jones, Rick Shelton, Wendy Stewart, Kathy Wolfe, and Chris Larson. Five other students in the course passed Elements One and Two but not Nine. They will retake Element Nine in December.

According to Dr. DeLeeuw, the course instructor, this percentage of students passing is the highest ever for the course.

Other students planning to take the test in December can secure an application form from Dr. DeLeeuw.

The bookstore carries two textbooks as study guides for the test.

Successful completion of this FCC test will allow the students to broadcast at FM and AM radio stations without critical antenna arrays.

HPC Cheerleaders Chosen

The 1978-79 High Point College cheerleaders have been selected for this year's sports season. Five girls were chosen for the squad with three of the members returning from last year. Returning are Tina Lynch, Betty Maynor and Marianne Phillips, who is the captain. Freshmen Leslie Delderfield and Claudia Bryan are the new members.

This year's cheerleaders are interested in having males on the squad. Any male interested in the program would help in performing stunts. Practice is required once a week.

Anyone interested in serving as a male cheerleader should contact Marianne Phillips, Box 3701 Campus Mail, or on the first floor of North Hall.

PANTHER PROFILES

BY DENNIS TUTTLE

An old proverb says "Go where the money is and when the well runs dry, search the Bodesian oasis for its resources are pure and rich."

Freshman Jennell Welsh followed the proverb by going where the money was — High Point College — and now finds herself blessed with the riches of being a walk-on — a successful one at that — on the High Point field hockey team. Welsh, a 5-8 left wing from Randallston, Md., came to HPC after they gave the attractive frosh a Presidential Scholarship. She played field hockey, lacrosse and basketball at Randallston High School but wasn't recruited for any of her athletic talents.

She came to HPC also seeking a future in oceanology, a field that High Point excels in because of the Florida Technical Institute program. Yet, when she arrived in late August, she had already made plans to try out for the field hockey team. Although she didn't know if she was good enough to play collegiate hockey, she never dreamed she would earn a starting berth in her opening year in college.

"I just went to practice and tried my best because I wanted to start," Welsh said. "I don't like to watch but I wasn't really planning on starting when I came down here. But I'm glad I'm starting."

Welsh is in her fourth year playing the sport. She was Co-Captain of her team in Randallston. She has contributed to HPC's winning ways this season by scoring four goals giving coach Kitty Steele something to smile about when considering the Panthers' future. "My mother was a referee and my father is an athlete, also," Welsh noted. "And my brother and sister play sports. I guess my family is just athletically inclined."

Welsh decided High Point was the place to go after a visit to the University of Tampa and a brief stay at High Point last year. Like many of the students here, friendliness captured her enrollment. "I went to the U. of Tampa and I didn't really like it there," Welsh says. "I got the Presidential Scholarship here and that helped a lot. But the friendliness among the students made a big difference."

Now that Jennell Welsh has gone where the money is, searched the oasis for its resources and discovered happiness lies within confidence, field hockey has turned out to be a pleasant bonus to her college life.

The Panthers, coached by John Smith, won the title with a perfect 4-0 record. They defeated Western Carolina 3-0, then North Carolina State 3-0, and finally Appalachian State 3-0 in the final match.

Field Hockey Team Advances to Regionals

BY COLLEEN BLACKNEY

The High Point Field Hockey Team finished their regular season with a thrilling victory over East Carolina University to boost their record to 7-6-2 before heading for the state tournament. Even though this record was not as impressive as in past years, the panthers proved themselves to be an excellent hockey team as they placed second in the state by defeating UNC-G, Carolina, and Pfeiffer in the AIAW tournament this past weekend.

On Saturday, Oct. 21st, the panthers played ECU to a 1-1 tie in regulation time. After two, hard fought 7½ minute overtimes the score remained tie at 1-1. This meant that each team would have to take five penalty strokes (a one on one situation in which a player takes a shot on goal from seven yards out) to determine the winner of the game. High Point scored three penalty strokes to East Carolina's two to give them the victory.

The panthers then traveled to Boone, N.C. for the AIAW tournament on Oct. 27th, 28th, and 29th. The first day of the tournament was excellent for High Point as they defeated UNC-G by a score of 2-0, and Carolina by a score of 2-1. The next morning the panthers lost to Duke (2-1), and Carolina by a score of 2-1. The next means out of the competition. That afternoon they came back to beat top seeded Pfeiffer by a score of 3-1. Then on Sunday, Oct. 29th, for the third consecutive year, the hockey team was in the finals of the N.C. State tournament. The panthers played an outstanding game, but lost to Carolina (1-0) in overtime.

High Point was seeded #5 in the tournament, but like a true underdog, they were determined to show that they were as good, if not better than other teams in the state and that is exactly what they did! The coaches, players, students, and faculty should be very proud of this team because even though things weren't always going well and there were many injuries, the team kept their spirit and stayed together.

The panthers will compete in the Regional tournament in Hollins College, Virginia in two weeks. We wish them the very best of luck.

Field Hockey Team Advances to Regionals

by Michael Schmitt

For the first time since 1997, the field hockey team from the University of North Carolina at Charlotte has advanced to the national tournament. The team, coached by John Pappalardo, finished second in the regional tournament and will represent the Southeast region at the national tournament in San Antonio, Texas, in November.

The team's success is a testament to the hard work and dedication of the players and coaches. The team has been working hard throughout the season to improve their skills and teamwork. The coaches have been instrumental in guiding the team through the challenges of the season. Almost without dissent, CITIZEN KANE is considered to be the greatest sound film ever produced. Orson Wells came to Hollywood on the crest of his success in radio and theatre. # Dorm Theft Working On Pocketbooks

BY LISA MICKEY, EDITOR

The women's dormitories have quite a problem on their hands. Close to $1000 worth of money, jewelry and calculators have been stolen in a few weeks and not always because doors weren't locked.

One student stated, "We'd leave our room for not even a total of four minutes to go to the bathroom or to get ice and come back to find watches and/or money gone. Sometimes we'd come in and our closet would be demolished with clothes and shoes thrown all over the floor. This happened three or four times."

"Then somebody took a screwdriver to our door and got in. It got to the point where we were sleeping with a chair against our door at night. That's when we decided to call the cops. It took a lot of talking to convince the administration that it wasn't our fault that we weren't locking our doors. We were locking our doors. At least two rooms on this hall have had their locks changed since then. Approximately $500 worth of money, watches and calculators have been taken on this hall alone."

She continued, "One girl down the hall had a phone call so she went to the phone. When she came back, $15.00 was gone. Her wallet was in her pocketbook hidden in a drawer. Somebody knew where to look because everything was like it should be -- in place -- except for the money and it was gone. It was a clean job."

Another girl on the same hall commented, "The theft changed for a while from money to personal items. Many times it was things like toothpaste that was missing and things were often found messed up and knocked over. Just in the time it takes for a trip to the bathroom and back, things get missing."

She had "lost" $25.00 herself.

One freshman stated her views saying, "A lot of things were taken because of people not locking their doors while they were in the shower. I was guilty of this at first. I started missing change. Soon it got to be a dollar here and there every time. I estimated about $10 was taken that way. I got wise and started locking up."

"Then about $40 was taken from my room. It was our sorority's pledge money. That wasn't enough. They took about $300 worth of family jewelry -- my grandmother's cameo, an opal necklace and a diamond pendant. They also broke in and stole some rare coins I was saving to put in my collection. I had the lock changed and eventually changed rooms."

She surmised, "A lot of books have been stolen along with money and jewelry. Most books are never found. I found mine laying on the bathroom floor. The only thing I can figure out is that they're taking things and putting them inside the books to get them out of the room. After they get what they want, they probably just discard the books."

One sophomore was an exception to the game. She had $48.50 stolen from her room at an undetermined time. Most of it was phone bill money. Her roommate stated that if they were on the hall, like across the hall in another room, the room was most likely unlocked. If the money was taken with both of them out of the building, then the room would have been locked. Since they do not know exactly when the money was taken, that can't be determined.

They realized the money was gone and contacted the police. The next step they took was to place a sign up on their hall stating the money was taken, the police had a lead and if the money was not returned in the next 24 hours, the police would take the proper actions.

The money was returned -- every bit of it -- in an envelope slid under their door. No further questions were asked. "They probably returned the money because we brought in the law. They must have gotten scared. Now the hall is tighter. The doors are locked more. Everyone wonders why they took the money and how they knew we had it."

Not everyone is as lucky as that one person. Ms. Boyles, Resident Advisor of Woman's Dorm, said, "I feel the girls themselves are their own best security where the outside doors are concerned and where keeping their own doors closed and locked is concerned. They have the right to investigate on their own or find someone who has the authority to take more action. The main thing we can control is the opportunity for them to steal and that is by not giving it (the opportunity) to them."

Students living in the dorms involved have a greater sense of awareness in regard to the protection of

Down Their Working On Pocketbooks

BY THE STAFF OF HI-PO

As the year draws to a close, many students are looking for ways to make extra money. One of the most popular ways is by working on their pocketbooks.

There are many ways to make extra money, and many students are taking advantage of them. Some are working on their own, while others are working for a company.

Competency Test Causes Stir

The North Carolina high school competency exam was recently administered to approximately 80,000 high school juniors. The test has caused great controversy throughout the state with several groups who claim that it is discriminatory to minorities. Students failing the test are given several chances to pass it. Those who do not pass it are given a certificate of attendance rather than a high school diploma.

Whereas the test is a joke and a breeze to most students in the high schools, it has been a topic of protest for many concerned parents and anti-competency test activists. The test, having 240 questions divided into comprehension and math sections, concentrates on the student's ability to use his skills in solving everyday problems and situations.

Opposition to the test is the claim that minority students generally do not have access to the best schools or the best learning materials that would sufficiently prepare them for the standardized test; however, a racially mixed state panel disproved this in their findings. The test, they said, was culturally neutral.

One black Winston-Salem teacher stated that the problem lied in the foundation years of general learning. She related her own experiences in school with textbooks. "Textbooks," she said, "are updated in the public schools every five years. Many times the students of black schools got the 'white schools' discarded books while the white students got the new ones."

This occurred in parts of the state without forced integration and probably still happens in some places although it has been about twelve years that total integration took place in North Carolina.

With this hypothesis taken into consideration, it is possible for a black student to be five years or more behind the white student in regard to textbook's updated information. The argument behind the competency test is that blacks feel that there should be a delay in giving the test until black students have had time to catch up with their learning. This would take approximately five years or longer. They go on to say that black students graduating now have not had a full school career of integration and need to catch up. Integration, in this case and according to representative blacks, is synonymous with up-to-date materials and teaching methods. They state that education is equal now, but the equality tests given encompass the black student's past twelve years of high school and his life and may not match up to the average white student's educational life and career.

One white Winston-Salem student discussed the test

What Kind Of College Should This Be?

BY ROBIN MARLEY

Where there are problems there are solutions. When one recognizes the problems only half the battle is won. The solutions are what take time and effort. The problem at High Point College is the lack of a sense of community. The problem is so vast and at such a depth that it ranges from every upper echelon decision of college policy to every tidbit of gossip spoken. The lack of community at High Point College is directly related to the frustration factor, or the lack of motivation factor. Here the lack of motivation factor begins with those who are disinterested in true education and are lacking in creativity - the College's administration. Magnify this factor to faculty members, those who have no freshness or learning spiritiveness. Then magnify this frustration factor to students, those who have no motivation. Hence there is no administrator here any better than the worst student this college has ever produced. There is no faculty member better than the poorest student in his class.

In ideological terms the problem has been discovered. But only in realistic terms can solutions be found. Since the most basic of all problems lies with the administration it is prudent to begin there. Move all the administration out of their ivory towers of the first floor of Robert's Hall. Neither students nor faculty go there unless it is to see an administrator. Therefore there is no informality about visiting an administrator. Bring them out to get a little sun, let them bring their work to the Student Center for several hours a day. It will take time for the formality barrier to breakdown. But when it does the students and the administration will be able to experience a sense of community.

Break down the faculty-student barriers by eliminating the frustration factor. Give students an opportunity to evaluate professors in methods that give students a voice in who will teach. No person is above evaluation by critics and therefore department heads should recruit certain students whom they trust to describe their classroom experience. Although student evaluations should not be the sole method of judgment it could be the most important in determining a professor's effectiveness. After all, educators should motivate not frustrate students.

To build a sense of community encourage the faculty dollar lunch. Although it is not now a complete success, barriers are broken in a week. Continued efforts will bring success. Giving up will bring absolutely nothing. Another idea in the same vein is to encourage individual faculty, individual student dining. Each semester a student should make an appointment with each of his professors for a breakfast or lunch discussion. Each faculty member has so much to offer that a student should take advantage of it. A faculty member should view this as an opportunity to help them teach students instead of material.

The student body is so lackluster that they have nothing to lose by attempting something. But considering the maturity and responsibility students exhibit, the faculty and administration should take the initiative to improve the atmosphere. With patience nothing but positive results can occur to help improve the community atmosphere at High Point College.

Students Should Help Security

BY JILL CHRISTIANSON

The time has come for High Point College students to become involved with the security of the college. The campus has had its share of security problems lately. Thefts are becoming more prevalent, seeing strangers wander around campus late at night is not uncommon.

Students are the answer to security problems on campus. If students were employed as security guards, campus security would be greatly benefitted. Students, trained in the security field, could save the college money and make the campus safer.

We, as students of High Point College, are the sole life of the college; we should be given the responsibility of keeping the campus safe. An increased awareness of security problems would result if students were hired as security guards. Students would feel more comfortable relating to student security guards and be more apt to report security problems.

The college could offer a security course, with college credit available for those participating in the course. The security course could cover the rules and regulations of the college, criminology, and self-defense. Upon passing the course with high marks, students would be offered jobs as security cops on campus.

Payment for student services would be less than what the campus police are presently making, thus saving the college money. Like other jobs on campus, the security police job would be offered through the Financial Aid program. There are students here at the college who are desiring part-time work which is close to the college campus; a job as a security guard could be the optimum employment for a student.

With many student security guards employed, it would be possible to have more than one guard on duty at once. This way there could be one security guard on duty in the office for emergencies and one security guard roaming around campus on foot or in the security van. It would also be possible to have one security guard on duty inside Woman's, Wesley, Yadin, and North dormitories. The aforementioned guard would keep the women's dormitories free from off-campus intruders. The increased security force would be especially beneficial on weekends, when most security problems seem to occur.

Student security police would be in good physical condition so they could easily pursue intruders and suspected thieves. It is questionable as to if the security guards which are presently employed would be able to protect themselves in an attack situation, let alone protect others in a mugging or rape situation. Student police would be much more able to take control of such a situation.

Letters to the Editor

Vegetarians Say Thanks

Dear Editor,

The members of the Vegetarian Committee and I would like to sincerely thank the High Point College students and Mr. Frank Caulfield, for their help in altering the cafeteria menu. Because of your help, the cafeteria now has available fresh fruit at all meals, cheeses and hard boiled eggs at the salad bar, yogurt and fish products more often.

Mr. Caulfield was very considerate when the Vegetarian Committee members offered suggestions for the improvement of the food services. After short consideration of the suggestions was made, improvements began immediately.

Changes in the cafeteria menu would not have taken place without the support of the dorm students. Petitions for the improvements were signed by 252 dorm students.

Thanks for the good support, both students and faculty are now enjoying the benefits of the food service changes. We greatly appreciate your assistance in our cause.

Sincerely,
Jill Christianson,
Spokesperson for the Vegetarian Committee

Jaycees Seek Members

Dear Editor:

The late Dag Hammarskjöld once said, "Never for the sake of silence deny yourself your experiences and convictions." Are you lacking the skills necessary to lead others and delegate work, and to set your goals and develop a plan to achieve them? Or would you simply like to become more skilled in leadership and management? Do you care about High Point College and the surrounding community enough to get involved? If so, you should attend the meetings of the High Point College Jaycees every Monday night at 9:30 in Meeting Room #1 of the Campus Center.

learning good management techniques and practicing these skills on Jaycee projects, you can become a stronger manager in your school life, professional life, and personal life.

In addition to being a group with high ideals and common goals, it's also a fun group. Will you consider helping us help each other and the college community in which we live? Or will you continue to sit on the sidelines and let others do the work? Will you continue to complain that there is nothing to do? There is much to be done and it must be done. I hope you'll decide to do your share and join us at our next meeting.

Sincerely,
Robert Gillis

Students Named To Who's Who

Eight High Point College students have been named to Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges. They are Jeffrey Allen Apperson, Cindy Jane Briggs, Ellen Leslie Carmine, George Robert Gillis, Catherine Martin Groom, Robert Jennings Marley, Jr., James Warren Sweeney, and Debra Grace Weber.

In selecting nominees for Who's Who, each faculty member submitted names of juniors and seniors who met the qualifications, which include scholarship ability, participation and leadership in academic and extracurricular activities, citizenship and service to High Point College, and potential for future achievement.

The Student Personnel Committee, composed of five faculty members, five administrators, and four students, made additional nominations. Each nominee was asked to submit information on extracurricular activities and grade point average. The Student Personnel Committee then selected the names of the candidates to be sent to the national headquarters of Who's Who for final verification.

Present seniors who were named to Who's Who last year are Caryn Marie Reinhart and Sandra Sue Grim.

Fall Weekend Coming

There will be new faces around campus this weekend. Prospective students will be taking part in the Annual SGA Fall Weekend. Registration for the students will begin Friday in the Campus Center. They will be staying on campus in the dorms, and will be participating in campus activities.

The activities provided this weekend will consist of an Animal House Disco and Ice Cream Social sponsored by the Student Union as well as a Co-Rec afternoon sponsored by the P.E. Majors Club. The students will also get a chance to attend the Fall Theater Production: Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie."

We are expecting approximately 75 students. So let's show our Panther spirit and answer all their questions about our campus.

Nowicki Selected To Task Force

Mrs. Louise C. Nowicki, Financial Aid Director, has been selected to serve on a Task Force for B.E.O.G. The Office of Education selected ten Financial Aid Directors in the United States to go to Washington on November 15, 16 and 17 for the purpose of studying possible ways of improving the processing of students' Basic Grant Awards. They will review past practices of qualifications, how the Office of Education determines eligibility, what items of information would result in rejection of a student, what items of information would request a review of that student's application, as well as, the kinds of information that a student must furnish to the Financial Aid Office should a review be requested. High Point College is indeed fortunate to have a representative on this important Task Force.

Theft In Dorms

their private property now. Perhaps this is due to the fact that theft is a reality and is so at the cost of the students. Police and detectives on the halls have helped to slack off the rogue-ry and have given students the understanding, according to one detective, that there is a victim, someone to do it (steal) and the opportunity.

Much can be said concerning the matter, but one student summed it up in her own words saying, "Whoever it is needs help. I think she steals from people she knows - people who won't get her back."

Controversial Tests Given

saying, "It was easy. I usually finished each test and had about five to ten minutes left on the clock. Students who have gone through eleven years of school should be able to pass the test. I think that the ones who thought it was unfair were the ones that don't want to put any effort into anything anyway. The only hard thing about it was that it about bored you to death."

The competency tests has raised quite a stir. As usual, anything new in schools usually becomes not only an educational issue, but a racial one. I believe that it is true that many schools were educationally discriminated against before forced integration; however, busing has been around for a while in North Carolina, giving equal educational opportunities for its residents, and it is a fact that textbooks do not change in content that much over a five year period.

I am inclined to agree with the student aforementioned that after eleven years and three chances of taking the test with remedial assistance if so needed, a student should be able to pass the test. Now that students know that the test will be administered to them a year before they graduate, they should have greater incentive to study harder and take their school work more seriously if they want to receive their high school diploma and not a documented sheet of attendance.

THEORY OF THE CONSTITUTION
The Constitution is the supreme law of the land. It is the foundation of the government and the rights of the people. The Constitution is a living document that has been amended many times over the years. The amendments are changes to the original Constitution that have been made by the people's representatives in Congress and the states.

Chris Larson: Frisbee Is More Than A Pastime

BY RAY DANIEL

If you've ever walked outside on a warm sunny day here at H.P.C. you've probably seen Chris Larson. She's the girl with the frisbee. But she is not the average frisbee funder.

Although Chris just began throwing seriously this summer, she was able to win a first place in the North Carolina Frisbee Festival. She threw the disc 162 feet in the women's distance competition. For winning, she received a lighted frisbee and a trophy.

Her enthusiasm is obvious. When asked how much she practices, she replied, "I play everyday, but it's never practice to me." Chris and her "frisbee partner," known as "Zeke," teach each other new techniques. But the person who has really inspired her a lot is her boyfriend, who happens to be ranked fifth on the East Coast.

Chris really enjoys the sport. She says, "Since June, I've been a fanatic about it." She uses frisbees for everything now, even for plates and to store food. She explains that some of them fit together really well, "and you can just put a sandwich in there, snap them together, and throw it into the refrigerator."

She likes several aspects of the game, such as the exercise, and being outside. She enjoys being able to play either with a group or by herself, and as a competitive sport or just for fun. Chris feels that the most enjoyable and interesting part of the game is that it is a highly social sport. "It's spontaneous. . . all you have to do is get out there throwing the frisbee around and all of a sudden you've got instant friends."

Furthermore, Chris wants to start a Frisbee Club in High Point. From asking around, she has found about forty interested people, and feels assured of having at least twenty definite members. Only $4 would be needed to gain a lifetime membership. If the club materializes, it could probably use either the Gym or Harrison Hall, on nights that they are not needed by the College, for practices and meetings. However, the club is still just a dream for Chris.

She advises beginners to "go for it." They should keep to it and branch out. They should observe the experts. "They would be amazed." In one stunt, The Canadian Mindblower, the receiver allows the frisbee to spin from the left hand, run across the front of both arms and the chest, then run behind the right hand and around the backside before catching it finally back in the left hand. "It's remarkable the things they can make a frisbee do now."

In the future, her main dream is to qualify to go to the Rose Bowl competition in California. Even if she does not qualify to play, she wants to go just to watch. The other plans after graduation for this Junior, majoring in Communications, are to take some time off and do some traveling. "Then," she says, "I'll either work in T.V. or a recording studio, and if that doesn't work, I'll join a circus!"

Mass Forced Out Of Campus Center

BY LESLIE DAVIS

The Catholic mass in the Campus Center has been relocated to the chapel. Because the Campus Center is partially funded by a loan from HUD (the Department of Housing and Urban Development), church affiliated groups may not hold meetings there.

Mr. Max Redding, Regional Attorney for HUD, stated that "the law is based on the first amendment to the Constitution. . . separation of Church and State." Therefore, the Catholic service had to be moved.

HUD has the power to foreclose the loan that funds the Campus Center if the law is not enforced. They also have the power to withdraw grants.

Mr. Redding said the law has to be enforced or HUD received enormous pressure from various liberal organizations, such as the Civil Liberties Union.

Financial Aid Workshop Scheduled

The Financial Aid Workshop scheduled for December 5, 1978, 7:00 p.m. in the Student Center Conference Room, will be for all students who presently receive financial aid or any student who is interested in making application for aid for the 1979-80 school year. The kinds of financial aid available, how to apply for financial aid, and explanation of what impact the Middle Income Assistance Act of 1978 will have with regards to eligibility will be covered. If you applied for aid and did not qualify, you will want to know that this act increases your chances considerably. The ACT Need Analysis form will be available for this meeting. It is extremely important that you make every effort to attend. The workshop is open to all students and faculty.

Wooden Speaks Out On Child Abuse

BY SUZANNE KARPPINEN

The tortured, battered, and abused. This was the topic of discussion Tuesday, November 7, when Ken Wooden addressed the student body on child abuse.

Ken Wooden is a child advocate and investigating journalist who has dealt with the problem of child abuse for many years. Wooden, himself was a problem child who was locked up and experienced many of the things he spoke on. He eventually overcame his own situation and graduated from Glassboro State College and became a high school teacher. He recently has been involved with solving the problem of child abuse.

His book, Weeping in the Playtime of Others, is based on his findings of corruption and child abuse in American detention homes. He describes the mistreatment, torture, and commercialization of children by profiteers at taxpayers' expense.

Wooden began his lecture by putting forth to the audience the fact that many of our country's maniacs and killers were at one time, children of detention homes. He cited examples such as The Boston Strangler and Charles Manson.

He described in vivid detail how innocent children who were in detention homes were thrown in solitary confinement and tear gassed for doing absolutely nothing wrong.

One detention home he spoke of was finally closed down by the federal court. This was done by much work by the FBI, as well as many federal court trials. It was discovered that from excessive mis-treatment in this particular Texas detention home, 70 boys went insane.

He went on to speak of a book titled Where Are the Children, which has sold 70 thousand copies or more. This book tells where one can pick up a teenager for sexual abuse in 50 major cities. It tells where to pick them up, the best times, the best places, and the type of child that will be there. "It is a sick book, bought and used by sick people," Wooden said.

The problem children that are abused when they are young, end up in these detention facilities eventually. The abuse that goes on within these facilities is absolutely amazing. Not only amazing in torture, but amazing because we, the taxpayers, are paying for it. It costs 2.2 million dollars a year in taxes to keep these facilities running. It costs $40,000 per child per year to keep them in these homes. This is more than a college student pays per year for school.

Wooden was a very honest speaker who kept the audience totally wrapped up in his lecture. His lecture was excellent and really made the average person think.

Wooden became interested in juvenile justice when he was on the New Jersey Prison Reform Commission.

A Tale Of Rafting On The Chattooga

BY ROBIN HENSON

Whitewater! The word brings up thoughts of "Deliverance" and danger. Fifteen High Point College students braved the rapids of the Chattooga River on Saturday, October 28. The boundary between South Carolina and Georgia, the Chattooga is the river on which parts of "Deliverance" were filmed.

Shooting down the rapids on a rubber raft, bouncing off rocks, going down a waterfall backwards, paddling for dear life - little did we know what we were in for when we signed up for this Student Union sponsored activity.

Excitement was in the air when we left for Oconee State Park on Friday afternoon. Many of the students were from out of state and had never been to the South Carolina or Georgia. We were to camp Friday night in the park and continue to Long Creek, South Carolina the next morning.

Saturday morning, we hit the road after oversleeping. Then we missed the turnoff three times, but when we finally arrived, the guides were holding the trip for us.

We were hustled out to pick up our gear. There was lots of groaning and good-natured laughing, but soon each member of our party was outfitted with a protective helmet and life vest.

We piled into the back of a pickup with our rafts and were carried to our departure point.

Anticipation mounted as we got closer to the river. We realized that Wildwater, Ltd., our guide company, had an unblemished record in five seasons of operation, but there's always a first time. . . isn't there? Who could tell what would happen? Only two people in the group had ever rafted before.

We launched our rafts in a still part of the river while we got instructions from our guides on how to maneuver the craft. We were told about safety rules.

Then we were off! We hit the first set of rapids unprepared for the thrills and challenges ahead of us. Trying to pick a path between the rocks, paddling the raft fast enough to get over the rapids without getting stuck - all were part of the fun.

When we had time to look up from our paddling, the scenery was spectacular. The skies were cloudless blue and the brilliant colors of the autumn leaves were only a little past their peak. It was true wilderness. Only two man-made structures could be seen during the whole trip.

By the time the big rapid "Bull Stice" came up, everyone pretty well had the hang of the operation. The stice is the most dangerous and by far the most exciting rapid of all. All the rafter can see is churning whitewater and rocks, then suddenly there is a four-foot waterfall that looks like you'll never live over. Several moments of expectation, one of sudden fear and then it's all over.

As the fourth mile of the seven-mile trip went by and we were close to exhaustion, the guides called for a lunch break. All the rafts were beached and everyone dug into the huge coldcut buffet lunch. Then after everyone had rested and gotten out some of the morning's kinks, we started off again.

As we continued, the rapids became rockier and needed a little finesse to get through. Sometimes we had to get out and pull the rafts through shallow areas.

Suddenly out of nowhere, a wall of water hit our raft. We looked around amazed and heard giggles from the next raft. Its occupants had started a water fight. Splashing went on the remainder of the afternoon. Every time we pulled up behind an unsuspecting raft, we drenched them with 55-degree water. We wound up wet from the socks up.

When we hit the final set of rapids, we were exhausted. But it was a tricky set and we still had enough determination to finish with a flair. We got stuck in couple of times, were drenched from the spray, but happy our trip had come to an end.

There were a lot of tired, sore students driving back to HPC, but all agreed the scenery and the excitement were worth the sore muscles and liniment which was to come later.

the 1990s, the number of people in the United States who are obese has increased by 50 percent. In 1990, 15 percent of the population was obese, and by 2000, that number had risen to 23 percent. The increase in obesity is not limited to the United States. In fact, the prevalence of obesity has increased in every country in the world, with the most dramatic increases occurring in developing countries. In 1975, only 1 percent of the world's population was obese, but by 2000, that number had risen to 10 percent. The increase in obesity is a global phenomenon, and it is a major public health concern. Obesity is a leading cause of heart disease, diabetes, and other chronic diseases. It is also a leading cause of disability and premature death. The World Health Organization (WHO) has declared obesity a global epidemic, and it is calling for action to prevent and treat obesity. The WHO has developed a set of guidelines for the prevention and treatment of obesity, and it is calling for governments to take action to implement these guidelines. The WHO is also calling for more research on the causes of obesity and on effective ways to prevent and treat it. The increase in obesity is a complex problem, and it requires a multifaceted approach to address it. We need to understand the causes of obesity, and we need to develop effective ways to prevent and treat it. We need to change our diet and our lifestyle, and we need to create an environment that supports healthy choices. We need to work together to prevent and treat obesity, and we need to make sure that everyone has access to the resources they need to do so.

Glass Menagerie Starts This Week

BY ARNOLD HENDRIX

It has been said that the mark of a good song is that it keeps coming back year after year. Maybe, the same can be true for theater plays as the college gears up for its first mainstage production of the year, THE GLASS MENAGERIE.

The play will open tonight in the auditorium beginning at 8:15 p.m. and will run through Saturday night. Admission is $1.50 for students and $3.00 for the public.

"It's an American Classic that people have been doing since it first hit Broadway," said Mr. Forrester, a faculty member of the Theater Department and director of the play, "and one hundred years from now, people will still be doing the play."

THE GLASS MENAGERIE first hit Broadway in the early fifties and was later made into a film. It was written by Tennessee Williams in 1947 and was his first outstanding public play.

Forrester describes the play as a domestic melodrama, meaning it centers around private lives of people and has a serious content.

There are four main characters: Amanda (mother), played by Pat May; Tom (son), played by Craig Meisner; Laura (daughter), played by Heide Swartztraub; and Jim played by Mark DeFranco.

Being basically a depression story, the plot briefly involves the efforts of the mother to hold the son at home in order to have him support the family until she can find a husband for the crippled daughter.

"The play was selected because it is well known, can be easily produced, and has been around for a long time," said Forrester, "and I think everyone will find it a very entertaining evening."

The play is also scheduled to be entered into the American College Theater Festival. Two judges will be present from the festival and if the play comes off well enough, High Point College may be selected to take the show to Athens, Georgia on the campus of the University of Georgia at Athens for the regional festival.

THE GLASS MENAGERIE will be the third theatre production put on the HPC campus this fall. The other two were student productions of UNDER MILKWOOD and two Woody Allen short plays in the Empty Space Theatre at the old student center.

College Bowl Begins

BY KIM DARDEN

"The variety sport of the mind," COLLEGE BOWL, which enjoyed popularity as a T.V. and radio quiz game from 1952-1970 is coming to High Point. The game is making a rapid comeback; earlier this year hundreds of U.S. college students participated in COLLEGE BOWL, competing for $32,500.00 in scholarship cash awards. Sixteen regional champions won all-expense paid trips to Miami Beach in the College Bowl National and World Championship Tournament during COLLEGE BOWL week. Stanford College won the National Championship and $5,000.00 in cash.

Competition began November 13 at the intramural level and will lead to intercollegiate competition in February. Four students (each one representing a major) will make up each intramural team, along with a coach (faculty member) and one alternate.

Funds Head SGA Discussion

BY NANCY REICHEL

The last student legislative meeting began with a slide presentation concerning the library fund by Julie Gaines and Mark Nissen. The fund drive is being conducted by the public relations and finance class. Their goal is $15,000.

A letter has been sent to prospective students concerning fall weekend, Nov. 17-19. Many campus activities will take place to involve these prospective students. A meeting will be held today, Nov. 15 for all those who want to help with the weekend.

Caryn Reinhart vetoed the bill passed by legislature at the previous meeting to fund the Run-for-Fun club. Reinhart stated that the club had adequate time to raise funds, that they were not actually representing HPC in races, and that they only have 15 "semi-active" members. A motion was made to hold a revote on the bill in attempt to override the veto. The motion was tabled, however, because of a question in the club's charter.

Jacki Hendrix, attorney general of the SGA and Teresa Martin, vice-president of ADT, moved to pass an act to establish funding for the ADT service sorority. The motion, however, was not recognized by Speaker Norris Woody. Before the meeting, Norris secured the information from Mr. Earle Dalbey, Vice-President of Financial Affairs at HPC, that the school does not fund any sororities or fraternities because they do not appeal to everyone. Also, ADT's charter states that it is open only to females, so SGA could not fund it. The group is considering revising their charter.

A total of 19 traffic tickets have been tried in three sessions of court. Eleven were upheld, and eight voided. Mr. Cope, Dr. Wheelless, Ms. Burton, and Dr. Patterson have been selected as the faculty members of the supreme court.

A motion was made concerning the providing of information booklets concerning incoming freshmen. Panhellenic is already considering this project so the idea was put under the legislation committee to see what they are doing.

Also represented at the meeting were some of the frisbee players to defend themselves and declare that frisbee playing is enjoyed by all. The players have recently been reprimanded for breaking windows and injuring cars.

Soap Opera Comes To HPC

BY LINDA CAIN

Illegitimacy, adultery, and family drama can be found at HPC in the Old Student Center at 7:00 p.m. on December 4, 1978.

The TV and Radio class will present their version of a daytime drama entitled "Screech For Tomorrow." The show is the culmination of a semester's work on the various phases of the electronic media.

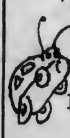

"Screech for Tomorrow" is the story of Joan, played by Kathy Wolfe, and Susan, played by Chris Larson; who are neighbors and best friends. Throughout the drama, Joan is obsessed with the thought that a cup of coffee and a piece of good gossip can cure anything. Susan, on the other hand, knows everything about everybody that is fit and unfit to tell. The show also features Wendy Stewart as Mary, Susan's opponent in the Garden Club election; Glen Jones as John, Mary's husband; and Ken Godfrey as Joan's husband, Tom.

The show will be directed by Myra Williams, who directed the Fall Studio production of Under Milkwood by Dylan Thomas.

Everyone is invited to attend.

Students Attend Poetry Festival

BY LINDA CAIN

Writing means finding a new way to do the old and never being ashamed of your creativity. These were the ideas expressed in the panel discussion last Friday at the Phoenix Poetry Festival.

The Festival was attended by nearly 130 area high school students. Students participated in several workshops dealing in fiction and poetry lead by Dr. Marion Hodge of Piedmont College in Georgia; Ms. Sally Buchner, writer-in-residence at Peace College in Raleigh, North Carolina; and Dr. Thomas Walters of North Carolina State University in Raleigh.

All poems and short stories submitted to the Festival were judged. The winners were The Phoenix Award-William Kenne; Dave Fairly Award-Chip Aldridge and James Groce, both students at High Point College; and the Doris Betts Fiction Award-Mary Ganther. Special Awards went to James Groce, Robin Newell, and Gina Mariett, all of High Point College, for their work on the Festival.

An evening Poetry Reading was given by the American poet, Charles Simic. Simic has published numerous volumes of Poetry, his latest of which is Charon's Cosmology (1977). He has also published numerous translations of French, Russian, and Yugoslavian poetry. Simic is currently on the faculty at the University of New Hampshire.

Verna smells like mountain oaks -- a cousin come to stay awhile with a slightly balding spot a hat would hide;

she straightens her skirt with an awkward dignity of another age -- when she rode with stately dark deguerreotype parents in horse drawn rig to the family home of dark varnished beaded panelling, marble fire places and wicker porch planters.

Verna smells of lamp oil
a dozen years old, and has a pillow of quilted squares that is a memory of mother and grandmother by a warm stove kitchen winter fire; an evening before darkness forced back the family light.

Shyly she joins in a few meals and hardly answers a direct question -- just a cousin come to stay awhile; until a resting place with parents is more suitable.

Soccer Bows in District Finishes Season 5-11

BY GREG NORRIS

The High Point College soccer team ended the season with a 3-2 loss to Guilford College last Tuesday in the first round of the District 26 playoffs.

The Panthers, who were fourth in the conference and seeded sixth overall in the tournament, scored first on a goal by Jeff Sloan, a freshman from Bowie, Maryland. Guilford then tied the score with five minutes remaining in the first half and took the lead for good with two goals in the first three minutes of the second half of play.

The team finished the year with an overall 5-11 record and was in scoring by Tony Nielubowicz with eight goals and four assists to his credit.

Captain Walter Roe said that it was a very disappointing season but a season that will prove beneficial in future years.

Roe, a junior, stated Coach Gibson and Coach Mahler are much more organized than past coaches. Anytime there is a coaching change it will be hard to adjust.

"The team had as much, if not more, talent than teams in the past but did not get any breaks," Roe said. The team, because of the inexperience of the young players, made simple mental errors that hurt us."

According to the captain, transfer Larry Morris, Jeff Sloan, and Ralph Barnes really started to play their game by the end of the season and should help the Panthers in the future.

"After playing together all season, the defense," said Roe, "has hopefully ironed out all their problems and can be tougher next year." Chris Hohnhold and Paul Lessard were the stalwarts of the defense.

What the Panthers need for next year are some confident players that can put the ball in the net.

Roe's feelings were that even though it was a disappointing season record wise, the guys on the team were the best I ever played with.

The only person that is graduating is co-captain Todd Miller. He will be sorely missed but Mike Bradley has begun to fill in well. Bradley had 36 saves, 50 goals scored on him per game and had two shut-outs to his credit.

Miller felt that it should have been a more productive year. The team was young, well-skilled, and expected to do better. The problems this season were a combination of inexperience of both coaches and players.

Gibson did as well as could have been expected, Miller said, as a first year coach. The fact that Gibson lacked experience and knowledge of the game hurt the team in some aspects, but Mahler helped pick up the loose ends. After learning a lot from their first year, the coaches will do a better job in coming years.

"I would like to thank those fans that faithfully followed HPC soccer, for their dedication," in making my four years of playing soccer more enjoyable," Miller stated. "Also I'd like to thank the players over the last four years for sharing and teaching me the game of soccer."

After a rebuilding season, the Panthers are expected to have a stable foundation to progress with next year.

Spikers Sweep State Title

BY IRISH GAYMON

For the third straight year the High Point girls volleyball team captured the state title. Tournament play began last Friday, at East Carolina in Greenville, N.C.

The Lady Panthers' first game was a 2 out of 3 match against Elon. High Point came away with a straight win of 15-2, 15-6. The girls then played Pembroke where again they scored a straight win 15-6, 15-6. These games ended the first day of tournament play for the Panthers.

Coach Briley felt good about all of their winnings during the first day. But the girls still had the Lady Quakers of Guilford to contend with. The Panthers looked very well prepared for this game, winning 15-7, 15-4. Defeating Guilford meant a place in the finals for the Lady Panthers.

The match was a 2 out of 3 game win with the winner advancing to the Regionals with a good overall tournament win.

The Championship game matched the Lady Panthers against Lenoir Rhyne. The first match was won by Lenoir Rhyne 15-6, and the girls from Lenoir Rhyne appeared ready to take the state title from High Point, but the Lady Panthers came back for a 15-1, 15-3 win.

Senior Ethel White and Junior Marie Riley were selected to the All Tournament team.

The Panthers entered the state tournament with 33-5 record and were top-seeded in the event because of a 10-0 division record.

High Point will advance to the Regionals Nov. 16-18 at Frances Marion. For the past two years, High Point has finished 9th and 10th in the nation.

Incredible Ethel

Good things never die, they just get better. This is a statement that well describes Senior Ethel White. A student and athlete from Greensboro, N.C., she has contributed a lot to the building of High Point's women's athletics.

Her career started with volleyball in which she feels she has excelled tremendously. "Playing a little bit more with enthusiasm and getting better involved mentally has been my biggest goal this year," Ethel said. "My freshman year was a building year, perfecting my playing abilities to play on the college level. For example, my spiking techniques had to be changed so that I could get on top of the ball better." Volleyball has grown considerably and I'm proud to have been a part of that growing process." Her making the All-State and All-Conference was a big thrill and accomplishment during her years of volleyball at H.P.C.

Ethel is known as one of the hardest hitters in the state and phenomenal player on the court. She was chosen to the All-Tournament team for Carolinas Conference and State Tournament.

Her talents don't stop at volleyball but contribute to basketball as well. She feels that this year's basketball team could and should do as well as last year's. "I have a very positive attitude about playing the best I can and about the team overall," states Ethel. She wants to be able to contribute herself fully to the team mentally and physically. Says Ethel, "The biggest and most exciting was the first time I made All-American. I wasn't expecting it to happen." After making All-American for the second year in a row she felt that it was a great honor to accept the recognition. "I feel I was not playing for myself but for the team as a whole."

The future for Ethel consists of first graduating then looking into the prospects of playing pro-ball. If able to play she will continue as long as she is young and able. States Ethel, "If this doesn't work out I'll try my hand at coaching, preferably college teams. "But before I'm able to do this I would like to assistant coach and work on my master's at the same time." "Job offers play a major roll in my future. "I'll miss the college life but I feel I'm able to venture out and face the world with my well acquired knowledge."

A NIGHT AT THE OPERA

The Marx Brothers are at their peak as they deliver their unique satire on the pomp and circumstance surrounding grand opera. Groucho, with dubious assistance from his brothers, crosses the ocean with an Italian opera company and contrives to get two young sisters a break. Their best foil, dowager Margaret Dumont, is a patron of the arts who is completely captivated/controlled by them. Groucho's stateroom sequence and Harpo's backstage chase have been termed comedy. 92 mins. PG

Winterterm Conference

Humanics Students Will Head For California In January

BY KIM DARDEN

While you're passing your time quietly and domestically over Christmas break -- sitting by the fireplace, watching the football play-offs, or shopping for after-Christmas bargains, think of the American Humanics Students.

While we sleep until noon everyday and wake up to find our yards covered with snow, they'll be waking up at seven sharp to the sound of the surf and a penthouse view of the sunny shores of the Pacific Ocean.

Their Annual National American Humanics Winter term Conference is to be held at Pacific Grove, California at Asilomar Conference Grounds, just 40 yards away from that shining blue jewel, the Pacific. The group of seventeen Junior and Senior Humanics Students will jet cross-country from here of January 2 and return to High Point via Los Angeles on the seventh.

The Humanics Students involved in the trip are studying to enter careers in youth service organizations and voluntary agencies such as Scouts, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Red Cross, and Boy's/Girl's Clubs of America. They belong to the American Humanics Student Association on campus, which meets every other week and provides career counseling, job placement, activities such as field trips to volunteer agencies in the community, and workshops with professional guest speakers. This week, for instance, a YMCA executive from Atlanta will speak to the group at their bi-monthly workshop.

"It (the Humanics Association) is really outstanding training for us," says Mark McIntyre, a senior who is possibly entering a career with Boy's Clubs when he graduates. And the California-bound Humanics Students seem to make a habit of traveling to beautiful places. Each Fall they hold a retreat at Camp Cheerio in Roaring Gap, N.C. Last year, the Winterterm Conference was held in the mountains of the Blue Ridge Parkway, and next year, a possible site is Colorado. Only ten schools across the country have an American Humanics program. Those ten schools will be attending the Winterterm Conference, a regular part of the Humanics program.

The students preparing for the conference are looking forward to the trip--and for other reasons besides the obvious one.

Donna Eisnagle, a senior who attended the conference last year, says of the event, "It gives you a lot of extra insight and information you just can't get in class. People who have jobs like we're gonna get into speak to us and what they have to say really helps." Donna is a senior who has a job in Pittsburgh as an Explorer Executive waiting for her when she graduates. "And I'm really looking forward to getting back together with the people I met last year," she continues. "It's really something -- ten schools from all over the United States, and everyone is interested in the same thing. It's such an easy feeling, or something, to be there with people like yourself who care about youth and want to see them have a chance. It's a great feeling, it really is."

Student Charged With Turkey Theft

BY RAY DANIEL

A 25-30 pound turkey was taken from the college's cafeteria on the night of November 15. One student has been charged for the theft. Event though payment for the turkey has been received from the accused, charges are still being pressed by Dean Guy.

The student allegedly violated two rules of the Student Handbook. The first appears in the Ethics Code of the Student Government Association, Section VII. This prohibits anyone from taking into his possession articles owned by the college or by another person. The second violation is found in the eighteenth rule of the General Rules of the College which says, "Students may not take food, trays, dishes, glasses, or silverware from the cafeteria." The student chose to be tried by the Supreme Court, rather than having the case processed by the Dean of Students. If he is found guilty, he may receive no less than three weeks or up to one semester of suspension. However, if extenuating circumstances are discussed with the Chief Justice, the sentence may be lightened.

Dean Guy believed that it is the duty and responsibility of his office to press these charges. He feels, that in these cases, he must go by the handbook. This must be done, "to maintain a sense of community in the college." Dean Guy says that he wants only "whatever is fair."

He wants the students to understand that he does not go out and hunt for these instances, but when they are brought to him, he cannot ignore them. He "has no choice but to go by the book!"

Even though several people are suspected to have been involved with the accused, there is not sufficient evidence to charge anyone else. At this time, no further investigations are visible.

Rediscovering Christmas

Taking the Pricetag Out

Christmas. What does it really mean anymore? It means spending approximately $10 billion yearly on United States Christmas consumption. It means worrying for three weeks about what you should get your great Uncle Henry in Idaho that you haven't seen in the last seven years. It means wiping out the checkbook account that you built up all summer at Sears. It means out-doing your brother's gift to mom with your own.

In case you haven't noticed, Christmas isn't Christmas anymore. There's nothing religious about shopping from August to December for gifts that aren't needed anyway. There's not even anything fun about being pushed through the mall by a mob of people. In fact, there are very few people around these days that truly experience the real meaning of Christmas. Children are born into the world everyday that never understand anything more about it than Santa Claus and eggnog.

Christmas? It is all that it shouldn't be. It should be a non-commercialized, unexploited time of the year when the greatest gift under the tree is concern for fellow man. Christmas should become a time of reasoning and concern for universal peace and compromise. It should become a time of sincere care and love for family, friends and strangers. Finally, it should become a time when each individual contemplates his own existence and thanks his maker for all that he has.

Christmas is a time for sharing, but this idea has been so badly blown out of proportion that it has become a socially distorted concept of materialism. Sharing is of spirit -- not of pocketbook.

As this holiday season nears, I would like to encourage each of you to seek new meaning in Christmas. Take part in an Alternative Movement, or organize one of your own. Better yet, give a gift of love to all around you and try to bring to your loved ones an understanding that Christmas greetings cannot be found on a price tag, but only in the heart. I wish to you all a new awakening of the heart and mind.

Interim's Benefits To Be Missed

BY SUZANNE KARPINEN

No interim! . . . NO INTERIM??? The elimination of interim for the '78-'79 term seems to be a popular topic for discussion among the upper classmen. But why the controversy if the administration has already decided to do away with interim?

Even though interim has been abolished it seems that the majority of the student body feel we should still have it.

Interim was a period when many different and beneficial classes were offered that could not be conducted during the normal school year. It always offered the student a chance to travel or to take classes that were very useful to a particular major. The classes offered at interim were always very thought provoking because the classes were taken every day. By taking a specific class everyday for a month, one becomes more involved in their class and therefore learns much more.

Another reason interim was such a useful time was it offered freshmen students a chance to get adjusted to college life. With interim in effect, the maximum hours one could enroll in for first semester was 15. This was very helpful to freshmen students who need a lighter schedule their first semester in order to adapt to college life.

Talking with many of the students on campus, I found that the majority of the students found interim to be a definite beneficial learning experience. Most students feel that being able to take the same class everyday for a month is much more profitable than taking a variety of classes at once. Many students also felt that the opportunity of traveling that was offered at interim could never be replaced by a simple class.

Although the administration feels interim was nothing but a time for students to party and waste time, the advantage of interim outweighs its downsides. Even though a lot of students didn't take full advantage of interim the majority of the students did. What one puts into a class is what one gets out of a class, and during interim a student could get much more out of a class than during a semester course.

Sure, there will always be people who party and get by on as little as possible, but these same students party throughout the semester as well as through times such as interim.

I feel the administration should reconsider interim because its many benefits surely overthrew its minor pitfalls.

Give Yourself As A Christmas Present

BY JILL CHRISTIANSON

A teenager asked her older sister what she wanted for Christmas. She responded that she wanted Love, Peace, and Understanding for Christmas.

The gift first seemed as though it was a joke, yet there was true thought behind the request. Christmas is often so materialistic, that people seem to forget the ideals of life in the bustle of Christmas shopping. Selfish thoughts block one's concerns for others.

Try to imagine a Christmas without materialistic wants. What would one give instead of store-bought gifts? A good conversation, a poem, or the act of volunteering for an organization would be good gifts.

There are many ways for one to show her/his feelings towards others. One way would be to sit down with a friend or loved one in a warm, comfortable situation.

Talk openly about your feelings towards others. "Hygge" is the Danish word for circumstances like this. The end result is a beautiful, warm feeling towards the other person. This would be a very memorable Christmas gift, especially between a young person and her/his parents.

Poetry is a good mode of expression. The more difficult it is to write poetry, the more meaningful the poem will be for both parties. Write a poem on the meaning of love or friendship, the poem will surely be cherished by the recipient.

The gift of change is one which many people can benefit from. Take time to volunteer for a cause which you believe strongly about and tell a friend why you are doing it. Great social change could occur if more people actively supported the causes which they believed in.

Spend some time volunteering for NORML (National Organization to Reform Marijuana Laws), UNICEF, and ACLU (American Civil Liberties Union). Helping these organizations will provide a better understanding of the cause and in the long run will help others across the nation and in other countries.

Volunteering could be done on a local level also. Visiting elderly people, the mentally retarded, and underprivileged children would be good projects in town. There are many who need to be reached out to, who are in need of a friend.

These unusual Christmas gifts involve the giving of oneself towards the cause. A good conversation, a poem, gifts of social change are ones which are often well remembered by the recipient and the giver. These are gifts of Love, Peace, and Understanding.

Christmas Service To Be Held

The Service of Lessons and Carols will be held on December 6th at 7:00 p.m. in Hayworth Chapel. This is a service that is based on the traditional observance held each year at King's College in Cambridge, England. The service will include nine lessons to be read by various members of our college community, and will also include the singing of carols and several pieces of music performed by the High Point College Choir and High Point College Singers. Dr. James Elson will be the director of music. Mrs. Pat Moore May will be the organist, and Teresa Williams will be pianist. Since this is our major observance for the Christmas season, everyone is invited to come and take part.

The Service of Lessons and Carols will follow the annual Christmas dinner to be served in the dining room from 5:00 - 6:15 p.m.

Taking the February Quiz

Abstract: This study examined the effects of a 12-week, 1000 kcal energy deficit diet on body composition, energy expenditure, and metabolic rate in 10 obese women. The diet was designed to provide 1000 kcal less than the estimated energy requirement. Body composition was measured by dual energy x-ray absorptiometry (DEXA) at baseline and after 12 weeks. Energy expenditure was measured by indirect calorimetry at baseline and after 12 weeks. Metabolic rate was measured by indirect calorimetry at baseline and after 12 weeks. The results showed that the diet was effective in reducing body weight and body fat. Energy expenditure and metabolic rate were also reduced after 12 weeks. The study suggests that a 1000 kcal energy deficit diet is an effective intervention for weight loss in obese women.

There are good things in STAINLESS STEEL for the food industry. For example, stainless steel is resistant to corrosion and is easy to clean. It is also strong and durable. And it is safe for food contact. So, stainless steel is a great choice for food processing equipment. It is used in everything from food storage containers to food processing machinery. And it is a great choice for food service equipment, too. It is used in everything from food storage containers to food service equipment. And it is a great choice for food service equipment, too.

Semester Is Drawing To A Close

BY BOB LOWDERMILK
Student Personnel Office

As the twelfth page of the calendar appears before us, we are reminded that the arrival of December means many things to different people. Everyone is keenly aware of the anticipation of Christmas and all of the things that are done to prepare for it. For those of us in higher education, December signals the near-completion of the first semester of the academic year, with its flurry of last classes, cramming for final exams, and occasional celebrations of the season with others. As we move toward the conclusion of the fall term, several things come to mind that we would like to share with you.

One of the major concerns, if not the major concern for all of us this semester, has been that of campus security. Thefts of personal property within residence halls and from automobiles have prompted energetic attempts to evaluate our situation and consider the best possible means of reducing theft and destruction on campus. Student Personnel staff members have been involved during the past three weeks with others in the college administration in an attempt to bring to light the facts of the matter and to suggest means of improving the security of buildings and automobiles. The Student Government Association has been one vehicle for input into the matter, and a variety of possibilities have been discussed and reviewed. Matters related to the purchase of additional communications equipment and additional staff persons for security have been mentioned on several occasions and are still being pursued. Hopefully we will be able to see some results from all of the talks in the very near future.

All of us realize that security within the residence halls is a matter for students themselves to consider. We cannot possibly have a campus security force that is able to be at every door of a woman's residential complex after lock-up hours, and for this reason we appeal to students to help us reduce potential problems by observing the guidelines for the use of certain doors after hours. It does no good to lock a door only to have it propped open or left opened once someone has used a late night key. We recognize, also, that students have been most helpful to us in identifying off-campus automobiles and other evidences of unusual activity regarding auto thefts. We commend students who have aided our security and the city police in the efforts to patrol and watch parking lots. The students are our best security initially, and the hope is that additional measures can be taken to strengthen the overall effort at securing lives and properties.

Appreciation for student involvement in other campus activities is offered for the work done to host prospective students during "Fall Weekend" in November. We find that increasing numbers of prospective students who decide to attend High Point College point to the warm and friendly reception given by our students. To those of you who worked to plan and carry out "Fall Weekend," and to all of you who work to welcome visiting prospective students, we thank you. Certainly, we look forward to upcoming activities of a similar nature in the Spring and to the opportunity to work together to strengthen the student body of the college.

The involvement of Student Personnel in the total range of college activities prompts us to recognize the involvement of persons in many areas of college life. It is exciting to see the response of students in service oriented projects on campus, and particularly to note the response of students to the library fund campaign. It is encouraging to see healthy competition in the College Bowl program and to see the involvement of so many persons in student government, residence hall government, intramurals, and similar activities.

Nearing the end of the semester means that some of our students will be completing degree requirements in December. For persons who will graduate this month, we encourage you to make use of the resources and expertise of the Career Planning and Placement Office. A variety of opportunities await you if you will take the time to use them. Resume writing, placement information, and additional types of assistance are available, along with study guides for everyone facing final exams! Be watching for the occasional "Career Planning Bulletin" distributed for your information. These provide information on many full and part-time employment positions.

Related to the end of the semester is the matter of making changes in room assignments. We always anticipate a number of persons who will leave due to graduation, and the desire of others to make changes in their room assignments. Should you desire to make a change, or if you will be leaving after the fall semester, please see your Resident Counselor so that we can prepare for your move and have a better idea of the number of empty spaces for the Spring term.

Of course, it seems that everyone's time is taken up with studying for exams during the final days of the semester. However, we would encourage you to take time as it is available to think about the celebration of Christmas, and to take part in the activities that have been planned for our campus observances, most notably the service on December 6th and the caroling event on December 10th.

All of us in the Student Personnel area wish for you the best of everything in completing your semester's work. Please let any of us know if there is a need with which we can assist. It is indeed a pleasure to work with you.

Fall Weekend Termed Successful

BY STEPHANIE HIGGINS

Congratulations is at hand for Jorge Lagueruela and the SGA for the success of their Annual Fall Weekend. Forty-two prospective students from surrounding high schools as well as many from out of state, took part in the festivities of the weekend.

The support of campus organizations and the time given by committee members were major contributing factors in making the weekend a success. Opportunities for the students to experience first hand what the college was about were given by the faculty's cooperation in allowing the students to attend classes on Friday, and the students on campus unselfishly lending out their rooms. Social events scheduled for the students included the Animal House Disco and Ice Cream Social sponsored by the Student Union, Co-Rec afternoon sponsored by the P.E. Major's Club, and the opportunity to attend the Fall Theatre Production, "The Glass Menagerie." There was a nice turnout for each of these activities, and all who were involved were pleased by the pleasant and informal atmosphere of the weekend.

Fall Weekend was a definite plus for the campus as the Admissions Office has gotten good feedback from these students. Preparations are now under way for Spring Weekend which will be held on March 23rd and 24th. As a greater number of students are expected to attend, it is important that we, being students at High Point and an important source of recruitment, are aware of this up-coming weekend in the Spring.

See if you can find your way to the bottom of the stocking to the present.

December Is Drawing To A Close

As the year draws to a close, the jewelry industry is looking forward to a busy Christmas season. Many jewelers are reporting a steady increase in sales since the beginning of the year. The holiday season is expected to be particularly successful for those who offer a wide variety of jewelry and gifts.

The jewelry industry is a significant part of the retail sector, and its performance is closely watched by economists. The industry's success in the coming months will depend on a variety of factors, including consumer spending habits and the availability of goods.

Jewelers are also looking for ways to attract customers and increase sales. Many are offering special promotions and discounts to encourage shoppers to visit their stores. Some are also investing in advertising and marketing campaigns to reach a wider audience.

Overall, the jewelry industry is optimistic about the future. With the right strategies and a focus on customer service, jewelers can expect a successful Christmas season.

Tower Players Try Their Hand At Classic Play

BY LINDA CAIN

Tennessee Williams' play, "Glass Menagerie" is one of illusion. It is a drama composed of memory, sentiment, and compassion.

The play featured the fine acting talents of Pat May, Craig Messner, Heidi Swartztrauber, and Mark LaFranco. It was directed by James Forster, the newest member of the High Point College theater department.

Williams' play concerns a young handicapped girl, Laura (Heidi Swartztrauber) who lives in a world of her own. Her world is one of old phonograph records left to her and her family by their father when he left, and an array of glass animals — Laura's "glass menagerie." Laura's mother, Amanda (Pat May) is always wishing that Laura would have a gentleman caller. She is constantly reminiscing about her days in Blue Mountain and how popular she was with the young men there. She asks her son, Tom (Craig Messner), to find some nice young man at the place where he works to come over and get acquainted with Laura. Tom is like a father image to his sister. He understands her condition and is sympathetic to her needs. Despite his compassion to Laura, he resents his mother's constant talk about the past. He dreams of leaving home and joining the merchant marines.

The catalyst in the play is the gentleman caller, Jim, played by Mark LaFranco. Jim brings Laura out of her shell, but in doing so he breaks one of her class animals. Laura's world is shattered.

The action of the play is set in the past and Tom is the link. He is seen as the Narrator (merchant marine) and family member. His role is like that of the Narrator in Thornton Wilder's "Our Town," except for the fact that he is an integral part of the play.

Forster's rendition of this Classic lacked a unity between cast members. They were four separate people performing four separate roles. Throughout the production there was a lack of audience involvement. The audience knew they were watching a play and reality was not suspended.

The lighting was good when it was on. Cues were missed and the set appeared to be inadequately lighted at times.

The play was by no means spectacular. The cast and crew appeared to have very little theatrical experience, but they all must be commended for trying.

Library Fund Exceeds Goal

BY LESLIE DAVIS

After a vigorous week of campaigning, High Point College will finally receive a new library. The campaigning should be attributed to many caring individuals, but most of all to the aggressive Public Relations and Finance class taught by Mr. Price.

It all began as a learning experience for the class. They were told to raise money for a cause on campus. After discussion, it was decided that a new library was in great demand. Therefore, a campaign was launched to raise $15,000 from November 8-16.

At first it seemed impossible. Since the fund raising was limited to one week, the students had to work extra hard and personally approach others for donations. There were various slide presentations to show the University of North Carolina-Greensboro and Guilford Technical Institute's libraries. The slides convinced many students that High Point definitely needed a new library.

Certain guidelines were set. It began with the initial funding of $4,000 from the faculty. Any organization that donated over $1,000 was rewarded an engraved plaque to be hung in their honor in the new library.

Many campus organizations participated and contributed to the cause. The response was overwhelming. Pledge's were coming in left and right from the students, faculty and staff members. They were accepted in any amount and quarterly, monthly or yearly payments were available over a three year term. As a result of the enthusiastic response, $22,959 was raised. Thanks is due to the people who were so supportive.

The machine was stripped of its merchandise and was partially destroyed in the process. Thoughtless acts of this kind have taken place before all over the campus. [Photo by Steve Lewis]

Rash Of Break-Ins Hit HPC

BY LINDA CAIN

"Students are the best security we've got," is the conclusion reached by Lt. Don Walton, head of security at High Point College, after a series of automobile break-ins on campus. The thefts totaled approximately $1500. Much of it took place in the parking lot behind Belk Dormitory.

"Most of the items taken were in-dash radios and FM stereo receivers," according to Walton.

Many times these thefts could be prevented if students had been more alert. If a student sees a suspicious person, they should get in touch with security and, if they cannot be reached, the student should notify their resident counselor, who will know how to reach security.

"It is important to let someone know before it is too late," said Lt. Walton. He advised students to put their social security or driver's license number on all valuables, especially CB radios, and to write down the serial number appearing on their in-dash radios. He also stressed putting some type of identifying mark on hub caps.

Checking one's car every day and removing all valuables is essential to guard against theft.

Security Topic Of SGA Meeting

BY NANCY REICHLE

The issue of campus security dominated the Nov. 21 meeting of student legislature. Rev. Job Lowdermilk and Dr. Murphy Osborne spoke to the legislature regarding the problem of security. The recent security interest resulted from the vandalizing of five cars in the parking lot behind Belk dorm during the weekend of Nov. 17-19.

Rev. Lowdermilk, in speaking to the body, emphasized two major problems: the problem with off campus people and internal problems such as theft in the dorms. Rev. Lowdermilk also stressed that students must help and share in the responsibility of security. He especially emphasized the closing of the late doors in the women's dormitory complex.

Dr. Osborne reported that the school plans to study the security systems of other schools. He also mentioned the murder and rape incident at Florida State University of last year to make students aware of the personal responsibility of security. He stated that he was more concerned with people than CB's.

The legislature itself passed a resolution proposed by Mike Showalter, pro-tem. It stated that the legislature wished to see the campus security of HPC improved in the following areas: more equipment for the security force, additional full time security guards for each work shift, and better lighting at frequently walked locations on campus. It further stated that the Administration should take immediate action to implement these improvements and continue to do whatever is necessary to provide above average, if not superior security for the campus and students of HPC.

Also, Caryn Reinhart presented an act to amend the constitution of the SGA. The amendment concerns Article VI, Section L of the constitution. As amended it would state: "The executive council shall decide on all money matters of the student government treasury up to fifty dollars. Amounts over fifty dollars shall require both a 2/3 vote of the legislature and passage in the executive council. Amendments require two readings before voting so the motion was tabled until the next meeting.

The legislature also decided to fund the Run-for-Fun club, an issue which has been pending for several weeks and is tentatively planning a Security Emphasis week for January 22-29.

College Bowl Update

The last College Bowl game of the semester was held Monday night, December 4. So far, the student response to the competition has been positive. "There has been more interest than I thought," said Tom Burke, director of the Student Activities.

JOIN THE ALTERNATIVE SANTA CLAUS MOVEMENT

ALTERNATIVES, a lifestyle education group, is sponsoring a nationwide Alternative Christmas campaign this year. The Campaign will be protesting the commercialization of Christmas, and publicizing the more human and socially responsible ways to celebrate, work and live. The Campaign is also encouraging people to divert money from over-consumption at Christmas to projects and organizations dealing directly with human needs and social change.

As part of the Campaign, the half-satirical/half serious "Alternative Santa Claus Movement" is hunting for hundreds - and hopefully thousands - of students, activists and church people to go out to communities and campuses to spread the word about the Alternative Christmas idea.

Become a Santa Claus with a cause, and help make this year's Christmas a meaningful and socially responsible celebration. Write or call us today: National Alternative Celebrations Campaign, 1500 Farragut St., NW, Washington, DC 20011; (202) 723-8273.

Ghost Inhabits Theatre

Herschel Believed To Still Be Present

BY RAY DANIEL

He's there; creaking in the strange and lonely shadows of HPC's theater. He is Herschel Farquar, the usually friendly, but mischievous, ghost of the theater.

As legend has it, the ghost, which can be best described as a poltergeist, came originally to High Point's theater with a theater professor, named Carolyn Rauch. She was head of the department about five years before Dave Christovich took over. When she left the college, some claim that she took Herschel with her, but others believe that he remained and recent happenings tend to support them.

Several people have "experienced" strange things in the theater, especially when they were alone, late at night. Footsteps, (not regular footsteps), have been heard coming down the aisles by many. Robin Henson says that these are not caused by the heating system or the building settling, because she is familiar with these noises. Locked doors sound as if they have been opened, and seats out in the house seem to open with no one present. Some students, such as Chip Aldridge and some former graduates, are believed to be able to carry on conversations with the ghost. They ask him questions, to which he replies with creaks and pops in certain parts of the theater. If he wants a person to leave him, he makes the building dead quiet.

Other than these noises, other strange things happen. Articles are always being lost and then they turn up in the wierdest places. Light switches get flipped off when no one is around; head sets go off for no reason; and other things go wrong with no normal explanations possible.

More than these events, which may be explained by some skeptics as normal settlings or coincidences, Herschel's presence has been felt in ways which can hardly be dismissed so easily. Meetings in the theater with Ouija boards have had some success with communicating with Herschel. Chip Aldridge said that one time Herschel told a group that he did not like one of the members being there. That member had previously been drinking. They later found out from some older believers that he did not like for people to come into the theater who were high or had been drinking. His presence has been felt by several people, such as Myra Williams, as a cold cylindrical mass of air. This was recently experienced during the production of "Glass Menagerie". When this cylinder is felt, it can either remain stationary, or move about in a room. Also during this show, Eddie Mullis had an experience with the spirit. He was sitting in the house, watching final dress rehearsal. No one else was supposed to be out there watching. He saw a man out of the corner of his eye, sitting on the front row, wearing an overcoat and a hat. He glanced away, then looked back again, and the figure had disappeared as quickly and mysteriously as it had appeared.

Perhaps the strangest encounter happened about three or four years ago. A group of Herschel hunters heard his footsteps coming out of the light booth at the back of the house, and walking down the outside aisle, toward the stage. As the sound passed the windows, a shadow was cast across the floor at each one by the light of the full moon. There was nothing there to cause the shadow, at least nothing normal.

"I believe he's a good spirit," says Chip Aldridge. Myra Williams believes that he has never really done bodily harm to anyone. But he did, supposedly, knock some paint brushes off of a cabinet, on her head one time. They had set up there for weeks without falling off before. Herschel has been blamed for making lenses fall out and crash beside nonbelievers. He is also held responsible for making many leading ladies faint.

However, as Chip said, he is good in most ways. He is someone that the actors can talk to, especially when they have had a bad day. Myra claims that when accidents keep happening with a play, they can ask Herschel for help, and then things start going right again. She describes him as comforting to talk to, and she feels that the actors like to think that they take a little of Herschel with them on tours for good luck. He also comes over to the old student center when they are putting on a production there to lend his support.

But belief and interest in Herschel have died down in recent years, especially since all of the "Herschelites" have graduated. This group of followers was devoted to him. To be a member, each person had to spend a whole night in the theater alone. They certainly earned their special T-shirts this way. Perhaps this requirement has brought the end to the group. Even for the nonbeliever, the massive amount of open space naturally brings on a spooky feeling, and as Myra says, "You just try to lock up by yourself at night and feel that there is nothing behind you!"

Perhaps one day, some brave soul will reawaken the Herschelite club, and fill the hardest requirement of spending a night in the theater alone. If such a foolish person tries this, he should do it on a night of a full moon, so that he can get the best benefits of his experience with Herschel Farquar. Also, if he wants the ghost to be easier on him, he should go in with an open mind, and clear of drink or drug. The best of luck is wished to him -- he will certainly need it!

Hezbollah Believed To Still Be Present

LEBANON (AP) — A senior U.S. official said Sunday that Hezbollah, the Shiite Muslim militant group, is still present in Lebanon and may be involved in the recent attacks on Israeli ships in the Mediterranean Sea.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the group is still active in Lebanon and may be involved in the recent attacks on Israeli ships in the Mediterranean Sea.

Credit History

When you apply for a loan, the lender will check your credit history. This is a record of how you have handled money in the past. It includes information about your credit cards, loans, and other debts. A good credit history shows that you are responsible and can be trusted to repay your debts. A bad credit history, on the other hand, shows that you have a history of late payments, defaults, or bankruptcies. Lenders use this information to decide whether to lend to you and at what interest rate.

There are several ways to check your credit history. You can request a free copy of your credit report from the three major credit bureaus: Equifax, Experian, and TransUnion. You can also check your credit history online or through a credit counseling agency. If you find errors on your credit report, you can dispute them with the credit bureau. It is important to keep your credit history in good shape, as it can affect your ability to get a loan or a credit card in the future.

One way to improve your credit history is to pay your bills on time. This includes your credit cards, loans, and other debts. If you are having trouble making payments, you should contact your lender or creditor as soon as possible to discuss your options. Another way to improve your credit history is to keep your credit utilization low. This means using only a small portion of your credit limit on your credit cards. For example, if you have a credit limit of $1,000, you should try to keep your balance below $200.

Finally, it is important to avoid opening too many credit accounts at once. This can hurt your credit score, which is a number that represents your creditworthiness. A higher credit score generally results in lower interest rates on loans and credit cards. So, if you are looking to improve your credit history, focus on paying your bills on time, keeping your credit utilization low, and avoiding too many new credit accounts.

For more information on credit history, visit our website at www.credit.com.

Reinhart Speaks Out

BY NANCY REICHLE

When interviewed about the progress of SGA this semester, Caryn Reinhart, SGA president, stated that she feels it has gone pretty well. She feels that SGA has received a positive response from the administration.

Caryn stated, "We've been trying to act on some of the problems students have been interested in." Some of these issues include the frisbee throwing, the requests of more varied food in the cafeteria, and the latest issue of restoring the concession area and rooms of the stadium.

Caryn also expressed disappointment that the students complain, but they don't come to the right people. She sincerely wants to hear what the students are concerned about.

Caryn mentioned that one of the biggest problems in the student government was the friction between herself and Norris Woody, speaker of the legislature. She feels that her veto of the Run-for-Fun bill caused a lot of this friction.

• Regarding legislature, Caryn feels it is running smoothly but that too many personal conflicts are hurting the government.

She stressed that the big issue in SGA now is security. The administration has been working on the problem of security and hopes to soon have a crime prevention unit here to talk to representative students on security matters.

Caryn also expresses that she was upset about the abusing of the addition of fresh fruit, cheese, and eggs at meals. She stated that a few students' abuse could cause all to lose the privilege.

Lady Panthers Expect Winning Year

BY IRISH GAYMON

This year's season started off with a big bang. The Lady Panthers showed their style of playing during a pre-season scrimmage, defeating the ladies from Fort Bragg 111-51.

High Point will be looking very strong this year, with seven returning players and four new recruits. All the ladies play well and have a good sense of court direction.

Coach Briley is very confident in her team and feels good about her recruits.

This year's recruits include: Roxann Moody, All-State performer from Chatham Central High School. She is equipped with quickness, good passing ability and is an extremely good outside shooter.

Bonny Lynch, All State performer from Farmington, Conn. has excellent jumping and passing abilities and handles the ball well. Adjusting to defensive playing is her only weakness.

Wendy Knight, All State

Ethel White

Marie Riley

from Madison-Mayodan High School is a good rebounder and base line shooter. She is expected to play the forward position and is very fast for her 6-0 build. Lena Scriven, or B.B. as her friends call her, is one of the most determined rebounders on the team. Coach Briley is proud of her playing ability and feels that she is a very reliable player.

This year's returning players are: Andreea Blanchard who will be playing a low forward position, is expected to grab every rebound possible. Her outstanding jumping ability is her strongest point. Her weakness is in her shooting techniques.

Pam Henline will be playing the point guard position. She looks much stronger and her speed and good passing ability will contribute much to the team.

Sylvia Chambers, the tallest of the ladies at 6-1, is the most improved player in the eyes of Coach Briley. She is much more aggressive this year.

Jody Westmoreland, or "Flash" as her teammates call her, has an outstanding outside shot. Her defensive game is much better this year. She is going to be needed to bust up any zone the Panthers encounter.

Vickie McLean is a very versatile athlete who can play anywhere. She is a good overall player and gets the job done.

Marie Riley is a very competitive player. Coach Briley states that, "She is the best all around female player I've ever seen. Her strongest point is her intelligence on the court. Marie is the type of player I expect never to have a bad night," says Briley. Her only weakness is her temper. She tends to get upset with herself when she makes a mistake. But as everyone knows she makes it up with incredible play.

Ethel White's quickness and speed makes her an incredible player on the court. She has extremely good hands for making turnovers during a game and is expected to play the low forward position. This senior's superior jumping ability adds a lot to the Panther squad.

Coach Briley feels that she has the ingredients for another winning season. The Lady Panthers are playing as defending national champions.

One of the highlights of this year's season will be playing the Czechoslovakian National Team in the Greensboro Coliseum on December 16th.

Fraternity All-Stars Battle To Scoreless Tie

BY SCOTT HANCE

The first annual fraternity all-star football game was held last Saturday on the soccer field and the two teams played to a scoreless tie before a fairly good sized and enthusiastic crowd.

The four fraternities on campus divided up into two teams with each fraternity sending nine players to the contest. The Delta Sig's and the Pika's teamed up to face the Lambda Chi's and the Theta Chi's. With the cooperation and help of some of the faculty and administration, the fraternities were able to borrow equipment from Allen Jay High School, use the soccer stadium for the contest, and charge a 50¢ admission. The proceeds from the game are going to be donated to the Library Fund in the names of all four fraternities.

After getting the equipment the teams practiced all week and held blackboard sessions to devise the plays they wanted to run. Volunteer referees were found along with linemen, an announcer, and statisticians. The soccer field was lined off to resemble a regulation football field and everything was ready for the game.

Defense dictated the outcome of the game as the defenses of both clubs were noticeably more organized than the offenses. Turnovers were abundant and plagued both teams. The Chis fumbled five times but lost the ball only twice while the Sig-Pika team fumbled the ball away on three occasions. Both squads managed to put together a few good offensive drives but each was stopped by turnovers or penalties.

Each team did cross the goal line one time but penalties nullified both scores and

HPC Netters Receive Rejection

BY DENNIS TUTTLE

High Point womens' coach Wanda Briley had two angles on the Lady Panthers recent rejection to the National AIAW Volleyball Tournament slated for Orlando, Fla., later this month. Even though bitter disappointment was obviously expressed on Briley's face, she took the decision within stride.

The AIAW pairings are managed in such a manner that the top six teams of the tournament from the previous year gets an automatic bid the next season. If that teams does not qualify the next year, then its region gets the bid. This was Briley's first angle since High Point placed tenth a year ago.

The other viewpoint which the second year coach pondered about was the overlap of volleyball into basketball - which she coaches successfully enough in her first season to take the AIAW National Championship.

"Yeah, I looked at the decision with a very disappointing angle when I first got the news," Briley said. "Or at least I did until I heard all the circumstances." Only one at-large berth was given and High Point wasn't the recipient. Florida Southern was awarded the at-large bid and will take a 36-0 record into the tournament. Other teams in the tourney are Florida State, Alabama, Florida Tech., to mention a few.

"I looked at it all with a couple of instincts," Briley continued. "The first instinct was that maybe it was good for basketball because we open Friday night at Guilford. Our practices have grown to the point that we've lost all our enthusiasm - we're ready for a game. If we had to have played in the volleyball tournament we would have had to cancel our first game."

Briley and her Lady Panthers have no reason for total disappointment. This season's version of HPC volleyball was by far the most successful ever-finishing 42-7 (topping the 42-10 mark set during Briley's 1977-78 rookie season) - and the play of freshmen by far exceeded Briley's anticipation for this year.

"From what others have told me, this is the best team we've ever had here," the coach said. "We're just pleased with the overall record, and the outcome of the season. I said at the first of the year that it might be a rebuilding year because we had six freshmen that would play considerably. But the freshmen showed me they could play," she added.

Even though HPC wasn't offered the AIAW bid, Briley isn't sure if the college would have been able to afford the trip. High Point athletics works on such a limited budget that even if the Panthers were to receive a bid this year, or any other year, the decision on the trip would have to be taken into deep consideration by college officials. Nevertheless, Briley is proud of her girls'.

She talks with optimism for next year knowing that many of the same objections that produced this fall might also appear again next year. It's just a chance she's taking.

Floyd Continues To Star

BY DENNIS TUTTLE

A stunned reaction hit the High Point basketball team as the clock ticked off the final 19 seconds following guard Danny Anderson's missed 16-footer last Saturday night. And, as Elon's Clarence Dickerson went to the foul line with two shots following an HPC foul on the rebound of Anderson's last hope for High Point, it was obvious from the hanging scoreboard what the outcome of the Panthers' Carolinas Conference seasons opener was - a 63-62 loss.

A one time nine point second half lead quickly turned into an Elon lead with 1:15 left to play on Larry Scott's basket and later, two free throws that dropped the CC favorite Panthers record to 5-2 overall, 0-1 in the conference.

Elon, who led only once in the opening half, 14-12 trailed 37-30 at intermission. Right at the beginning of the second half, Panther John O'Brien dropped in a basket for a 39-30 HPC lead, which would be the largest Panther margin. But Elon, 0-3 overall going into the contest against the Nationally ranked Panthers, regained the lead 49-48 on Dickerson's jumper with 7:41 left to play. Elon then went to the tough 2-3 zone that slowed HPC's offense.

A contributing factor in the outcome was the 6-8 O'Brien, who is averaging 14 ppg for the season. O'Brien went scoreless the last eight minutes of the game while All-America Charlie Floyd scored 18 points, only eight in the second half. Dickerson led all scorers with 26 points on 13 field goals.

However, the Panthers have had their bright spots going into this winter. Floyd, the Street & Smith All-America pick is starting the season where he left off last spring. After seven games, Floyd's scoring at a 17.6 ppg clip, averaging ten rebounds per contest and hitting 86 per cent from the charity stripe-all team leading stats.

But with or without Charlie Floyd, High Point's offense has yet to get into full throttle. Garner-Webb's 98-81 thrashing of HPC (snapping HPC's winning streak at four) in the finals of the High Point Thanksgiving Tournament is one example. But, like High Point, Gardner-Webb is ranked among the Nation's elite in the NAIA.

High Point trailed 47-40 at the half and quickly fell behind 62-52 with 13:07 left in the game. But nine straight Panther points closed the gap to within 62-61 with ten minutes to go.

But G-W went to its stall tactics and 6-9 tourney MVP K.C. Graham began to penetrate the lane for baskets. If it wasn't Graham, it was Gardner-Webb's "Mr. Everything" Lewis Young hitting the Panthers for 24 points. John Borders also scored in double figures for G-W with 17.

But High Point wasn't finished until with six minutes remaining when Graham's basket and one-hand slam dunk gave Gardner-Webb a 72-65 lead. The Panthers never caught up.

O'Brien led HPC with 15. Floyd pumped in 14. Charlie's freshman brother, Bruce, scored 14, and Anderson added 13.

To reach the finals, HPC handled Wingate 99-72 in the opening round. The Panthers breezed to a ten point lead in the first half and Charlie contributed 18 points in the winning Panther effort. Steve Wheelless added 16 points while Charlie and O'Brien each hauled in eight rebounds in a game that HPC dominated on the board 40-27.

High Point opened the season with a 74-54 win at Fort Bragg. But HPC retaliated the slim margin over Fort Bragg with a 103-70 romping three weeks later here at Alumni Gym. But two close games after the opening win gave coach Jerry Steele a few more nervous blisters on his infected hands - something that has been with the eighth year HPC coach throughout his 16 years of coaching.

In Marietta, Ga., the Panthers staged off Georgia Southern 68-65 due to High Point's four corners offense in the second half. After taking a 38-34 lead into the dressing room at halftime, High Point led 63-62 with 5:58 left to play. So, Steele ordered the slow offense and the Panthers built a three point margin later on O'Brien's basket that secured the Panthers' second win. C. Floyd led HPC with 19. O'Brien chipped in 14.

And then, down in Conway, S.C., two Bruce Floyd free throws with 21 seconds left iced the Panthers third straight win - 72-71 over Coastal Carolina.

Danny Anderson led HPC with 23 points while Charlie Floyd had 19 and O'Brien 13 points.

Coastal tied the game at 67-67 with 8:35 left to play and went on top 67-64 on Dennis Casey's two foul shots with just under four minutes left to play.

But two baskets by Charlie gave HPC a 68-67 margin and Floyd's 20-footer spotted the Panthers to a 70-69 lead. Steve Hardy missed a jumper for CC with 35 seconds left, O'Brien rebounded and Bruce clinched the win with his two free throws after a desperation CC foul.

Anderson scored 15 of his game high 23 points in the second half while the Panthers shot a blistering 67 per cent from the floor, connecting on 31 of 46 field goal attempts.

RFC Voters Receive Rejection

By [Name] Staff Writer

THE RESULTS OF THE REFORM PARTY'S (RFP) primary election were a crushing defeat for the party's candidates. The party, which had hoped to gain significant momentum in the lead-up to the general election, found itself in a position of complete isolation.

The RFP's candidates received a combined total of less than 1 percent of the vote, a stark contrast to the party's previous performance in local elections. This result effectively ended the party's hopes of becoming a major force in the state's political landscape.

Despite the setback, party leaders expressed a commitment to continue their efforts. They stated that the primary election was a learning experience and that they would be analyzing the results to improve their strategy for future elections.

The RFP's defeat was a significant blow to the party's morale. Many members of the party expressed disappointment and frustration. However, some leaders remained optimistic, believing that the party could still make a difference in the upcoming general election.

The RFP's primary election results were a clear indication of the challenges the party faces. The party's message and platform were not resonating with the electorate, and this needs to be addressed in the coming months.

A GROUP OF PROTESTERS WERE ARRESTED AND HELD IN JAIL AFTER A RAMPAGE OF VIOLENCE DURING A DEMONSTRATION. THE PROTESTERS WERE CHARGED WITH DISORDERLY CONDUCT AND VIOLATION OF CURFEW.

The demonstration, which took place in the downtown area, resulted in significant property damage and injuries to several individuals. The police responded quickly, and the protesters were taken into custody.

The protesters, who were mostly young adults, expressed their frustration with the current state of affairs. They claimed that the government was not listening to their concerns and that they were being treated unfairly.

The protesters were held in jail overnight. They were released the following morning after paying a bond. The city officials stated that they would be reviewing the incident and taking appropriate action.

Glover Content With Position

Unlike other assistant college basketball coaches who see assistant coaching as a pedestal to head coaching position, High Point AC like Glover is content where he is. And he'll remain under Coach Jerry Steele for some time.

Now in his second year as Steele's assistant and the head tennis coach, Glover has no ambitions whatsoever for a head basketball position. The tennis team is enough of a challenge without it being a major sport. "I'm content where I'm at," said Glover. "There's no way I'm ready to coach basketball. I'm very happy where I stand."

Glover never entered the thought of taking a high school position like Kevin Hillman (Durham Hills High School) did after his graduation from college ranks. It's something about the younger kids that is appealing to Glover's patience. "I don't think I would have a lot of patience with high school kids. I'm just content with my position here," Glover added.

Glover's position under Steele is at times exhausting and hazardous to Glover's health, who has back problems anyhow. But Glover likes his recruiting duties and the other aspects of coaching. "It's a hard job. Travel is rough and finding players becomes a task. But I've been around here for eight years now and I know pretty much what coach Steele likes and what he's looking for," Glover said.

Glover's fondness of young people, not high school age but the age bracket between 18 and 22, was a factor for his return to HPC. He saw the opportunity to come back to High Point when Steele's assistant Jim Gough, gave up the basketball and head tennis duties for the insurance business.

"I had a great time when I went to school here," Glover said without hesitation. "It was just one of those offers you can't refuse. I like kids and I'm very fond of the people here. It was just a good situation."

Glover took a big hand in recruiting HPC's Anthony Parrish, the freshman guard, who Steele is counting on quite heavily for leadership after senior Charlie Floyd's graduation this year. Glover is now looking at prospects for next year-possibly two players-one to replace the 6-6 Floyd.

Glover was a splendid athlete while at Ragsdale High School in Jamestown. Glover played the three major sports-football, basketball and baseball-and he played them with expertise. Glover came to High Point to play basketball under coach Steele after his graduation from Ragsdale in 1972.

But Glover played sparingly during his career at HPC, which in a prognosticator's eye is a good indication of coaching abilities: The man who watches from the sideline is the most observant of the special qualities of the game. Glover started off-and-on during his sophomore year and played considerably at times his junior and senior seasons.

Yet, when Glover graduated in the spring of 1976 with a degree in Human Relations, he went to work for his father, who is a grading contractor. Glover never realized that he might return to HPC, especially as a coach.

"I went to work for my father in the grading business right after graduation," Glover said. "I had worked with it all my life so I knew pretty much what I was doing."

An interesting fact about Glover's coaching duties is his tennis team that was 12-10 his rookie season. Glover never played tennis in high school nor did he play here at High Point. But he landed the head position after Gough's departure. Glover is pessimistic about his playing abilities but has confidence in his knowledge of the game.

"I'm not a good player but I know the game. Last year we had no money to recruit but we had a good team, anyhow. I've got my hands full trying to be a good coach in tennis and be a good assistant basketball coach. It's all very tiring."

Glover teaches P.E. and, along with coaching, he feels that time is sparse to be devoted to both. His wife of three years, Karen, sees him very little but like a good coaches wife, she totally understands the leadership standpoint.

But Glover is unlike other assistant coaches. Many seek a bigger position like former N.C. State assistant Eddie Biedenbach (now at Davidson) and former UNC-Charlotte assistant Mike Pratt (now the head coach there). Glover has no aspiration for anything bigger than he has at High Point. He's taking the days one at a time.

"I spend very little time thinking about next year," noted Glover. "I'm interested in doing a pretty good job here. I have no aspirations to have a head coaching job. I don't want to coach high school and I don't think I'm ready to coach college. Both basketball, tennis and teaching takes up so much time. I'll just take the days one at a time."

Even though Mike Glover might change his disposition about coaching in the next few years, he's content where he's at with High Point College athletics. What ever it may be, Glover's going to "jump into it with two feet."

Game Ends In Deadlock

neither was able to cross into the end zone a second time. After recovering a fumble on the opposition's 15 yard line, the Chis moved down to the one on three runs by Steve Moss. On first down, the Chis went in for the score but were guilty of holding and the ball was moved back to the 16 yard line. After an illegal procedure penalty moved the ball back another five yards, Bill Booth intercepted a Dave Horton pass to stop the drive and give the ball to the Sig-Pika team.

The teams then swapped fumbles and interceptions and the Chis had possession on their own 20 yard line. On third down, Tom Trice picked off another Horton pass and ran it in for the touchdown. However, clipping was called against the Sig-Pikas on the run back and instead of six points, they had the ball on the 30 yard line. The teams then traded possessions a couple more times to end the first half.

Both squads managed to put together a couple offensive drives in the second half but neither could cross the goal line. The Chis moved from their own 12 down to the opposing team's 30 before failing on a fourth down try. The big play in the drive was a halfback pass from Steve Moss to John Machesky of 45 yards. The drive stalled on the 30 yard line where the Sig-Pikas took over but had their first down pass attempt intercepted by Mike Taylor and the Chis once again started to drive.

The Chis moved from their 34 yard line down to the 22 of the Sig-Pika team. Then they encountered two big losses of 9 and 11 yards plus a five yard delay of game penalty to force them to punt the ball away. A roughing the kicker call gave them the ball back and fifteen more yards but they were still unable to make first down yardage and the Sig-Pikas took over possession on the 25 yard line.

Quarterback Jeff Apperson and full back Charlie Gross then combined for two first downs and the Sig-Pika team was on the move. The drive was thwarted, however, when a penalty pushed them back 15 yards and they ended up giving the ball over to the Chis on the 48 yard line. Trice intercepted another Chis pass with five seconds remaining to stop any scoring possibility.

Apperson completed 5 out of 13 passes with two interceptions for 53 yards and Horton went 3 of 15 for 25 yards on the game for the Chis. He was intercepted three times. The Sig-Pika running attack was led by Apperson and Gross while Moss and Gregg Stone were the rushing leaders for the Chis. Rusty Hawes played an excellent defensive game for the Sig-Pika team.

Is HPC Really A Gold Mine?

BY ROBIN HENSON

Is High Point College sitting on a gold mine of property? Many students seem to think so, but the truth is this: the school doesn't own as much as many seem to think.

According to Mr. Earle Dalbey, the vice president in charge of financial affairs, HPC only has five pieces of income-producing property: the Sears complex downtown, Eastgate Shopping Center, a warehouse on Kivett Drive and the two houses beside the chapel on Montlieu. The school has no affiliation with College Village Shopping Center.

All the property and buildings are owned by the corporation High Point College, Inc., and are leased to corporations and individuals.

Last year all revenue extracted from the property leases was subject to federal income tax. This year, all but Eastgate are. Since the mortgage on Eastgate has been paid off this year, there will be no income tax on revenue from that shopping center. According to federal regulations, a nonprofit organization can only be taxed on income from mortgaged property. The organization is, however, always subject to city property taxes on its income-producing property. HPC paid roughly $30,000 in city taxes last year on its income-producing land.

The leases on the two shopping areas, Sears and Eastgate, are paid to HPC on a percentage of gross sales basis. HPC received about $100,000 last year from the Sears complex and about $54,000 from Eastgate.

There are no city taxes on the 75 acres of main campus property or the "branch campus" - three acres surrounding the president's house which are listed for tax purposes as a branch campus. Taxes are paid, however, on the approximately 47 additional acres of the presidential estate.

All of the money derived from the leases is put into the school's operating budget. It amounts to approximately 25% of the budget, with students paying the remaining 75%.

Out of the operating budget comes all the money that runs the school and pays its

The Victory Bell Still Rings

BY STEPHANIE HIGGINS

In front of Harrison Hall hanging in the brick tower is "Old Yaddin." More recently acknowledged as the "Victory Bell" by the athletes here, it is in its fiftieth year of service to High Point College.

Unveiled on Founders' Day, October 17, 1929, the bell was originally brought to High Point College from Yadkin College which closed its doors in 1924. Placed near the boy's dormitory, the bell woke the students in the morning and called them to meals and chapel.

"Old Yaddin" was then moved to the back of Roberts Hall where it hung in a steel tower and used as a meal bell. At this time the bell in the tower of Roberts Hall was used to announce victories in athletics.

As time passed the bell in Roberts Hall fell into disuse and the Yadkin bell ceased to be the dinner bell and became the victory bell. The steel tower was replaced by a brick tower, a gift of the classes of 1964 and 1967.

Just what does the "Victory Bell" stand for? Besides carrying on the heritage of Yadkin College, it has a special meaning to the athletes here at High Point.

The "Victory Bell" allows them to announce to the High Point community the high accomplishment of capturing a Conference, State, Regional, or National championship. It gives them the proud feeling of being able to say we've brought something back to High Point College.

The time or number of people on campus doesn't seem to matter to the athletes. An example of this is the Volleyball team returning from James Madison last year after winning the Regional Championship. It was 2 a.m. and as Coach Briley said, "No one was here at the college, it was just the feeling of being able to ring the bell!"

Other teams who rang the "Victory Bell" last year were the Soccer team after capturing the Conference Title, the Girl's Basketball and Volleyball teams after capturing the Conference, State, and Regional Championships, and the Girl's Tennis team after capturing the Conference and State Championships.

So the next time you hear "Old Yaddin" clanging away, you'll know something of importance has happened here at High Point College.

No Yearbook This Year?

BY SUZANNE KARPPIEN

The yearbook is sinking fast. Why? Lack of student interest. We can't have a yearbook if we have no one to produce it.

Every year all the students of HPC look forward to picking up their annual yearbook. And of course, every year the student body complains about how bad the yearbooks. But if we don't have some student interest in producing the yearbook, we'll not only have a "bad" yearbook, there will be no yearbook at all. If the students here expect a good yearbook, then more people need to get involved.

The more people we have to help produce the yearbook, the better it will be. With a lot of student involvement, the yearbook would take very little effort to produce and would contain many more ideas.

If more students do not become interested in the yearbook, then it will be dropped next year. This would be shame considering the price of the yearbook is included in our tuition. We'll not only be losing the yearbook, but we'll be losing money.

The yearbook is for the student body's benefit. It is something you can always keep and look back at with fond memories. It would be a shame to see such a worthwhile thing be dropped due to a majority of "slack" students.

If you want to have a yearbook to look back at someday then get out and lend a helping hand. Remember, the more people involved, the better the finished product, and in this case, to have a finished product we need more involvement.

Adjusting To New Rooming Situations

In light of the many recent room changes, exactly what is it that makes the roommate situation work? The key to maintaining this relationship is a basic respect of individual rights. Without this essential factor, many avoidable complications may arise and lead to major arguments. While there are a few cases of unavoidable disagreements, this is usually not the case.

For many incoming freshmen and other first-time dorm students, having to share a room with someone is a new experience. To suddenly be thrust into a tiny room for bedroom, dining-room, den and kitchen rolled into one is a tremendous adjustment, but there is the added factor of sharing one's personal time and space with, in many cases, a total stranger.

This adjustment, whether it be to a new roommate, a roommate at all, or simply living away from home and in a dorm, may be handled by talking out particular problems, having consideration for the other party's wants and wishes, and in some cases, giving in. There will be some rough spots, perhaps even insurmountable problems, but make an effort to remember the roommate, and things will go smoother.

More Asparagus

Resolving Resolutions in '79

So it's 1979. Your pockets are empty from Christmas and New Year's and second semester registration. Back to HPC and its many high points - cold water showers, rip off vending machines, cold cuts and yes, asparagus.

It's instant replay with a few new resolutions to study more, drink less, keep the scholarship and write to mom more often. But the first week back you blew the whole thing. You haven't bought the books yet, you woke up in the parking lot and mom never got that letter you promised. The folks in Roberts Hall shook their fingers at you and reminded you of something called GPAs and with mind aswirl, you O.D.ed on Di-Gel again. The vacation was officially over.

Slowly you pulled it all back together, locked yourself in your room with the infamous B.O. sign on the door, and prayed for help before doing what must be done - open that book. You admired the cover. You examined the binding. You did everything you could think of doing before actually doing what you initially intended to do. Finally, you opened the book, turned to the page, read a paragraph and woke up with your nose in the crack of the book. So much for resolutions.

If you're like me, your resolutions are many and your actualities are few. Some resolutions make it to December. Some die January 2nd. At any rate, it's all an education - every bit of it. You can't really disregard the asparagus. Just eat it and hope for green beans tomorrow.

Variety Of Scholarships Available At High Point

BY KIM DARDEN

If you waded through and sorted out the countless forms, transcripts, applications and other "official" papers tucked away in the offices of Roberts Hall, you'd find a great percentage of them falling under the heading of "scholarships". Compiled, these papers represent an investment in at least 300 students at HPC.

Through various academic scholarships, 300 students on our campus are being aided in their pursuit of learning. The academic ac-scholarships High Point offers can be broken down into 3 major types: Competitive, Academic, and Concessional.

The most celebrated, publicized and coveted scholarships here are the competitive ones. There's the granddaddy of them all, the Presidential, worth $5,000.00 (1250.00 per year). Then there's the Honor, worth $3,000.00 (750.00 per year), and the Merit, valued at $2,000.00 (500.00 per year). These "Big Three" alone, together with the Commuter scholarship for Day Students, account for $150,000 of all HPC scholarship money and all of the money for Competitive scholarships is funded by HPC.

An entire weekend in February is devoted to them yearly. Present Presidential scholars and the scholarship committee, under the supervision of Mrs. Louise Nowicki of Financial Aid, are already busy in preparation and planning for scholarship weekend 1979. On the weekend of February 16-18, around 75 high school senior nominees from all over the nation will converge on HPC to see the campus, get to know the school, and to compete for the "Big Three" through interviews.

These 75 students could be considered "semi-finalists", because they were first part of a group of around 250. The original 250 were nominated by 1 present Presidential scholars, or 2) an officer in HPC's Admissions Dept., or 3) high school guidance counselors. But says Mrs. Nowicki, "That's just getting your name in the pile." For the original 250 are reviewed for narrower selection by HPC's scholarship committee, made up of the Vice President, the Director of Admissions, the Academic Dean and other faculty members. The faculty members serving on the committee are different each year.

The 75 students who are chosen come to High Point and receive the red carpet. They will be whisked to socials, teas, and meetings. They will be invited to HPC scheduled activities like the play "Dial M for Murder", the basketball game, coffeehouse, etc. They will also have to face their interviews, which count as 50% of their competition - the other 50% being their academic records. The interview is crucial. Says Mrs. Nowicki, "A student may have a 1600 on his SAT and a high ranking in his class, but if he doesn't have a good interview, he will not receive (the Presidential).

"We're looking for a combination of an excellent student and one who is and asset to his community and a real leader." When it comes to actually choosing the scholars, Mrs. Nowicki says it is a "torture", a "horrendous task". "Sometimes it gets down to such a fine line, it's so difficult to choose. There may not be but a .5 difference between them in points," she says.

Those falling in the top percentile in both interview and academics receive the Presidential, the next percentile the Honor, and the next the Merit. No less than 15 Presidential scholarships will be awarded this year, and around 30 Honor and Merits combined. To keep their scholarships, the scholars must maintain a B (2.0) average and demonstrate good college citizenship.

The next category of scholarships, the Academic, differ from the Competitive in that the money is funded by individuals-patrons of the college - instead of HPC. The money from individuals is placed in endowment until an award is applied for and made. The Academic scholarships may be awarded to any undergraduate student, as well as incoming freshmen who apply and qualify. The "qualifications" vary from scholarship to scholarship. Some may be allotted for those of a certain county, of a certain church, organization, or sex, etc. Some say "must keep 'B' average, some go no further as "must maintain good average." There are about 88 different Academic scholarships offered. Their average range of funding is $400-800 per year.

The last category of Academic scholarships, the Concession, is awarded not for a performance on a student's part, but for "something he is" - such as a child of a Methodist minister, a pre-ministerial student, a Christian Education major, and so forth. All money comes from HPC - usually about $400.00 a year. All the potential scholar has to do is fill out an application, and the scholarship is automatic. But, says Nowicki, "as easy as that is, you'd be surprised at those who never fill out an application."

The Hi-Po is beginning another semester of publication. The staff would like to know if the newspaper is meeting the needs of the students; therefore, we would like for you to fill out the following survey and return it to the Hi-Po office by January 29th. The results will be published in the next issue.

year. So, HPC doesn't own a gold mine after all. A $150,000 yearly return on property investments may seem like a lot to an individual, but to a school who operates on a budget of several million dollars per year, it's only a drop in the bucket.

SGA Resumes For Another Semester

BY NANCY REICHLÉ

Student Legislature convened Tuesday, January 16 for its first meeting of the semester. At the meeting, Mike Showalter suggested some possible upcoming legislative activities such as a walkathon, an inter-club activity, and a trash can painting contest.

Concerning the security issue, President Patton returned the resolution sent to him by the legislature with some comments. A set of walkie-talkies has been ordered to improve security on campus. The Security Awareness Week has been postponed and will be held after Homecoming.

Homecoming activities were also discussed at the meeting. A banner contest and a float contest are being held. The theme for Homecoming is "Time Passages," and the band is Visions/Track IV. All tickets to the dance must be purchased beforehand. The legislature selected Debbi Dorland as their representative for Homecoming.

Upcoming Student Union activities include the movie tonight, "I Never Promised You A Rose Garden" at 7:00 and 9:30 p.m. in the OSC. There is a Ski Trip scheduled for January 28 and a coffee house on January 31. Also, tickets will go on sale Feb. 26 for the Tom Chapin concert on March 24. Student tickets will cost $2.00 each.

Sharon Billings reported on the progress in designing a freshmen booklet to be completed for next fall's freshmen and transfers. The booklet will contain all new students and information about each one as well as necessary and helpful information about the school.

French Bolen presented an act to amend the constitution of the SGA concerning the executive council and their power to decide on money matters. The amendment failed. The next legislature meeting will be held on Jan. 31 at 6:30 p.m.

Career Planning Films Upcoming

BY JILL CHRISTIANSON

"Pack Your Own Chute" is the title of a career planning film festival which Student Personnel is sponsoring. The films will be shown on Wednesdays, through February 7, in Room 7 of Robert's Hall.

The film festival is comprised of four films, the first of which was shown last Wednesday evening. The remaining three films, "When I Say No . . . I Feel Guilty," "Time Of Your Life" and "Your Interview" have tips on self-assertion, time management, and interviewing skills.

Associate Dean of Students, Diane Hanson has arranged the film festival, with hopes that it will help High Point College students in their career planning. In commenting on the attendance, Hanson said, "We shouldn't count numbers as long as it's (the film festival) is worthwhile."

At a seminar for the North Carolina Placement Association, Hanson first viewed the films. She chose, out of the many films shown, the four which she thought would be the most helpful to High Point College students.

Each film is preceded by a short introduction; then after each film, discussion is welcomed. All students are encouraged to participate in the film festival.

"I Never Promised You A Rose Garden" is a powerful but delicately structured film... There are scenes that brought tears to my eyes, and scenes that filled me with joy... A rapturous young actress named Kathleen Quinlan is nothing short of brilliant."

Anderson's Unnoticed Talents Sparking Panthers' Momentum

BY DENNIS TUTTLE

Maybe it was the aura of electricity that was flowing through Alumni Gymnasium last Saturday night or maybe it was the unexpected pleasure of a slam dunk that would bring the crowd to its feet. Whatever the purpose for this very rare occasion, Danny Anderson decided to make it all reality.

It was midway through the second half with the Panthers enroute to an 82-68 win over Catawba. Charlie Floyd shot an outlier pass to the speeding Anderson, who in a split second reaction, soared above the ten foot perimeter and jammed the leather sphere home. It aroused the crowd and it aroused Anderson's overjoyous teammates.

"I didn't really decide to dunk until after I got up to the goal," Anderson said. They are a lot of guys who can decide early in their shot if they are gonna 'jam it or not. But for us little people, you have to do it just right or you'll mess it up and have to take all the embarrassment."

Anderson, a 6-1 junior from Gastonia, is like most of the players in the Carolinas Conference. He wasn't highly recruited but his talents are needy enough to supply a team of High Point's caliber. Anderson has turned out to be a surprise package for coach Jerry Steele and the marvel of his play, not a one-hand slam, but his overall assets are paying dividends.

Anderson is averaging right over 15 points per game and is hitting 63 percent of his shots from the floor. His 23 points against Catawba sparked the Panthers to the conference win but it's his floor game - assists, defense and other unnoticeable categories of the game that Anderson perfects that contributes greatly to the Panther cause.

"I never expected to score this much when I came here and I've worked on my offense game quite a bit," says Anderson in the comfort of his basketball clad room on Super Sunday. "If I'm involved in a play I'm more [see Anderson pg. 7]

Danny Anderson has played three different positions at High Point.

Panthers Losing Players: Continue To Post Wins

BY DEBBIE SAIE

As of January 17, the HPC Men's Basketball Team has posted a record of 11-5 overall with a 2-3 conference mark.

While most of us were enjoying Christmas break, the Panthers traveled to Elon College, for a crucial conference game. The final result Panthers 69 - Elon 63.

On the road again, the Panthers traveled to Mars Hill, winning 82-70.

Pembroke State and Lenoir-Rhyne handed the Panthers 2 consecutive losses. At Pembroke, the main factor for the loss was lackadaisical playing. Danny Anderson was high scorer with 23 points, 18 of those coming in the first half of play.

At Lenoir-Rhyne, Anderson again led scoring with 21 pts. At the beginning of the second half, the Panthers hit a dry spell. High Point went without a bucket from the floor for 8-minutes.

At present HPC is at loss without the services of freshman starter Bruce Floyd, who is currently working on his academic eligibility. However, it is possible that Bruce will see action by the end of next week. By losing players, HPC has had to somewhat alternate their type of play. The approach taken now is more of a conservative and a deliberate type of play.

High Point hosts Catawba this weekend, in a must game for the Panthers. Catawba's assets include quickness and good outside shooting.

HPC Loses Bryant; Wake's Ellis a Possibility

Some big rumors have been flying around the past week concerning Atlantic Coast Conference basketball players transferring to High Point but one of the possibilities was ruled out Sunday.

One of the hopefuls is Wake Forest's 6-9 sophomore center Justin Ellis. Ellis has reportedly considered transferring to High Point after the Deacons got an early commitment from East Lincoln High School center Pat Jolley.

BRYANT

Ellis, a highly touted high school player at St. John's High School in Washington, D.C., could not be reached for comment but a source close to Wake says that Ellis is serious considering High Point. High Point coach Jerry Steele has yet to be reached by Ellis and said, "It's the first that I have heard about it."

Ellis averaged 2.0 ppg and 2.1 rebounds for Wake Forest's freshman year while playing in 28 out of 29 games. He has played considerably this season, especially after the suspension of 6-11 Larry Harrison. But [see Ellis, page 7]

Lady Panthers Still Climbing

BY IRISH GAYMON

The Lady Panthers of High Point are still controlling the boards in Basketball. Defeating two conference teams, Guilford (71-54) and Elon (96-55), South Carolina (69-68) and Pittsburgh (87-61) fell to High Point during the UNC-CH Christmas Classic. N.C. A&T State University (97-55) and Wagner College (110-59) proved not to be much of a challenge to the panthers.

High Point ran up against some very tough competition when the ladies of Old Dominion from Norfolk V.A. dominated most of the game last Wednesday night. High Point played a very good game both defensively and offensively. Their ball handling and quickness contributed to alot of the scoring done by the Panthers. The ladies proved to the home crowd that whether large or small college they will be there to compete against any team.

Losing to Old Dominion didn't dampen the spirits of the Panthers, they went on to beat Pembroke State Univ., Lenoir-Rhyne College, and Catawba College. Their next home game will be Jan. 30th against Guilford

Holt's Athletic Talents Are Natural

When you first meet the smiling Teresa Holt you figure her to be just another transfer student to High Point College. Well it goes a little further than that.

This All-American basketball player is from Eastern Guilford high school in Gibsonville, N.C.

HOLT

She was first given a full athletic scholarship to Appalachian State University at the beginning of the school year, but felt she didn't belong so she left after a couple of weeks and applied for spring admission to High Point. Along with her admission to the college she also had the opportunity to try out for the Lady Panthers basketball team. After making the team she felt very good about her decision to play for High Point.

When asked, what does it feel like to be one of the top 50 recruited women in the nation, Teresa replied, "It felt good to be representing my school and North Carolina". Teresa's accomplishments don't just stop there, she was named to the Parade's All-American high school basketball team both in her junior and senior years at Eastern Guilford. The first time she received this award her reaction was "Who Me?" Teresa said "I felt honored to be among the players from across the country asked to try out for the team. Even though I didn't make the Pan American team, nothing could have spoiled the happiness that I felt inside. It was the greatest honor in my life."

Teresa was also selected to play in the East-West All-Star game representing the West. "To play in the East-West game was one of my main goals while in high school," smiled Teresa.

Holt's selection to the East-West team and two time All-American are just a few of the long list of achievements in her career. While in high school she was All-Conference three times, All-State and All City-County twice. She was a member of a state champion 440-yard relay team, an All-Conference volleyball player and both All-Conference and MVP in softball.

Teresa is a very fast young lady on the court. Her passing abilities are excellent. She will prove to be a definite asset to the Panther Squad. There's nothing else that can describe this young superstar, she's a born natural.

Anderson Provides Spark

than happy; Dish off and get a lot of assists, or play a good defensive game. It's a great feeling."

Anderson was the main catalyst in the Panthers' drive toward the conference championship last spring. Named MVP on the team as a sophomore, Anderson's 28 points versus Guilford in the championship game set the tone for being North Carolina Athlete of the Week during the final week of February.

Anderson runs the High Point offense and coach Steele trusts, or has such extreme confidence in Anderson's ability to call the plays, that he asks Anderson what plays he's going to call during the upcoming game.

"I think I fitted right into coach Steele's plan when I got here. You never know what style a coach might want to play and I didn't average but around eight points per game my freshman year. I've played two different positions - (forward and second guard) and I feel more comfortable at the point. It's a natural position," Anderson added.

A Physical Education major, Anderson is forever being taunted about his marine-style hair cut and macho mustache. "It gets to be a real laugh sometimes. Like when we played at Fort Bragg. The fans hollar stuff like hey 40, join the army and things like that. But my hair stays out of my way and . . . I don't want to change it," he said.

Anderson feels fortunate that he chose High Point when he did. He could have gone to Appalachian and been sitting at the southward end of the bench, or he could have been at Lenoir-Rhyne. "I feel fortunate. I could have gone somewhere else and set on the bench. But I believe I just found the right school."

Ellis Transfer Still Possible

Another transfer possibility felt through this week when Western Kentucky University officials confirmed that former Maryland guard Billy Bryant had enrolled at the school this semester.

Bryant dropped out of Maryland a month ago and narrowed his choices to Western, Rutgers and High Point. Officials confirmed Sunday night that the 6-4 Bryant was definitely in the WKU campus.

"He is definitely here and will be ready to play in December, 1979," said mens' coordinator of sports Jim Richards. "Billy is here and is enrolled into classes for this semester. We are really pleased that he decided to come here."

The Panthers received a shot in the arm as far as its diminishing roster was concerned when coach Steele allowed senior Dennis West to return to the squad. West played in the Panthers' win over Barber-Scotia last week and responded with 19 points.

West started for three years but academic difficulties forced him to complete work in two courses before he could become eligible. West was reportedly suspended for "failing to accept team standards completely," according to the High Point Enterprise.

West averaged 10.1 points per game last year while leading the team with 76 assists.

Intramural Basketball Starting

Baseball Team Left Coachless

Hartman Resigns After Twenty Year Tenure

BY DENNIS TUTTLE

After building one of the nation's most respectable college baseball traditions over the past 20 years, High

Chuck Hartman
VPI bound

Point College mentor Chuck Hartman has resigned his position to take head baseball job at Virginia Technical Institute in Blacksburg, Va.

Hartman officially made his resignation public Monday morning at a 11 a.m. press conference in the Panther Den at Alumni Gym. Hartman compiled a 483-225 record over the past 20 years having posting nine consecutive seasons of 30 or more wins. High Point captured 10 Carolinas Conference championships, five District 26 titles and twice advanced to the NAIA National tournament. Hartman's most successful campaign came in 1975 when his team posted a 42-6 record and ranked as high as No. 2 in the nation. But the departure is one that took hours of thought for the 1957 graduate of UNC-Chapel Hill. "It was almost impossible to pass up. I had to come to a decision to what I wanted to do with my life. It was an offer I just couldn't pass up," he added.

Hartman takes over the vacant VPI position left by Bob Humphreys, who left to take the pitching coach job for the Toronto Blue Jays' minor league system. VPI went to the NCAA playoffs two years ago and Hartman feels that is stepping into a sound program. "I'm going to be stepping into an upgrade system there. Coach Humphreys had always had his main interest in the pros and he was just one of those who couldn't adjust to the college style of coaching," said Hartman. Humphreys had been the Goble coach for three years.

By departing at this point of the year, Hartman's resignation leaves High Point athletic director Jerry Steele and Vice-President of Student Affairs Dr. Murphy Osborne with the task of finding a successor for Hartman within the next couple of weeks. "It is an inconvenient time for him to leave," said Dr. Osborne. "Chuck Hartman has given us 20 years to High Point College, has built an excellent program and has sustained it through the years. We will find someone to continue the program on the high level on which it existed."

Being besieged by pro and other college offers since taking over the High Point reign midway through the 1959 season, Hartman has turned away many lucrative offers over his tenure at HPC. But the VPI position offered many golden gates for his career. "VPI is like a diamond in the ruff," said the Gaston County native. "They have the money to put into the program, and they play good baseball. With such teams as Florida State and Memphis State in the Metro Conference, it is certainly a stern challenge."

Hartman was almost a shoo-in for the Carolina job two years ago but when the offer didn't come, Hartman figured that High Point would be his foundation for many more years. "I put a

Bullard Crowned During Homecoming Festivities

BY SUZANNE KARPPINEN

The annual homecoming activities took place February 2 and 3 on campus. The events began Friday night with the Alumni dance and ended Saturday night after the crowning of the homecoming queen.

The dance was held at the Village Green in Greensboro from 8 p.m. to 1 p.m. The band was Visions/Trac IV & Sound Tech Disco. The general consensus was, "the sound system was great," and "I had a blast." Approximately 500 people attended the dance. Those students who didn't attend the dance went to smaller private parties such as "the annual old maids' convention."

Saturday morning homecoming continued with a display of many floats in front of the student center. The floats were judged and the winners were announced at the game that evening. First place went to Alpha Delta Theta, second place went to Kappa Delta and third place went to Delta Sigma Phi.

The game began at 7:30 Saturday night. The Panthers took on the Lenoir-Rhyne Bears, defeating them 63 to 44. The Gym was completely filled with parents, students, professors and alumni. Approximately 3,500 people attended.

At half time the homecoming court was announced. The court this year consisted of 20 "J.s. They were: representing the Phoe-

The Best Of Insomnia

Night Owls on the Swoop

It's 2:30 a.m. and the lights are still glaring in our rooms. We have nothing really to do at this hour. We're just up for the satisfaction of our nightly ritual - watching an entire hall blink out light by light and slumber off into a world of passive sleep.

We are the night owls and we're not the least bit intimidated by 8:00 classes or 24 hour days. Our days end at our own choosing. Our lives are full of nocturnal piddling and even Somnux can't put a kink in the life-style of an honest-to-God night owl.

We live off of vitamins, coffee and tea. We fully appreciate silent halls after all have long since flaked out. We are the martyrs who roam about in the early hours, doing laundry, kicking the Lance machines and sleeping during the day. It's not necessary to be a No-Dozer or a tea drinker to join this minority sorority. Insomnia will do.

I've been a night owl of the tea drinking faction for a while myself and I've found that nocturnal possibilities are unlimited. We have our choice of washers and dryers and showers and toilets. We eventually find out about fellow night owls and hold great conventions in our rooms. Occasionally we will hold a late show backgummon tournament sponsored by Bigelow, of course.

And then some night owls seek their pleasures over crullers at Krispy Kreme or the greasy atmosphere at Waffle and Egg. They know every 24 hour stop in the city and it's tradition to pile up and go when the backgummon gets dull. The more determined ones walk the course - barefoot. Some collect one way signs. Others stay in the dorm and answer all of the 4:00 phone calls on the hall. The hall depends on them.

We spend our lives in sweatpants. We never reach our fourth stage of sleep. There's something definitely wrong with us. But we're hooked. For some great mysterious reason we feel guilty about going to bed at eleven. It's our self-appointed duty to see the world off before shutting our own eyes.

Nocturnalism isn't for everyone. We're good for nothing during the day. In fact, we're a hopeless bunch. Teachers hate us. Nobody understands us. We look like raccoons most of the time and our lights are usually always on.

But there's a tradition to carry on. God help us. Just be kind to us when you hear clanks in the laundry room. The night owls are on the swoop.

High Point Lacks Pep

BY KIM DARDEN

One would think that a student body who can claim a defending national championship women's basketball team and a 13-5, defending conference champion men's team would want to bring down the rafters of its home gym. But even though we have everything to celebrate, our stands are continuously only sparsely filled, and the most pep we can stir up is scattered applause here and there.

The cheerleaders cheer their hearts out, but often to blank faces. What happened to that good ole bench stomping and mischievous yelling we all did in high school? What happened to the good old days at HPC, when, according to alumni and High Point residents, the stands were packed and a person was lucky to get a seat?

Where is that glorious heat of battle? Our job is not only to support our team, but to intimidate our opponents. After all, the homecourt advantage is not the floor.

Other teams should dread playing the Panthers at home. They should leave here knowing they've been in Panther territory. Ask Gardner Webb about home court power. They had a 93 game winning streak at home until last week - when we broke it.

The spirit was really flowing here at Homecoming. But once a year isn't enough. There's something missing at HPC. Says Panther freshman-forward Anthony Parish, "I'm feeling really dejected about the games. I was really looking forward to high-spirited games when I came here; instead there's less (spirit) than at my high school. There's no ... atmosphere or something."

What we need is some unifying force. And many students feel very enthusiastically that the unifying force missing is a pep band.

"(It a band) would give us something to get into - a little rockin' and jazz to get everybody movin'," says one student. "A pep band would most definitely help us," says Panther freshman forward Bruce Floyd. "I'd love to hear a band and the crowd. It fires me up. I'd hear the music when I made a good play on offense - and it would push me to run down the court and make a good defensive play. It would probably affect the whole team the same way."

Cheerleader Tina Lynch says emphatically, "A pep band would be great." The cheerleaders could even do routines.

Several efforts to start a pep band have been made in past years, but each fizzled out. Says senior Tommy Gray, who was involved in two such attempts, "It was just plain lack of student interest. It was okay a couple of times, but then less and less people came to practice. I know if we could just get 70% of the people who played instruments in high school, we'd have a great pep band."

Sophomore Lynn Upchurch was in on the organization of last year's pep band, which survived until mid-season before breaking up. "We really tried to work it out," he says. "But we didn't have enough people so it just didn't sound good. But even when we had just a woodblock and cadence going it helped. I really want to try again next year. There's just a void here for me without a band. It can work; we just need people to show up -- people to want it."

According to sophomore Irish Graydon, the difference was tremendous on the few nights the pep band played last year.

"It really gave more of the feeling of the game," she says. It got everybody moving, screaming and involved. They'd be a dunk or something, then you'd hear the drums, "ta da ta da" - It just made everybody want 'em to go out there and do it again." Irish dressed as "the Panther" last year and danced to the music. "We played 'Brick House' and everything," she grins.

And does the administration support a pep band? Murphy Osborne said they could sit beside him. And how about the music department? Dr. Elson of Fine Arts says the department will be glad to help.

Just one more note: Does HPC have a fight song? When students and faculty were asked this they all replied: "I don't know ... If we do, I've never heard one ... Well, we do have one. After a week of investigation, it was found -- in a 1929 Zenith. 1929 was the last time it was printed or sung!

A pep band isn't the ultimate answer to our spirit problems, but it's certainly a start. And to those of you who have that very special musical ability, we - the concerned students, the basketball players, the cheerleaders, those who have tried and failed to organize a band, and this writer appeal to you to do a great service to your school. It's about time we dig out that old 1929 fight song and raise our voices high.

College Bowl Winners Advance

BY STEPHANIE HIGGINS

The climax of the College Bowl competition will be on February 8th and 9th. Representatives from High Point College will travel to the University of Tennessee for the Regional Competition, where they will compete against sixteen other colleges and universities. The finalists and alternates were chosen from the thirty people who took part in the College Bowl competition here at High Point.

Last Fall a nation-wide revival of the College Bowl was sparked on college campuses. Here at High Point, Tom Burke, director of the Campus Center, was caught up in the revival of the "Varsity Sport of the Mind." "I invested about $360.00 and I was really pushing to get it off the ground. Nobody knew exactly what it was."

What is College Bowl? Here at High Point thirty students, representing the different academic divisions, were chosen and placed on six teams. Each team also had a faculty member as a coach. Competition between the teams began on November 13th and culminated with the finals on January 22nd. The five finalists, Warren Sweeney, Steve Hill, Debbie Holcomb, Mark Poore, and David Douglas, then went up against the faculty team on January 29th, and lost a closely contested match, 180 to 130. Five alternates, Ellen Carmine, Robin Marley, Don Ramsey, Rod Cowick, and Scott Johnson were also selected by faculty consensus from the remaining students to represent High

Ellie Smeal Speaks Out On ERA In North Carolina

BY JILL CHRISTIANSON
"If you don't think that the women's movement is doing anything in North Carolina - JOIN IT!" Ellie Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women (NOW) spoke at the Duke campus last week.

Smeal was invited to speak by the Political Science Department as part of a colloquium on marriage and the family. In attendance were 150 women and men - toddlers, young people, and even senior citizens who came to hear about the Equal Rights Amendment.

"This movement touches upon everything in your life," Smeal told the group.

The president of NOW stressed the 'ERA is for everybody' slogan in her speech.

The difficulties in the passage of the ERA in congress and the ratification were discussed by Smeal. After the ratification for the women's suffrage amendment in 1920, Alice Paul (the mother of American feminism) started speaking in favor of an amendment which would give women equal rights under the law.

As the director of the National Woman's Party, Paul started a campaign for the ERA in 1923. For fifty-six years women have been wanting equal rights under the constitution, and still these rights have not been granted to women.

Paul made regular visits to the presidents, urging them to introduce the ERA to the House of Representatives. Times were hard, with the depression then the war; as Smeal put it - "women must wait, everything for women is harder to attain than for any other people in society."

Smeal remarked that it is interesting how history books view women's suffrage - "women were 'given' the vote." She said sarcastically that she couldn't wait to see in history books when

"women were 'given' equal rights." Events have a way of becoming distorted in history books.

The ERA was passed in congress finally in 1972, with a seven year time limit on the ratification of the amendment. "Alice Paul was very much against the time limit," Smeal said.

The people involved with the National Organization for Women were not very concerned about the time limit. "It seemed like the passage of the amendment was inevitable," Smeal said.

Smeal shared with the audience a story about when she and other members of NOW were working in Florida to ratify the amendment there. She said that the opposition all over the United States appeared to be "traditional housewives;" the ones supporting the amendment were reportedly "women's libbers."

Smeal started talking to her fellow workers about who actually were the opposers of the ERA. She then realized that it was them, the housewives, who were involved in supporting the amendment. Not a single person in the room held either a full or part time job.

It was not until 1977 that NOW started to investigate the opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment. "We didn't recognize the opposition," Smeal said.

The "opposition" appeared to be a group of "right wing political organizers" according to Smeal. Many of the organizers involved in the STOP ERA campaign were active in the McCarthy scare, and were promoters of increased nuclear weapons and the Viet Nam war.

Compared to the relatively inexperienced NOW, STOP ERA has been very effective in gaining the support of legislators. The National Organization for Women is presently involved in lobbying state legislators who will soon be voting on the ERA.

North Carolina state legislature is expected to have the amendment introduced to the floor of the house this week. The vote will be close; the North Carolina NOW is seeking supportive help. Information about supporting the ratification can be obtained at the High Point YWCA.

As Ellie Smeal put it, "If the amendment is turned down, we may lose the last chance of this century to have equality for women under the law. We don't think you can retreat from equality."

Elections, Drinking Head SGA Meeting

BY NANCY REICHLER

Student legislature held its regular meeting on Tues., Jan. 30 at 6:30 p.m. An important item discussed was the upcoming spring elections. Petitions will go out on Feb. 26 and are due in by March 14. The elections will be held on March 28 and 29. Another important item of business reported by Carolyn Reinhardt was that a proposal for having alcohol on campus has been discussed with President Patton.

The one dollar day student lunch program proposal was discussed with Mr. Dalbey. He reports that there is no possible way to check on the students, and that no other school has such a program. Therefore, the program will not be implemented.

Other news reported in the meeting includes the following: The radio station has new working hours of Saturdays from 1-9 p.m. Jeff Apperson will replace Matt Danton on the judicial court. The freshman class will be selling Valentine's Day grams on Feb. 12 and 13. A sophomore slave day will be held on Feb. 21. Traffic court will be held on Feb. 14 and Feb. 28. The IFC will award plaques to the fraternity with the highest GPA and to an outstanding faculty member.

Legislature will hold its next meeting on Feb. 13 at 6:30 p.m.

Backgammon Tourney

BY JERRY BLACKWELL

For all backgammon lovers here at HPC, the Student Activities Office is planning something which should be enticing. During the week of February 12, the Student Activities Office will be sponsoring a backgammon tournament, which will be held in the first floor lobby of the student center.

Not only is this a great opportunity for you to display your skills at this game (and maybe even impress a few friends) but it's also an opportunity for you to win some money! The first place winner will receive $15.00 and $10.00 will be awarded to the second place winner.

All interested students should contact Tom Burke in the Student Activities Office. At press time, twenty-two persons have already signed up for the tournament.

After the game ended, there were many parties given by some of the organizations on campus to honor their alumni.

Timmons Provided Humor and Music

BY LINDA CAIN

The old saying, "There's no business like show business" was the image projected by Cy Timmons, a comedian guitarist, in a recent appearance at High Point College.

Timmons brought a big smile and hearty laughter to students with his jokes and expertise of the guitar. Several times he backed up his songs with impressions of a trombone and flute.

He made himself at home with the audience by asking if they had any questions they wanted to ask a star because now was their chance. He told the audience that he used his guitar for protection, but to all those who watched, his guitar was not a defensive device but a confidante.

Timmons performed a mixture of contemporary songs and top 40. He sang "I'm Gonna Smile Today," "Summer Breeze," "I Love You Just The Way You Are," and "If."

He added humor to his act in his gerbil songs. Several years ago he became interested in the little creature after reading an article in Time magazine on them. He re-wrote several pieces to show his interest, such as: "Puff The Magic Gerbil," "Gerbil On My Shoulder," and "Your Having My Gerbil."

In addition he performed a song, "What To Say," from a movie he is making called "The Street Singer."

Cy Timmons is originally from Alabama, but he grew up in Atlanta, Georgia. He is currently part owner of Cafe Erewan, a night club in Atlanta.

BY JILL CHRISTIANSON

"I'd like to start my retirement years circumnavigating the earth," avid sailor Raiford Porter said. In recent years, the High Point College art professor has found an answer to the busy life-style of landlubbers -- the sea.

Porter began his sailing adventures with a home-made Sail Fish, a small sailboat designed for beginners of the sport. The size of his play toys has grown with his interest in the sport. Porter now owns a twenty-three foot yacht.

Sailing for Porter started as a diversion from his art work and writing during the summers. The sport was an escape from the "summer hustle and bustle out on the beach," he said.

Porter has seen the Outer Banks' population grow in the past two decades. Porter said that he could once walk the beach for three miles and not see any homes besides his own.

The area today is filled with year-round residences; the isolation which the beach once had is now gone, in Porter's opinion. "So many beach people either end up alcoholics or vegetables," he said. Porter's disenchantment for the beach lead him out to sea.

Porter started his salt water explorations by taking day trips along the coast and "gunk holing," exploring the shallow areas of the shoreline.

Recently, Porter has ventured out further into the ocean. Last summer he was away from land for ten days, while sailing to Long Beach, N.C.

The thought of sailing alone does not faze Porter in the least. He often sets out to sea with just the company of his two dogs. Porter says he finds great "solitude" in the sea.

Sketch pad and charcoal are a "must" for Porter's sailboat. While on water, he sketches; then back on land he transfers the sketches onto canvas, with oils.

Along with painting, Porter enjoys creating pieces of pottery, sculpture, and graphics. He has entered art competition in several different types of media. "In the teaching situation... it is almost impossible for me to isolate my interests so narrowly that I could become a professional."

Porter is also interested in writing. He is about to finish a novel he has been working on for three years. The art professor has presented several types of formal research papers and has expressed himself through his poetry.

Travel also has a prominent place in Porter's life. He has studied in Mexico and India, and has traveled extensively in Europe, the Far East, the Near East and the Caribbean.

The thought of circumnavigating the earth for most people is just a far fetched dream, but for Raiford Porter it may one day become a reality.

Registrar Holt Passes Time Calling Square Dances

BY RAY DANIEL

"Box the gnat, allemande thar, and slip the clutch." If these phrases have you puzzled, you would be bewildered at the hundred or more moves a professional square dance caller may use in a night of Western Square Dancing.

Mr. Holt, the registrar, has been involved in square dancing since his childhood. He grew up in a rural community, where the highlight of the week was to go to the Grange every Saturday night to dance. That kind was known as Barn Dancing or the Appalachian style. The bands consisted mainly of a fiddler and a banjo. They performed old fashioned string music. Mr. Holt feels when these old players get together, their music is a beautiful art form, "an institution."

This old form of dancing involved more foot movement than anything else. And after one night of dancing, "when you left, you felt like you were a professional at it."

extension." The Western form uses either bands or records, but the caller is the most important element. He gives every movement to the dancers. He organizes the patterns with their steps. Having over a hundred basic calls, his job is complex, to say the least. To further complicate his job, he may be a "singing caller." He uses a popular song and as the music plays, the caller will sing part of the song and then slip in the movements, so that the words of the song and the movements mix together, but still keep in time with the music. The other kind of caller is a "hash caller." He calls out one move after another, just to get the dancers moving fast. "The fun is trying to keep up with him." But whichever kind, "a good caller always gets you back at the right place at the right time," even though a dancer can be anywhere in the square at one time or another.

Although it takes years to become a good caller, learning to perform all the moves also takes a while. It usually takes about six months of lessons to learn all the basics, so that a couple can go out on the floor with the experienced dancers. Even after that, it takes years to dance really proficiently. If a dancer does not know a move that is called, he will have to stop or else he will probably run into someone at their last pace.

As complicated as it sounds, Mr. Holt greatly enjoys it. He says that in time anyone can learn to do it if they pay attention to the calls. He likes the exercise, the fun of it, and its pure beauty.

The bright costumes moving in the squares are magnificent. Mr. Holt has seen as many as 800 to 900 people at the national dances, all moving simultaneously to the music and calls, in their squares of eight. All the costumes are strictly Western, "right out of Texas." The women wear bright, full dresses, and their partners wear matching colors, with boots, big brass buckles, and colorful western shirts.

Mr. Holt also likes the popularity of square dancing. There are local clubs all over. For instance, there are six clubs in Winston Salem, and two in High Point. When someone joins, they receive a directory of clubs everywhere in the country. If the couple then traveled anywhere in the U.S. or in some parts of Canada, they could dance every night, practically anywhere they stopped. Here at H.P.C., some other people who are involved include Mrs. Blake, Dr. Head, and Mrs. Peggy Ingram.

All ages seem to enjoy it. Mr. Holt teaches some to the P.E. classes. "They love it." In about four one hour sessions, he can teach them enough moves to dance to "Old Swanee," which has about 20 different kinds of moves. At the big dances, like at the square dance capital, Fontana, N.C., everyone from 8 to 80 dances. The ones in their eighties seem to be the most enthusiastic and tend to dance the most. The local dances are free to watch, and everyone is welcome as long as they are clean and are not drinking. One of the best local places to go is Polo Park, in Winston Salem, which has a big dance about every other Saturday night

Literary Magazine Now Accepting Contest Entries

High Point College's creative literary magazine, Apogee, is accepting entries for the 1979 issue between now and February 28. Competition with cash prizes is being held in prose/poetry and art/photography divisions. Selected entries will be published in the Apogee in early April. All entries should be previously unpublished, have the name and box number on them, and be submitted to Box 3527 no later than the closing date of the competition- February 28. Competition is open to all HPC students and faculty/staff.

All written submissions should be typed in the same form as the author would desire for publication. Prose works should be limited to five hundred words or less. The Charles Mounts Award and a cash prize are given for the most outstanding written work received. Unless requested, written entries will not be returned after the competition.

The Raiford Porter Award

and a cash prize will be given for the best black and white art or photography entry. Work should be photo ready and preferably covered for protection. Each art work and photograph submitted should have the artist/photographer's name and box number on the back so that it can be returned following the competition. There is no restriction on the number of entries a person can make in any category and it is possible for one person to win in both divisions. Only selected works will be published in the Apogee magazine.

All works submitted will receive a double critique before they are allowed into the magazine. First all works are reviewed by a selected committee of students who do not know who any of the works are by. These students grade all entries using a point scale to designate which works they feel are most worthy of publication. The works that have the highest cumulative scores are passed on to the second reading committee. This committee usually consists of one faculty member, one student and one off-campus personality. In the past Dr. Jim Helgeson of the High Point Arts Council has sometimes assisted in this position. This committee makes the final selection of which works will be published and which works will receive the division awards.

During February and part of March, reservation blanks will be available for members of the High Point College Community to reserve a copy of the Apogee. In this way the staff hopes to circulate the magazine to a broader audience.

There has been some furor in the past over the subject matter of items published in the Apogee. There is no restriction on the subject matter allowed but the staff would hope that good taste is observed in determination of material to be submitted. Apogee is provided under the Student-Faculty Publications Committee as an outlet for campus artist and writers, both student and faculty.

PANTHER PROFILES

BY DENNIS TUTTLE

Andrea Blanchard controls a tap... powers fiercely to the hoop and hauls in a rebound.

Peach Basket on Tree

Blanchard's Style Original

Lanky Andrea Blanchard strutted from behind the bleachers into the public view of the few remaining spectators following High Point's 89-50 win over Pfeiffer. Displaying her cheek-to-cheek grin and down home southern attitude, one receives the inner most warmth of her charming personality that is molded into her stout 6-1 shot blocking, power rebounding frame.

Behind that tomboyish smile is a story of Blanchard of few know; but exists in a manner that Dr. James Naismith the inventor of basketball, would have been ever so proud to hear. Blanchard learned to play basketball on a peach basket nailed to a tree; there was no backboard. She played with the boys down the street in her native Elizabeth City, N.C. hometown and to this day, she still battles the guys for inside position and powers fiercely to the hoop.

"I played with the boys in the backyard," said the sophomore P.E. major, shying from her family environment. "I guess it was all street ball. In order to play with the guys you have to be one of them. They wouldn't let me play at first but I advanced from playing at home so much that they finally decided to let me in on some of the games."

When Blanchard charges through a crowded lane, twists and turns her way through a zone defense with a baseline move or breaks the clogged lane by powerfully hauling in a rebound, her usual success at the above relates to the time she practiced on the backboardless peach basket in a tree. She worked vigorously on short baseline jumpers and straight away 15 footers. The dividends paid off.

"I don't regret all the work that I did because I don't think I would have went to college if I had not have been offered a scholarship," Blanchard said. "I was going to the service and right at the last moment, I changed my mind and decided to go to college. I don't regret my decision for school at all."

Blanchard was an all-state performer her senior year at Perquimans High School in Elizabeth City. Averaging 22 ppg and 18 rebounds per contest, she narrowed her college choices down to Norfolk State, East Carolina and High Point. "I came here with the attitude that making the starting lineup was going to be hard and I knew it would be," Blanchard added. Little did she realize that her freshman year on the team - the Panthers' National title year - would be interrupted by academic problems and a swollen knee. The grade problems eventually cured, the fluid on her knee is still supported by a $20 Bayer and Black special brace.

Even though Blanchard's moves through the middle are smooth as silk and sometimes horrifying for the opponents, she has a phobia about hurting opposing players with some of her brutal drives. Not the bravest of people, she even gets the shivers from walking in the dark. "I'm a timid person about playing. I sometimes hesitate on a move because I'm afraid that I might hurt someone and knock someone out. That ain't no fun being knocked out."

Despite Blanchard's parents disapproval of her playing basketball, her family is extremely proud of her accomplishments at High Point. She has fought off ravaging

Lady Panthers Clinch CC; Looking To Tourneys

BY IRISH GAYMON

What do you say about a bunch of young ladies who have been dominating the basketball scene lately? Well, it doesn't look like coach Wanda Briley is complaining. The last couple of games have been devastating for the Lady Panthers. Winning against Campbell College (103-55) Winston-Salem State University (96-68), Pfeiffer College (75-60) and Guilford College (106-48).

The 1979 Homecoming was not any different, with a 84-57 victory over Atlantic Christian College. Marie Riley and Ethel White combined for 42 points to lead the scoring. Andrea Blanchard added 17 points. The win made the ladies 6-0 in the Carolinas Conference.

There is no doubt that High Point is playing much better now than when the ladies won 20 straight last year.

With an 89-50 win over Pfeiffer Monday night, High Point secured the Carolinas Conference regular season title. Coach Briley was extremely pleased with her team's output against Pfeiffer and more recently, the improving play of the squad as tournament time nears. "Games like Pfeiffer never hurt you," said the second year coach. "When we played them before, we went with three new offenses and Pfeiffer didn't expect that. My team seems to thrive on something different and see how well they can perform it."

Lady Panthers Rank No. 1

Defending National AIAW Champion High Point College is tabbed as the No. 1 small college team in the nation in the first poll selected by a board of coaches across the country.

The Lady Panthers gathered 328 points to rank above runner-up South Carolina State in the poll. South Carolina State had 310 points. Southeastern Louisiana, the top AIAW team two years ago, is third with 277 points.

Floyd, Riley Named Players of Week

PEMBROKE -- High Point College made a double sweep in the Carolinas Conference's "Basketball Player of the Week" selections Tuesday by winning both the Male award with Charlie Floyd being honored and the Female selection with Marie Riley being chosen.

Floyd, a 6-foot-7 senior forward from Philadelphia, was devastating as the Panthers' mens team knocked Gardner-Webb out of first place in the national NAIA standings with a 51-49 victory at Gardner-Webb and also handed Pfeiffer its first conference loss 75-67 at Pfeiffer. Against Gardner-Webb he scored 20 points, had 11 rebounds and four assists.

Riley, a 5-foot-11 junior from Seldon, N.Y., was even more impressive as the Lady Panthers, defending AIAW Division II defending national champions, picked up momentum in crushing Campbell 103-55, walloping Winston-Salem State 96-68 and handling Pfeiffer at its first conference loss at Pfeiffer defenders on rebounds and scrapped through school problems with ambition and confidence. Her freshman year was one that taught her more about life and basketball than any other that she can remember.

"My freshman year I learned so much about basketball and myself. I had never traveled much because my father was a farmer and we never got around that much. So when I started playing college level, it was hard for me to get it into my head that I could compete with the rest of the players and I was a little homesick," noted Blanchard. "Miss Briley has worked with me a great deal on my shooting and using the backboard (remember, she didn't have a backboard on her goal at home; I have a lot to be thankful for."

Floyd 'Smokin' Nets

Panthers Gain Momentum Down Stretch

High Point College Homecoming '79 was sprinkled with a little dancing, a little entertainment and a lot of fire. The blaze came from senior Charlie Floyd, whose 25 points, 10 rebounds and four assists led the Panthers to a 63-44 win over Lenior. Rhyne and gave HPC its sixth win in a row -- the most consecutive wins since 1974-75 season.

The determination and sparkling glare could be seen in Floyd's eyes from high in the rafters. He tossed-and-turned his way for position under the goal and pulled up for 18-20 footers throughout the evening in the decked out Alumni Gym. Floyd had 14 of High Point's 27 first half points in which the Panthers held a seven point lead.

HPC led only 33-31 with 16 minutes left in the game but L-Rs poor shooting, in which the Bears went 13:01 of the final 13:24 minutes of the game without a field goal, helped the Panthers march to a 63-40 lead by on two Warren Harding free throws.

But Floyd's play hasn't been the total key to High Point winning 11 of its last 13 games including its second win of the year over Gardner-Webb and knocking Pfeiffer from the undefeated ranks in the Carolinas Conference. The wins over G-W and Pfeiffer came in the same week. Guard Danny Anderson has been shooting well from the perimeter and Dennis West's strong rebounding and timely shooting has aided in starting the Panther rise. Freshman Bruce Floyd returned to action against Pfeiffer after experiencing academic problems and responded with 16 points.

The 51-49 win over G-W came on Charlie's 15 firth after HPC's Anthony Parrish picked up a loose ball with 2:43 left to play. Coach Jerry Steele ordered the Panthers to hold for a last shot and Floyd got the opening he needed with 20 seconds remaining. Charlie had 21 points in the win.

The Panthers derailed Pfeiffer from the undefeated status in the conference with a 75-67 win at Misenheimer. HPC trailed 18-14 early but the Panthers reeled off 11 straight points before Pfeiffer cut the deficit to 37-35 at intermission. That was the closest Pfeiffer got the rest of the evening. Bruce contributed 12 rebounds to the cause and Charlie had 10. High Point led by 15 on several occasions.

And, the Panthers' 75-56 drubbing of ACC was Charlie Floyd free throw night. The Philadelphia All-America, hitting on 88 percent of eggs in the basket for that Carolina job a couple of years ago and I've had some pro offers. The pros don't intrigue me any more. Scouting would be of an interest to me but I would have to have security in that position."

He came to High Point in January, 1968 as an assistant basketball and tennis coach. He assumed the head baseball coaching duties for the last ten games of the 1969 season and was named head coach for the 1969 year. Prior to his arrival as baseball coach, High Point had won eight games in three years. HPC matched that total his first complete season in 1960.

Applications are being taken for a successor.

With a win over Pembroke State tonight at Alumni Gym, the Panthers can claim its seventh win in a row and the longest winning streak for men's basketball in 10 years. HPC is 5-3 in the conference, 15-7 over all.

Rod Browning, director of the original Dracula, searches the circuses and side-shows of the world for "actors" to populate his bizarre world in Freaks. An unforgettable combination of horror and comedy emerges from the story of a midget who falls in love with a "normal" trapeze artist. When the serialist discovers that the midget owns a fortune, she hatches a murder plot, only to be thwarted by the other circus freaks.

Yearbook Falling Way Behind Publication Schedule

BY SCOTT HANCE

The possibilities of not receiving the High Point College yearbook for 1979 before the end of the Spring Semester are growing with each passing day. Until the publisher, Taylor Publishing Company, receives the final shipment of pages from the ZENITH, the staff and advisors will just wait and hope that the yearbook can be delivered before the end of school.

Upon receipt of all the material for the book, the publisher will survey the work to be done and set up a new publication schedule which will no doubt include a large amount of overtime and "rush". The publisher will then notify the school and ZENITH staff of a new delivery date. This date is the main concern of the parties involved.

In order to meet the spring delivery date of the ZENITH, a publication schedule was established and agreed to by the publisher and the ZENITH personnel. There were a total of four deadline dates which required that a certain number of the 144 total pages be sent to the publisher. On November 6, only 8 of the 16 required pages were sent. 88 more pages were required on December 19 and only 32 completed. By January 31, 36 more pages were required and the final four pages were required on February 9. No pages were sent on either deadline.

In a conversation with the editor, Kathy Horvath, it was revealed that the major problem in the putting together of the ZENITH this year has been a lack of help and a lack of responsibility on the part of those who said they would contribute. A general lack of communication between the editor, publisher, and advisors has also been a hindrance to the publication.

Horvath stated that she was not informed of the January deadline and was working towards completion by a February 6 deadline. The February 9 deadline was for Homecoming pages only. She cited specific reasons why each of the other deadlines were not met. Problems over the use of the Campus Center darkroom and the stealing of a large amount of chemicals and paper prevented the meeting of the November deadline. This problem continued throughout the year. The December requirement was not met partially on account of the disappearance of layout mats and a controversy with the seniors over the taking of their pictures. Layout supplies and pictures missing from the publications room hampered the completing of the pages for the February deadline and still baffle the editor.

Despite these problems, Horvath feels that the ZENITH will arrive on time for distribution to the students before the summer. The final pages will be sent before the end of this week. She remarked that if not for the support and help from Caryn Reinhart, Mr. Raymond Petrea, and Ms. Shirley Rawley, the yearbook would not have been completed at this time.

The worry now revolves around the additional cost which will undoubtedly take place. The original cost of the ZENITH was to be approximately $7100 plus $400-500 dollars for corrections and additions. With the rushed publication in progress now, the cost could conceivably climb to as much as $8000.

The yearbook picture at this time is very cloudy. The publisher must now revise and revamp the publication schedule after receiving the final pages. Until the school hears from the publisher as to when to expect shipment, we must wait and hope that the time lost can be made up in the short amount of time remaining until the end of the school year.

Snow Causes Campus Confusion

BY JERRY BLACKWELL

Classes here at EPC have been recently cancelled on two occasions because of the severe snow storms. The snow not only forced the cancellation of classes, but also caused much disorder here on campus.

The first storm which occurred about three weeks ago, prompted much confusion on campus, and shut down classes for one day.

The main problem concerning the storm was that many students here felt that they weren't sufficiently notified of the cancellation of classes caused by the storm.

Although local TV and radio stations announced HPC's cancellation of classes, only a few students heard the announcements. The majority of students here were left uncertain about the class situation.

At breakfast that morning, over three hundred students filed into the cafeteria and waited intently for an announcement concerning classes. Finally at about 8:30, it was announced that classes had been cancelled for that day.

Why was the announcement made so late, and why was the whole situation of informing the students of this cancellation handled so negligently? These were the two questions which puzzled and agitated many students here on campus.

During an interview with Dean Cole, he cited "a breakdown in communications" as the probable cause for the confusion. Dean Cole also elaborated on how the cancellation of classes is determined in the case of snow. Only when it is felt that the faculty would be unable to travel to campus and find room for parking are classes cancelled, explained Dean Cole. He also insisted that if this situation should occur again, students should tune in to WGHP-TV, and WGLD (radio), two local stations which have agreed to broadcast notification of HPC's cancellation of classes in case of snow. Dean Guy also assured in a later interview that bulletins would be placed on the student center doors and other measures would be taken to notify students of class cancellations in the future.

During the last snow storm, which left a white blanket of over nine inches, and cancelled classes for two

Dismantling For Fun and Tuition

All of us know how much we change in different respects when we come to college. We tend to eat more, spend more, and become less tidy when mom's not around to threaten us. Unfortunately bad habits have evolved into worse habits for some and at the expense of everyone.

Dorm residents are faced with a massive clutter by these inconsiderate individuals. Mounds of trash accumulate in hallways, stairways, bathrooms and lounges. It is an eyesore and roach bait and it is not the maid's responsibility to remove it.

Then the inconsideration moves up a notch to vandalism. Some may feel that their tactics are practical pranks, but I hardly feel that ripping a full length mirror off the wall, tearing a door off of its hinges or removing all of the cushions from the lounge sofas are jokes — much less are they funny.

These things are actualities that eventually end up costing the innocent. One example of this is when the fire inspector finds fire hazards within the dorm, the insurance is marked up and our tuition goes right up with it. According to Mr. Earle Dalbey, Vice President for Financial Affairs, it costs in excess of $4,000, annually to pay for damages due to student vandalism; however, it is difficult to cite any one figure of cost.

I feel that it is about time certain people started growing up around here and start caring for more than themselves. I feel sure that these people had better home training than to create a shambles where they live. There is no excuse for litter or purposeful destruction and if everyone did their part, there would be a lot nicer environment for us all.

It is ridiculous when one comes to the point of worrying whether or not to show her guest to the toilet for fear of its unsanitary conditions due to student negligence. It too is ridiculous when the majority finds themselves dismantled by a minority. There is no use for the college to give us new furniture, paintings or carpet. It will only fall victim to the same treatment and it is obvious that we can't handle what we already have.

We are slowly but surely stripping ourselves of our rights. We blame the maids but we are the guilty party. I cannot in words adequately express my distaste and lack of respect for these ruthless and destructive individuals who rob us of a satisfactory environment. I can only say that I hope the school does not replace all of the stolen or dismantled objects that vandals on campus managed to take care of. It will only happen again at our costs and it is apparent that some of our college community members are still not mature enough to respect others.

Apathy Prevails Around ERA

BY JILL CHRISTIANSON

Recently a petition was passed among students, faculty, and administration at the college. The petition was in support of the Equal Rights Amendment. One needed to be a registered North Carolina voter in order to sign.

Of more than 1000 possible signatures on the petition, the paper bore only 51 signatures. Less than five percent of the people on campus were willing to affirm their support of the amendment to the United States Constitution.

What happened to the other 95% of people? Many students had never taken the time to register to vote, others hadn't actually read the amendment or were aware of its implications.

Yes, apathy does prevail at High Point College. Apparently too few are interested in an amendment to the United States Constitution which would guarantee the rights of all people under the law. I guess freedom doesn't matter to people any more.

As for our democratic form of government, in which we elect people to represent us, it doesn't matter either. If we don't register to vote, in many respects that shows that we could really care less as to what happens in these United States. We might as well have a dictator to make decisions for us.

The Equal Rights Amendment is an "awesome" fifty-one words long. Since many college students have never read it, we must assume that this reading is too difficult. Dr. Seuss' Green Eggs and Ham is just as difficult to read as the ERA; students wouldn't be able to manage the kiddie book though, it is much too long for them.

It is really sad to think that the other minority, those who are opposed to the ERA, will base opinion on many misconstrued ideas of the amendment. It is important to investigate all the points thoroughly.

As one piece of Anti-ERA material warned: watch out, supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment are communists trained in guerrilla warfare.

High Point College and United States of America beware!!

Letters to the Editor

Enthusiasm Needed

Dear Editor:

I admired Kim Darden's article in the February 7 issue of the Hi Po on the absence of excitement and enthusiasm at this year's basketball games — alas, not merely a total lack of enthusiasm but a lack of people to fill even halfway the seats in Alumni Gymnasium. Miss Darden's courage in fighting this passivity has made me want to fight the campus lethargy also in some tangible way. She suggested an external means of raising the campus to action — music — a band — an emotional stimulus to call people together for a double purpose: to join in the ritual of yelling, cheering, and experiencing a feeling of identity with fellow students and also to gain a feeling of personal commitment and aliveness.

The band may work for the athletic events, but what — what — can be offered to pull all of the other areas of the campus out of the dark lethargy that is rapidly dwindling even beyond lethargy? Where is the glow, the inner joy, that should erupt spontaneously when people join together to discuss new ideas, old ideas — to express mutual concern about news from Venus or Mars, or a new play by Pinter, or a masterpiece by Henry Moore? I suggest no external mechanics of recouping this joy, but an internal leap into the heart of the educational process. Enthusiasm is contagious. Start at the core — who knows — we may get more than one band or bandwagon — I will furnish a wagon!

ERA Concern

To the Editor of the HiPo:

I am a citizen of North Carolina — one who has always been proud to admit this fact. Now I'm not so sure. Last week in Raleigh, I, along with several other High Point College students, witnessed the death in committee of the Equal Rights Amendment in North Carolina. This is the fourth time ERA has been brought up before the N.C. Legislature; three times it was defeated, and this time it never made it to the floor of the Senate.

I am constantly amazed, in a state that is supposedly progressive, that so many people, both legislators and lobbyists, are so uninformed about ERA, and constantly confuse the issues. (Abortion and homosexuality have nothing to do with ERA!) This "progressive state" can provide the option for liquor by the drink, but seems to find it very difficult to ratify an amendment providing equality for all persons. It makes me wonder where North Carolina's priorities lie — in the bottle or with our fellow human beings.

The Equal Rights Amendment is something that cannot be ignored. We supporters will not go away! We've waited years for equality and we're willing to fight even harder now to get this amendment ratified. I encourage everyone to learn something about ERA. Listen to both sides with an open mind, thinking logically rather than emotionally. Talk to your Legislators and find out what stand they took on the issue and how they arrived at their decisions. North Carolina has not seen the last of the Equal Rights Amendment, and every responsible, intelligent person needs to learn what will and won't happen when ERA is ratified. If you are interested in reliable information, it may be obtained at the High Point YWCA, the National Organization of Women, P.O. Box 5291, Winston-Salem, N.C. 27103, or the North Carolina Council of Churches, 110 Cox Ave., Raleigh, N.C. 27606. ERA will be around for a while — please don't get caught without the facts!!

Sincerely,
Kristi Mills

Students Vie For Academic Scholarships

BY STEPHANIE HIGGINS

On the weekend of February 16th, seventy-five candidates arrived at High Point College for the Presidential Scholarship Weekend. The prospective scholars were vying for a total of $150,000 in scholarships.

High Point College is permitted to give up to forty-five scholarships depending upon the qualifications of the candidates. The scholarships are broken down into Presidential, Honor, and Merit Scholarships, and are worth $5,000, $3,000 and $2,000 respectively, over a four year period.

All the candidates are academically strong, but another important portion of the scholarship process are the interviews with the individual candidates which were held during the weekend. The interviewing committees were made up of current Presidential Scholars and faculty members of the college. Guidelines were followed with emphasis on the candidates' career goals, leadership qualities, and community awareness. Academics were kept separate from the interviews, and it will be the combination of the two which will merit the award of the scholarship.

The weekend was also a familiarization process. The scholarship nominees had numerous social events to attend such as the informal social at Dr. Osborne's home, an afternoon tea on Saturday, the men's and women's basketball games, the Tower of Player's Production -- "Dial 'M' for Murder", and a tour of the college and High Point City. The prospective scholars also had a chance to meet the college administration: The President of the College, Dr. Patton, Dr. Murphy Osborne, and Mrs. Louise Nowicki, the weekend's coordinator and Financial Aid Director.

An added attraction to the weekend was the occurrence of the snowstorm on Sunday. Since many of the students were from out of state, and as far away as Maine, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Florida, they had two extra days to get better acquainted with the High Point College Community while waiting for Greensboro Airport to reopen. Many thanks are to hand for the students of the college who unselfishly made the scholar nominees feel at home by showing them around the campus and loaning out their rooms for the weekend.

Patton Comments On College Concerns

BY LINDA CAIN

Less than three months are left in the 1978-1979 school year. During the year, the High Point College community has mourned the loss of Interim, survived a loss of thefts and break-ins, and is expecting a larger enrollment than ever in the coming year.

Wendell Patton, President of High Point College said that he regrets the loss of Interim, but hopes that the college will go back to it one day. "The mini-term was dropped in order to form a joint calendar with the other Methodist institutions," explained Patton.

He continued saying, "It was hoped that the joint calendar would facilitate better student-faculty exchange; be in keeping with the ones of other college and universities in the Consortium, and better coordinate the appearances of guest speakers."

"Courses not taught during the regular semester were lost when Interim was dropped," he said.

The administrator stressed that security has become a big problem.

"The administration is trying to do everything they can, but they need help from the students," said Patton. He urged students to "keep watch and report any suspicious actions."

"The problem cannot be corrected until we can catch them in the act and can prosecute," Patton stated.

Concerning student enrollment, the president said that applications were running 5% ahead of last year.

"The goal for next year is 1100 students," he stated.

The president would like to see an increased input and participation of the student body, a revitalization of student government, and specific purpose for being developed. He would also like to see more cohesion among members of the HPC family to achieve a joint purpose.

Homosexuality Stand Adopted

BY JILL CHRISTIANSON

High Point College has recently adopted a policy on homosexual lifestyles among students. The statement, which is taken directly from The Book of Discipline of the United Methodist Church was approved by the Student Affairs Committee last week.

The policy, in short, states that the college neither condones nor encourages homosexuality among students, but the college does respect the human rights of individuals advocating that lifestyle.

After the Student Affairs Committee approved the new policy, it was announced to the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees and to the faculty.

Dean Guy, in referring to the policy said, "The college should make it known publicly how it stands on this issue." He later added, "I think it's a fair statement."

Guy mentioned that since this policy is one of the United Methodist Church, that the college is obliged to abide by the decision.

President Patton, in speaking about the adopted statement said that he thought it necessary for the college to have a stand on the issue.

High Point College's policy on homosexuality, in full, is stated below:

POLICY RELATING TO DIVERGENT LIFE STYLES ON CAMPUS

As a matter of policy, High Point College reserves the right to reject all sexual expressions which are detrimental to the well being of an individual. As a Christian institution of higher learning, High Point College will attempt to establish an atmosphere which affirms that sexual expression which enhances an individual. We support the definition of divergent life style and the clarification of policies toward individuals who practice these life styles, found in The Book of Discipline of the United Methodist Church, 1976, which states:

"Homosexuals no less than heterosexuals are persons of sacred worth, who need the ministry and guidance of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship which enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. Further we insist that all persons are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured, though we do not condone the practice of homosexuality and consider this practice incompatible with Christian teaching."

This statement is herewith adopted as our guide in all our interactions with students.

days, steps were taken to adequately inform students of cancellations. Prompt announcements were made in the cafeteria, local T.V. and radio stations aired notification of the cancellations, and bulletins were placed on the student center doors, informing students of the cancellations.

The only problem resulting from this storm was that of students throwing snowballs. Several windows around campus were broken as a result. Also snowballs were thrown through open windows in dormitories, and many students who were walking in the area of these snowball fights became the innocent victims of the snow throwers.

The snow has all melted and all traces of the winter storms have vanished, except for the broken windows around campus which stand to remind us of the snow storms which hit HPC, and the unnecessary problems which resulted.

Students Find Academic Advantages

Students at the University of California, Berkeley, are finding that the advantages of attending a public university are not just financial. They are also academic. A new study by researchers at the university shows that students at public universities are more likely to be involved in research and to receive high-quality instruction than students at private universities.

The study, which was conducted by a team of researchers led by Professor David Colquhoun, found that students at public universities are more likely to be involved in research than students at private universities. The researchers found that students at public universities are more likely to be involved in research that is funded by the federal government, which is a sign of high-quality research.

The researchers also found that students at public universities are more likely to receive high-quality instruction than students at private universities. The researchers found that students at public universities are more likely to be taught by professors who are experts in their field, which is a sign of high-quality instruction.

The study was conducted by a team of researchers from the University of California, Berkeley, and the University of Michigan. The researchers used data from the National Longitudinal Study of the Freshman Class of 1990, which is a study of the academic and social experiences of first-year college students.

Public Concerns On College Closures

Public concerns about the closure of colleges and universities are growing, according to a new survey by the National Association of Public Universities. The survey found that 75 percent of respondents are concerned about the closure of public universities, and 60 percent are concerned about the closure of private universities.

The survey was conducted by the National Association of Public Universities, which is a group of public universities across the United States. The survey found that public universities are more likely to be closed than private universities, and that the closure of public universities is more likely to be caused by budget cuts than by other factors.

A new survey by the National Association of Public Universities shows that public universities are more likely to accept homosexuality than private universities. # Psychic Baffles Audience

BY KIM DARDEN

Gi!Eagles, known as "the entertaining psychic" and "the world's fastest hypnotist," gave a dynamic and undeniable presentation here in the auditorium last Tuesday night. Eagles was here, he said, to "prove beyond a shadow of doubt that there is something beyond the five senses at work... and to present (a performance) that his audience would not forget for some time..." In the minds of most of the students who witnessed his act, he did both.

Eagles, an entertaining showman as well as a psychic, opened his act in a relaxed, humorous, conversational style. He continued to inject humor throughout his performance. But his audience's carefree laughter transformed to nervous laughter as the evening progressed and they were stunned and baffled by his performance.

Eagles first called for two volunteers from the audience to assist him in covering his eyes. "The elimination of my sense of sight will heighten my sixth sense," he said. The students observed him place several layers of tape and a leather blindfold over his eyes. He then played some strikingly accurate "guessing" games with numbers and words random members of the audience wrote out.

Then, still blindfolded, he came to what he called the "most personal" part of his performance. He asked his audience to write their names and any personal questions, information or data (such as phone numbers) on cards. As the cards were being collected in a bowl to be brought to him, he warned ominously, "Tonight I will answer these questions and even questions not written but only thought of... there is no escape now..."

From the bowl he randomly drew cards, held them over his head, and called out names of people in the audience and asked them to stand. People stood, amazed to hear their names and often shaken at the accuracy with which he recited the personal information and alluded to the questions on their cards. After this "psychic counseling" performance, Eagles turned to what he called "the lighter side of psychic phenomenon" — hypnotism.

"Now we will explore the most interesting part of the human anatomy, he said: 'the brain.' He told volunteers from the audience who came up on stage to sit up straight, breath slowly and deeply, with their feet flat on the floor, their palms facing upward, their eyes closed and looking up towards their eyebrows. Soon he had them under his control it seemed, commanding them to first relax, then to tighten every muscle in their bodies. Then he commanded them to assume various personalities — from "the road runner" to a cowboy, a Spanish dancer, Tarzan and Miss Universe — at a certain signal from him or the audience. Their resulting "performances" had the audience laughing hysterically.

Cheri Holmes, who was hypnotized, said of the experience, "It was like I was very aware of where I was and what was going on, but nothing else really mattered except what he (Eagles) was saying. It was like a dream or something. I felt a real inner peace. I felt I was really under his control..." It was a wonderful experience that left me feeling relaxed."

A student in the audience, Jeff Sloan, was convinced by Eagle's performance. "I'm sure there's a sixth sense, and that everybody's got it — he has just developed it."

Said Marcy Randall, "I don't know what he's got, but I believe he's got something."

Vandalism Costs Rising

The costs of vandalism on our campus continues to rise and is a matter for serious concern. These are some specifics:

Removing spray paint from front entrance — $110.00; Repairing broken door in Tom Burke's office — $12.00; Replacing ceiling tile in cafeteria as a result of margarine being thrown on the ceiling — $35.00; Eight doors broken in McCulloch — $48.44.

Other acts of which students may not be aware and upon which it is difficult to estimate costs which may be in excess of $4,000:

Sign at the corner of E. College and Montlieu was painted.

Damages to and missing screens and continued destruction of lights on third floor corridor in McCulloch.

Rail fence across from Mills has been broken many times. Trash is thrown out the windows. Beer cans are thrown out the windows of Mills, Belk and McCulloch.

Apples and oranges which are placed in the cafeteria for snacks for students are found all over campus.

Windows are being broken out — many times by fruit being thrown.

Door broken in Cooke and Haworth Hall.

Bridge between Mills and Campus Center has been wrecked.

Fire extinguishers to be recharged $12.00. Approx. $40 each when completely busted or stolen.

Students do not realize that the money the College spends for correction of vandalism must come from their tuition and can lead only to raised tuition and fees.

There have also been instances of theft on Campus. These are under investigation by the Police Department.

Again, costs must be borne by the students.

Report Shows Women Now Majority

Women are now in the majority of college students in the South, according to an analysis by the Southern Regional Education Board (SREB) of preliminary statistics of last fall's collegiate enrollment.

The SREB analysis also notes that, although there were significant declines in the number of full-time students attending Southern institutions, they were offset by continued increases in part-time enrollment, which was up 5.6 percent in the South.

Thus, enrollment in higher education remained essentially unchanged in the fall of 1978 over levels in the previous year, both in the South and the nation. Except for 1975, when there was a 10 percent increase in enrollment nationwide, the college population has not grown as dramatically in the 1970s as in the 1960s.

In 1978, the total headcount enrollment in the South increased only about one-half of one percent to about 2,950,000 students. Nationally, enrollment declined by 60,000 students, or less than 1 percent, out of a total headcount enrollment of more than 11 million.

Enrollment in private colleges and universities showed little change nationwide. In the South, eight of 14 states experienced declines, and six showed increases.

A drop in the number of male students enrollment full-time accounts for changes in many states. For example, public institutions in the South registered a 4 percent decline in full-time male enrollment in 1978, compared to 1977 levels. But this decline was balanced by significant increases in the enrollment of women, especially of those attending part-time.

For the first time since World War II, women made up a majority of the enrollment in colleges and universities, with 50.1 percent of the headcount total in the South. In the fall of 1978, women account for more than half of the collegiate populations in nine SREB states.

When viewed from a full-time-equivalent student perspective, both the nation and the South registered enrollment declines in 1978 — of 1.8 and 1 percent, respectively.

The small changes noted at the national and regional levels mask considerable fluctuation among the states and among kinds of institutions. In the South, changes in total enrollment in the public sector (which accounts for 85 percent of all enrollment) ranged from a 4.7 percent increase in Virginia (one of the most significant in the nation) to a decline of 4.5 percent in West Virginia. Nine of the 14 SREB states experienced de-

Blankenship Obsessed With Bermuda Triangle Mystery

BY RAY DANIEL

Areshia Blankenship appears to be a normal freshman girl from Shelby, N.C., majoring in General Science, with an emphasis on Oceanography. But she has a very interesting preoccupation, or more correctly, an obsession.

She has decided to plan her life around an attempt to solve the mystery of the Bermuda Triangle. That is her main reason for taking Oceanography. Areshia wants to go here for three years, then go for one year at F.I.T. She feels that her science background will help her to get a position on research ship to explore the Triangle, which stretches from near Miami Beach, to Bermuda, to Cuba.

She was introduced to the phenomenon by her father. He is also excited about the idea of studying the Triangle. Areshia feels that one of three main theories may explain the mystery, even though "anything's possible."

The one in which she places the least faith involves U.F.O.'s. Some people believe that some of these have landed in the Triangle, and built a city under the water. They think that the U.F.O. creatures suck down the vessels that have disappeared, and then study the people.

A second theory calls for the existence of another dimension. Areshia feels that this other dimension would answer the Triangle mystery and other phenomena. The theory claims that there is a completely different society existing at the same time and in the same place that we are in, without our knowledge. The planes and ships that have disappeared in the Triangle have simply passed through to the other world, therefore leaving no trace, as so many of the lost vessels have done. Other instances which tend to support this idea, include happenings where people have seemed to have vanished into the air. Their voices have then been heard crying things like, "I can't get through!" or "I can't find my way back!"

Areshia believes strongly in a third theory, based largely on the works of Edgar Casey, a psychic. He claims to have "seen" the lost city of Atlantis, in the location of the Triangle, before its destruction. "The people were much more advanced than we are now," said Areshia, "but they became too powerful and destroyed themselves." She related this to our capacity to blow up the world with atomic power.

According to Casey, the great city had a crystal dome, which covered it. The dome gave them their power. It was broken up with the destruction of the island. This power source is believed by some to be the cause of the malfunctioning of compasses, and in some cases, the disappearances of the vessels.

Areshia believes that some Atlantis survived and still live somewhere beneath the sea, perhaps in the Puerto Rican Trench, which is as yet unexplored due to its depth of 36,000 feet. She relates this theory of an ancient super-culture to the wonders of the world and believes that they engineered the great pyramids and cut the huge blocks out with lasers. She also gives them credit for such things as Stonehenge and the ancient astronomy-related mysteries, which are still not fully understood. There was even an ancient miniature computer found in Greece which, when the pieces were put together, could predict the movements of the solar system. She feels that the great Aztecs, and other great peoples were in some way related to the Atlantians. Even Plato spoke of the city. He called it a paradise.

These ideas of Atlantis comprise the driving force which makes Areshia want to uncover the secret of the Triangle. When asked if she feared the possibility of being sucked down into the mysterious place, she replied, "No! That's what I want. It's the only way to find out what's really down there." She does not believe that there are really aliens down there "dissecting people." "My curiosity outweighs my fears." She feels that even if she can not return to our world, the experience will be worth it. But the one thing she hopes for most is to be able to visit the city and learn from their great advancements, and their mistakes, and then return to help our world to prosper and develop from them.

So, even if the ideas of Areshia Blankenship seem a little strange and far-fetched to many, her dreams and goals are certainly noble. And wouldn't it be wonderful if she's right?

What Grade System Should We Use?

BY APRIL CALLAHAN

Since High Point College has been using a quality point system, it has used the 3.0 scale. HPC is one of only three schools in N.C. to use

Under this system, for every hour attempted a different number of points is given according to the letter grade received: An A is awarded three quality points per hour; a B - 2; C - 1; and for D's and F's no points are given. These points are added and divided by the number of hours to give each student an individual scale point average. On the 4.0 scale one more point is given for each grade, excepting the F.

Since the D and F are treated the same on the 3.0 scale, the question arises, "Why have two separate grades?" The advantage is that D's can be applied to graduation or area requirements, but an F cannot. However, a student cannot have two unsatisfactory grades in his major, which includes both D's & F's.

Recently there has been a lot of discussion on whether High Point should switch to a 4.0 scale, or not. During the summer of 1978, Mr. Holt pursued this question. After much consideration the project was discontinued, due to the massive time and expense involved with examining and reworking all records which include F's.

The expense rises from using the new computer system installed this past summer.

When comparing the 3.0 and 4.0 scale they are practically the same. The only advantage or disadvantage would come in the transferring of an F. For example: If a student is transferring in with a 1.75 F, which is not a C average in a 4.0 scale, he receives a 1.0 average or HPC system, which is a C average. This disadvantage comes if the student is transferring to a school using the 4.0. If he has a 1.0, with an F, his average will drop below that of a C. So for every F on the 4.0 scale it hurts you more than if on the 3.0.

Although the project to change the system has been discontinued, Mr. Holt's decision has not ruled out the future possibility of such a consideration.

Twenty-Five Academia Myths

Joseph Robinson, assistant professor of business administration and economics, has been busy observing High Point College students. He has recently compiled a list of "Twenty-five Common Myths of Academia." Check and see how many of the myths you have believed to be true.

TWENTY-FIVE COMMON MYTHS OF "ACADEMIA"

"Whom Are We Kidding?"

1. I have to get used to each instructor's type of testing. Also knowing the estimated length of an upcoming test is most helpful.
2. I can do "extra" work to pull up my grade. (In truth I can't do the normal load.)
3. I can't effectively take two examinations on the same day, and Monday is an especially bad day for an exam to be assigned.
4. I must use my allotted class cuts or else lose them.
5. My retention is greater if I stay up all night to study for tomorrow's test. Corollary: It's better to wait until the day before it's due to begin research on a term paper.
6. Class attendance is not necessary if I read the textbook and copy my roommate's class notes.

7. Partial credit should be given if my answers are partially correct. (Anyways, maybe I won't go to work for a bank after graduation.)
8. I must have "over-studied" for the test, because my mind went blank.
9. I should be given credit for correct information written on an exam even though I didn't answer the question asked.
10. The course requirements here are "unreal." I'll never have any need for Spanish, religion, etc. . . (However, I did choose to come here.)
11. If I don't know the answer to a question, I should simply make-up answers and waste the time of the instructor and my own time.
12. There is necessarily a correlation between time expended and quality of work produced or gained.
13. Spelling, grammar, punctuation, etc. are not important in written communication because "You know what I mean."
14. I can "goof off" all semester and catch up on the final exam.
15. A college degree is a degree; therefore, select crisp courses with no term paper requirements and easy instructors.
16. Grades are not important. "I'm just trying to please Mom and Dad."

17. The criteria of a "good" course is that it be fun, light, entertaining, and erotic.

18. If I see a problem or experiment performed, then I need not practice same. (Yet, I wonder why good athletes practice so much.)

19. Course subject matter, text, assignments, etc. must be relevant according to my interpretation of relevancy.

20. If several in my class receive low grades, then it must necessarily be the fault of the instructor.

21. It is to my advantage to cut a 9:00 class to cram for a 10:00 test.

22. Seniors should receive special consideration.

23. Tests for the entire class should be graded and grades announced five minutes after completion.

24. It is not important necessary that I accept any responsibility. Someone in the college community will look after me.

25. Why should instructors expect much effort on my part? (I've been given almost everything all my life.)

Murder Play Termed A Success

BY LINDA CAIN

"Murders don't always work out like you plan in real life" was the theme presented in High Point College's Tower Players' production of "Dial M for Murder."

The play a mystery thriller written by Frederick Knott, revolved around a retired tennis player named Tony Wendice, who plots to kill his wife, Margot. Craig Messner and Tara Wine are cast in these respective roles.

Wendice married his wife for money and desires to collect the money from her estate. He suspects his wife of having a lover, so he follows her every move and discovers that she does. Wendice carefully plots his wife's murder by first black-mailing her, then hiring Legate, an old college chum of his with a shady past, to commit the crime. He terms the murder of his wife as "the perfect crime" because all the would-be murderer has to do is kill and leave.

Wendice arranges the crime to be committed when he and Margot's ex-lover, Max Halliday will be away attending a party.

The plan is carried out and the alleged assassin is killed. The police are called in and Inspector Hubbard, played by Heidi Swartrauber, is charged with solving the case. Discrepancies arise in Wendice's testimony that makes Hubbard suspicious.

In a carefully plotted finale reminiscent of one from "Charlie's Angels", the female Inspector sets a trap for Wendice.

Messner is quite believable in his role, for he fits the image of the stereotyped pro tennis player. It is his diabolical mind and incapacity for error as Tony Wendice that makes this acting "par excellence".

Wine should be hailed for her portrayal of Margot Wendice. She did an excellent job of changing from model wife to a woman broken by prison. The actors who played Halliday, Mark LaFrance, and Legate, David Hardison should also be commended.

On the technical side the show was very good. Lighting and sound combined with acting made the show seem like it could easily happen in real life.

There was distinct unity between all the persons involved in the show which contributed to its success. Credit is due to director, David Christovich.

Although murders planned in real life hardly ever work out, superbly directed theatrical productions do.

Broadway Showcase Comes to Triad

BY APRIL CALLAHAN

Vinette Carroll's, "Your Arms Too Short To Box With God" was presented Sunday night, February 25, in the Greensboro Auditorium as part of the traveling Broadway Showcase.

The sensationalism of a rock concert, the emotionalism of a "holly-rolling" church service, added to audience participation, combined to make "Your Arms Too Short To Box With God" a tremendous success. The "service" began with a singing of the beautitudes. It progressed from a modern-day black service to a stirring drama of Christ's arrival in Jerusalem until the time of the resurrection. The second half of the show involved a foot-stomping, hand-clapping, shout-raising celebrating of the salvation story.

Many of the actors and actresses were seasoned performers with such experiences as "The Wiz," "Don't Bother Me," "I Can't Cope," back-up singing for Phoebe Snow, Stevie Wonder's Songs in the Key of Life, and even the singing voice of Fat Albert. An outstanding and stirring performance was given by newcomer Jennifer Yvette Holliday. Her intense sincerity about praising the Lord clearly added to the vitality of the show.

Incredible performances were also given by Elijah Gil as Jesus Christ, and Ralph Farrington as Judas. Quincella Swynning and Gwendolyn Nelson Fleming effectively portrayed the dancing and singing Marys, respectively. Their total character involvement displayed the genuine agony of the figures they portrayed.

William-Keedy Hardy, Jr., who acted as the preacher, aroused many an emotion with his vivacious singing and dancing. He has received great acclaim for his performance in the original Broadway production of this musical. His voice has an unusual combination of low baritone and an extremely high falsetto.

Vinette Carroll's dual use of the company, in first portraying defenders of Christ then the condemners, is an interesting device which shows the stark reality of human fickleness. Vinette Carroll is the author-director of the show, and she received two Tony nominations for Best Direction and Best Book.

A rare exhibition of equal dancing and singing ability functions as a strong unifying force. The dancing was a beautiful combination of ballet, modern dance, and

Twenty-Five American Myths

Many Americans believe that the United States is a land of opportunity, that anyone can succeed if they try hard enough. But the reality is often quite different. Here are 25 common myths about America:

Myth #1: The American Dream is real.

The American Dream is the idea that anyone can achieve success and wealth through hard work and determination. In reality, success is often determined by factors beyond one's control, such as family background and social connections.

Myth #2: America is a land of freedom.

While America is known for its freedom, it is not a land of complete freedom. There are many restrictions on freedom, particularly in areas like privacy and civil liberties.

Myth #3: America is a melting pot.

The melting pot theory suggests that different ethnic groups in America blend together to form a new, unified culture. In reality, many ethnic groups maintain their distinct identities and traditions.

Myth #4: America is a land of opportunity.

While America is often touted as a land of opportunity, the reality is that many people struggle to find work and achieve financial stability. The gap between the rich and the poor is widening.

Myth #5: America is a land of progress.

America is often seen as a land of progress, but it is also a land of stagnation. Many social and economic problems have persisted for decades without being solved.

Myth #6: America is a land of democracy.

America is often praised for its democracy, but it is also a land of inequality. The wealthy have more influence over the government than the poor.

Myth #7: America is a land of innovation.

Traveler's Insurance Coverage to Travel

When you travel, you need to make sure you have adequate insurance coverage. Here are some tips to help you choose the right travel insurance:

1. Check your existing insurance policy to see if it covers travel. Many policies have exclusions for travel-related incidents.

2. Consider the cost of travel. If you are traveling to a high-risk area, you may want to purchase additional insurance.

3. Read the fine print. Make sure you understand what is covered and what is not covered by the policy.

4. Compare prices. There are many different travel insurance companies, so it's important to shop around for the best price.

5. Consider the reputation of the company. Make sure you are dealing with a reputable and reliable insurance company.

Film Review

"Gone With The Wind" Is Tops

BY APRIL CALLAHAN

It has been called the greatest movie ever made. It is "Gone With The Wind." The fictional, but highly believable movie is the story of a southern belle who faces war, death, destruction, starvation, unrequited love, and the horrors of reconstruction.

"Gone With The Wind," published in 1936, was written by Margaret Mitchell as a hobby during an illness. The book was immediately a best seller and is still one of the top selling books of all time: topped only by the "Holy Bible" and "Valley of the Dolls."

In September of 1939, "Gone With The Wind" was shown at a "sneak preview," totally unannounced. When the film began, it was announced that the biggest film of the year was about to be seen, and no one would be allowed to leave the theater until its completion. As the immortal title swept across the screen a gasp of recognition was heard, and people jumped to their feet in applause. Total silence followed for a period of almost 4 hours-one of the longest running times ever for a film. At the conclusion, silence followed for about five seconds with prolonged applause and weeping. Still today, at the showing of "Gone With The Wind," this is a typical reaction.

Although there are some obvious differences in the book and the movie, no one really seems to object.

One of these differences is the fact that Scarlett, the heroine, only has one child in the movie version, while she has three in the book. Another, perhaps, obvious fact is that in the movie Charles Hamilton, Scarlett's first husband, is the beau of India Wilkes; however, in the book there is another sister, Honey Wilkes, whom Scarlett robs.

While these discrepancies are noticeable to some, such details as Rhett's initials, R.K.B. (in the book) and R.B. (in the movie); Scarlett calling for Rhett during her illness in the movie, but not calling for him in the book; and the circumstances of Gerald's death are not notice-ed by many.

The dramatic impact of "Gone With The Wind" overshadows these details except to someone who has studied and compared them. Very few people are upset over the fact that there are differences. They realize the difficulties of producing a movie of such complex nature as "Gone With The Wind." The general consensus is that both the book and the movie are of superior quality.

Since "Gone With The Wind's" grand opening, December 1939, at Loew's Grand Theater in Atlanta, more people have come to love and respect the South that is represented. A sense of compassion with Scarlett and the urban Rhett Butler, has healed many a wound left over from the Civil War. It is, perhaps, the highest among the movie classics: revered and loved by thousands, young and old who are inspired by Scarlett's immortal, "I'll think of it tomorrow... after all tomorrow is another day."

Studio Play Upcoming

BY JILL CHRISTIANSON

"Spoon River Anthology" is the next Tower Players production at High Point College. Edgar Lee Master's play, which is a series of poetic monologs, will be presented March 15, 16, and 17.

Chip Aldridge, who is director of the studio play, is producing it as part of an independent study course. Aldridge, who is head of the Tower Players, said that he is involved in the production "mostly for the pleasure of it."

"Spoon River Anthology" is a series of testimonies of dead people who are buried in a small Midwestern cemetery.

Acting in the play are Myra Williams, Kristi Mills, Robin Henson, Rhonda Carlman, Scott Johnson, Steve Burton, Ed Mullis, and Ken Swanson. Tanya Burton and Jill Christianson are understudies in the play. Assistant director is Donna Fioravante.

The numbers that Matt and Greg will play are bluegrass which they have composed. Rick Hines will accompany the singing on the autograph.

The play will be presented in the Old Student Center, the week after spring break. The production starts at 8 p.m. and there is no admission charge.

Foreign Affairs Forums Held

BY ROBIN HENSON

In an effort to further promote intellectual stimulation outside of the classroom and to keep students abreast of the events that are shaping the world around us, a bimonthly Foreign Affairs Forum is being held to provide discussion on current topics.

The forums are being jointly sponsored by Student Activities and Student Personnel. Tom Burke and Dean Guy are the coordinators of the program.

Discussions are held on Sunday nights from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Dates scheduled for the meetings are February 18, March 11 and 25 and April 8 and 22.

All discussions material is from the Great Decisions '79 booklet printed by the Foreign Policy Association. Articles from the booklet are copied and sent to all participants at least two weeks before the discussion. Various professors have been asked to lead the forums.

There are eight topics dealt with in the Great Decisions '79 booklet: The Technology Explosion, Trade and the Dollar, NATO and the Russians, Dealing With China, The U.S. and Latin America, Black Africa, World Law of the Oceans and International Terrorism.

The first forum was held on Sunday, February 11. Dr. Epperson lead discussion on the Technology Explosion and the World Law of the Oceans.

The most widely debated topic was the question of "who owns the continental shelf and the deep sea floor and who has the right to mine them?" Is it the country who has the technology to mine the vast mineral resources? Is it the country within whose territorial limits the resources lie? Or are the oceans the common heritage of mankind in which event all men should share in the profits from the mining.

There were no earth-shattering conclusions or solutions raised at the forum, but all who participated came away from the meeting with a greater understanding of the problems and a sense of unity with the group.

Chemistry Research Experience Offered

GREENSBORO -- Seven chemistry students will have the opportunity to do research this summer at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro under a National Science Foundation undergraduate research participation program.

The NFS has awarded $13,970 to the UNC-G Department of Chemistry to support 10 weeks of research by seven undergraduate chemistry majors between May 21 and Aug. 10, 1979, according to Dr. Walter Pu-terbaugh, head of the department.

Dr. Puterbaugh said participants in the special program will be selected from current junior or first semester senior chemistry majors who show a high potential to benefit from a research experience at this stage of their career development.

He added that at least three of the participants will be picked from among student applicants at colleges in the region other than UNC-G, and a special effort will be made to locate qualified minority and handicapped applicants.

Applications should be sent to the UNC-G Department of Chemistry by March 15. Those selected should be notified by mid-April.

"The research problems for the program were designed by faculty research supervisors to provide experience with a variety of modern research techniques, and to encourage independent involvement and growth of the participants," Puterbaugh said.

Men Top Pfeiffer; Claim 12th Straight

BY DENNIS TUTTLE

A familiar number 44 for High Point College did for the Panthers in Monday's opening round of the Carolina's Conference tournament as he has on so many occasions in his brilliant career. Charlie Floyd scored 29 points with a 12 for 21 shooting night as the Panthers escaped Catawba 64-57 to earn a berth in the tournament semifinals tonight.

Floyd, who has been on a recent scoring and rebounding tear, scored 18 first half points that kept High Point close even though coach Sam Moir's Catawba club led 36-32.

The Panthers have now won 12 straight, the longest winning streak for men's basketball since 1964. The 1969 version of Panther basketball that made it to the quarter finals of the NAIA national tournament, won 10 straight but never topped the present string.

Danny Anderson chipped in 10 points in the win over Catawba, the seventh seeded team in the tourney. Floyd hit seven of the final nine Panther points, all on free throws, however; the Indians were able to still stay close.

The Panthers have enjoyed great success since guard Dennis West was re-activated at the start of the semester. The most recent evidence of the Panther's surge was a thrilling 70-62 win over regular season champ Pfeiffer at Alumni Gym last Saturday. Despite conference Player of the Year Mike Epps' 32 points, High Point managed to come from an early 5-0 deficit to take the win. It was only Pfeiffer's second loss in the conference — both at the hands of High Point.

Marie Riley drives to basket before her injury.

Women Cruising Right Along

BY IRISH GAYMON

Another regular season has come to an end, and the Lady Panthers have come out on top once again. After showing their excellent playing abilities against Carolina Conference foes the Panthers proved the state tournament competition was all in a day's work.

The Lady Panthers took the state title with a win over Pfeiffer, second to High Point in the conference regular season. Andria Blanchard's 24 points and guard Ethel White's 23 helped to lead the Panthers to the tournament win. Blanchard and White were chosen to be the all-tournament team while both, along with Marie Riley, were named all-district.

Playing without the services of All-America Riley, who suffered a broken arm a couple weeks ago, the Panther's spirit hasn't been dampened. Blanchard and White had 28 and 23 points, respectively, that paced High Point to a win over East Carolina. "We played more patient of an offense and we filled the holes on defense," said coach Wanda Briley, whose team is still ranked atop the AIAW national poll.

Block and Tackle best describes the game against A&T State in Greensboro. Going against the Aggies was not competitive at all, but the unsportsmanship displayed by the team gave High Point an easy win with foul shots and a technical against the A&T coach.

The last home game for the ladies and seniors, Jody "Flash" Westmoreland and Ethel White, was against Longwood College from Virginia as always the Panthers denied Longwood the opportunity to take control of the ball or the game.

Bruce Floyd: Struggling Through Books and Basketball

Studying hard . . .

Despite his charisma on the court, devastating rebounding at times, and gleaming smile, Bruce Floyd has struggled more through his freshman year in college than the usual first grader does when departing home.

Like all fresh that move far from home for the first time, the Philadelphia, Pa. native has been through the rift-raft and had to swim out of high waters with academic problems. Aside from the seemingly ever-lasting problems that Floyd has, there are some good points about the 6-7 Panther forward.

Coach Jerry Steele has an excessive amount of confidence in Floyd, who was not recruited from his Overbrook High School. "Nope, I wasn't recruited hardly at all because I had some poor grades," Bruce said. But there is a reason for Floyd's shot at a college career. His brother — Charlie.

Charlie Floyd has been given a tremendous amount of ink since his playing days at Wake Forest to his supposed false transfer to St. John's and his ride down 311 to High Point College. Floyd recommended coach Steele to take a chance on Bruce, the youngest of four brothers, and see if he could make it big in the Carolinas Conference.

Coach Steele isn't regretting giving Bruce the opportunity but Bruce is terrified by the fact that he might not make the g-grade standards at High Point and prove a failure to Steele. "He's helped me so much that I couldn't name them all," Bruce said of Steele. "He apparently has confidence in me and I want to repay him. I know that I'm going to have to work harder to stay in school. But if I can get through this year, I want to give coach Steele the best three years of any player he's ever had."

SPRING SPORTS PREVIEWS

Track Season Approaching Fast

BY DEBBIE SAIE

Practice for the High Point College track team officially began on January with anticipation of the first outdoor meet scheduled for March 15.

Leading returners and their specialties include Ron Burne, district and conference javelin throwing champ; Dennis West, who could provide strength in the 220-440 if he decides to run; Tracy Lyons, a leading pole vaulter in the conference and districts. Also returning are Randy Larzelere, who is an outstanding 880 man; Perry Macheras, an effective 6-miler; Bill McCowan, high hurdles, intermediate hurdles, and 440; Rick Calicut, an outstanding long and high jumper; and Keith Chance in the 440-880. Norris Woody also returns in the pole vault.

New-comers on the HPC track team include: Ralph Barnes, long and triple jump; Jorge Nobre, in the mile; John Thrax on the high hurdles and intermediate hurdles; Steve Smith, on the shot-put and discus; Brian Campbell on the pole vault; and Joe Fisher on the 440.

Hopefuls in the distance run are Chris Bishop, Mike Colflesh, Dave Flory and Dave Gladden.

One new-comer to the squad is Ms. Jody Ledord who Coach Davidson intends to run against other females in the conference.

Looking at the season Davidson indicated that Pembroke State will be the leading contender in the conference.

HPC finished 3rd in the conference last season. Davidson feels the strongest events on the team are the javelin, pole vault, long jump, hurdles, 880, 6-mile, high jump, and possibly the 440, depending on who runs.

Veterans Head Men's Tennis

BY DEBBIE SAIE

The 1978-79 High Point tennis team returns a host of mature and experienced players that should help the Panthers battle Atlantic Christian for the Carolinas Conference crown.

Coach Mike Glover has All-District 26 performers in senior Jeff Apperson and Willem de Groot. Apperson and de Groot, as a doubles team, qualified for the nationals and made it to the quarterfinals as singles players. Apperson will be playing No. 1 and de Groot will at No. 2.

Junior Phil Parrish was district champion as a freshman and he will return to the No. 3 seed. Chris Hohnhold will be at No. 3.

Last season was the first time in six seasons that the Panther netters did not reach the nationals. The Panthers have been in the NAIA top 14 six times but after a year's absence, Glover and his squad hopes to make it back among the nation's best.

High Point will play many NCAA schools in its tough schedule but last season's 11-10 record does not reflect High Point's overall success.

Hohnhold, de Groot and Jack de Andread were all-conference. Tom Fitzmaurice and David Burgess should round out the top six. Freshmen Marcus Carter, Tom Willoughby should see some action.

Lady Panthers Should Be Devastating

BY IRISH GAYMON

High Point's women's athletics don't just stop at volleyball, field hockey, and basketball, Coach Kitty Steele has a devastating team of young lady tennis players who are feared throughout the state.

The returning players consist of:

Vickie Williams, a sophomore from Alexandria, Virginia. Vickie shows a lot of power on the court against competitors. She was number one in the Conference and the State Tournament. Losing only one match last year, she is in the number one position on the H.P.C. team.

Marie Riley, a junior from Seldon Long Island, N.Y., is expected to join the team as soon as the women's basketball season is over.

Donna Pfister, a sophomore from Dover, Delaware, plays either the four or five position on the team.

Temma Allen, a senior from Virginia, is an alternate playing the four or five position also.

Kinta Otterman, a sophomore transfer from Elizabeth City, N.C. While attending Methodist College in Elizabeth City, she was undefeated in tennis. She is expected to be among the top players at H.P.C.

Fine Nucleus Returns for Nine

BY DENNIS TUTTLE

Numerous trophies rest in the Alumni Gym lobby exemplifying the past success of High Point College during the Carolinas Conference and District 26 play. Despite snow, floods and coaching changes, Panther baseball is destined for another year of supremacy in the CC.

New coach Jim Speight is finally getting his feet settled into his new position after legendary coach Chuck Hartman resigned three weeks ago for a position at VPI. Speight is highly optimistic about this year's club that will face such national powers as Clemson and North Carolina plus local threat Wingate.

"We have some guys returning that were productive last year," said Speight. "If those guys give us the same as they did last year, I don't see how we can't be that good."

Checking down Speight's roster is a nucleus of fine talent that any new coach would like to inherit. Pitcher Jay Schwamberger of Charlotte was 9-4 as a freshman with 91 strikeouts and a 2.92 ERA. Don Groseclose enters his junior season after a 5-0 mark a year ago while Dirk Gurley was 5-1 and Phil Cherry 6-1. Schwamberger, who was drafted in the major league draft after his senior year in high school, pitched a no-hitter in his first college outing.

Senior catcher Danny Wilbour enjoyed his best season as a junior last year when he hit .357, drove in 31 runs and knocked 12 doubles. Much of the same is expected from the Somerville, N.J. native.

The infield lost four lettermen; among them conference Player of the Year Jim Mugele departed. Freshman Mike Pisano of New York, Benny Nye of Lake Waccamaw, N.C. and Ken Carter from Trinity are prime choices to fill some spots.

However, the outfield consists of two All-Area performers in Gerald Culler and Joe Garbarino. Culler hit .368 with 67 hits that included a team leading 13 doubles. Garbarino hit .346. Jeff Kennedy returns with a .307 average.

HPC Women Forfeit Games

High Point College's women's basketball team, currently ranked number one in the nation among small colleges with a 24-2 record, will have to forfeit four games played in late January.

The North Carolina AIAW Ethics and Eligibility Committee ruled last week that a player for High Point had not been certified as eligible and had participated in five Panther games prior to the proper AIAW eligibility forms being filed. The games included a loss to top-ranked large college -- Old Dominion University -- and wins over Catawba, Campbell, Winston-Salem State and Pfeiffer.

Jerry Steele, Athletic Director at High Point, said "We are in violation of an AIAW rule which states that the AIAW Eligibility form must be mailed and postmarked prior to an athletes' participation in an event."

When Teresa Holt enrolled at High Point for the second semester, we inadvertently forgot to send in the addition to our eligibility form.

Dr. Barbara Hollingsworth, Chairperson for the Division II schools in North Carolina, commented, "The forfeits will not affect the state tournament pairings and rankings. I spoke with Dick Dunkel (Dunkel's Rating Service) and he said that High Point's power rating was so strong that the forfeitures would not affect the ratings."

Dr. Murphy Osborne, Commissioner of the Carolinas Conference, said, "The violation in question was of an AIAW rule, not a NAIA or Carolinas Conference rule. Some of the schools in the conference are not members of the AIAW and do not even file these forms. Teresa Holt is eligible according to conference standards. The seedings in the conference tournament should not be affected."

High Point, defending conference and state champion for the past three years, is currently ranked top of the state's Division II teams. They are also undefeated in conference play and will receive a bye for the first round in the Carolinas Conference tournament to be held in Salisbury.

The first match of the season will be Elon College at High Point, March 16th.

Replaces Hartman

Speight Named to Post

Dr. Wendell M. Patton, President of High Point College, announced that 36-year old Jim Speight had been appointed assistant professor in physical education and head baseball coach at the Methodist institution. He will replace Chuck Hartman who recently resigned to accept the head baseball coaching job at Virginia Tech.

COACH JIM SPEIGHT

education from UNC in 1969.

Speight, a native of Rocky Mount, North Carolina, was employed with the Orange County School System in Hillsborough.

The new Panther coach commented, "I'm really excited about this. It is something I've always wanted to do from day one, to teach and coach baseball on the college level. I'm looking forward to getting started on the job and working hard."

"I really don't know much about the team or any individuals, except with their past record, I'm sure they are good players."

Speight graduated from Rocky Mount Senior High School in 1960, gaining All-Conference honors in baseball as a shortstop. He earned his undergraduate degree in physical education at the University of North Carolina in 1964 and his master's degree in physical

After being selected All-ACC and All-State in baseball as a senior at Carolina, Speight signed a contract with the Philadelphia Phillies of the National League. He was awarded a major league contract after his first year in the organization and went to spring training with the parent club in 1965.

After retiring from baseball in 1967 Speight taught at Durham High School and coached the baseball team for five years, leading them to the state playoffs in his last two seasons, 1972 and 1973.

He gained additional coaching experience in 1969 in the Valley League with New Market, Virginia and advanced to the state playoffs with the Durham American Legion team during a three-year period.

Upon leaving Durham High School in 1973 Speight was employed by the North Carolina State Department of Public Instruction for four years where he coordinated a scholarship loan program for prospective teachers. In 1977 he returned to teaching in the Orange County system.

High Point College Athletic Director Jerry Steele remarked about the new coach, "I am excited about Jim Speight assuming the baseball responsibilities at High Point College and feel sure that under his leadership, we will maintain a competitive program on a sound educational basis."

Floyd Worried About HPC Future

Bruce ran into academic problems right after he got to High Point and by the end of the first semester, he was on academic probation and had to miss some games. "Coach Steele called me at home over Christmas and told me that I would need another course for the second semester," Bruce added. "So I went to Elon to take a coaching course."

Even though Floyd is struggling through his studies -- especially geography -- he is confident that he can give more to Panther basketball than 10 ppg and six rebounds. "I know that I can play better than I am right now. My mind isn't on my game -- it's in the classroom. I just keep wondering if I'm going to be here next year or not while my shot keeps getting off. To be honest, I'm really worried about flunking."

"Coach Steele never saw me play and Charlie kept pushing him to take a chance on me. If I wasn't here I would probably be in the service," Bruce said. "All I have to do is get through the year."

Panther Golfers Optimistic in '79

BY KIM DARDEN

This fall, High Point's 1979 golf team looked with anxious anticipation towards a possible peak season; even the national tournament was practically within its reach. Over the past five years, High Point's golf program has grown soundly and steadily from a non-competitive team to the 2nd place Carolinas conference, 3rd place District 26 team of last year.

A year ago they missed qualifying for the national tournament by only a few strokes, and finished in the top four in seven of their eight tournaments (about 20 schools participated in each tournament).

Four returning lettermen and two very promising freshmen for the upcoming season made an explosive year almost a certainty. But this spring, the team's destiny is not so secure. Senior Tony Flippin, projected No. 2 man for the team, had to leave school this semester for personal reasons, and the two freshmen did not return second semester.

The team's fate now rests heavily on the play of veteran 74.1 stroke average for two years, and Aydelette, a sophomore, finished in the top 10 in three tournaments as a freshman while having a 75.2 average. Both are excellent golfers, says coach Woody Gibson. "But beyond them, I just don't know. We're really counting on them to be leaders, and to help the new players."

One other veteran, senior Jeff Hall, returns to possibly take 6th spot. "Jeff hasn't played a lot in the past," says Gibson, "but he has a great deal of potential that could be the difference in our season." Vying for the other open spots will be freshmen Alan Spainhour, Larry Corson, Craig Baldwin and Darin Duzweiller; transfer Mike Dombrowski, and senior Steve Moss.

Coach Gibson sees the season as a real challenge. Not only will it be an uncertain one, but "this is probably the most competitive French Bolen and Bob Aydelette, to play No. 1 and No. 2 respectively. Bolen, a senior, is all-conference with diverse District in the country," he says. "Guilford, Elon, and Gardner-Webb are all among the top ten in the country. Last year we finished better than them in about half of the tournaments. They are the standard by which we measure our success," Gibson added.

clines or minimal increases (1 percent or less).

While enrollment projections indicate that declines in the future can be expected because of the shrinking size of the college-age population, such demographic change does not account for this year's losses, according to James R. Mingle, SREB research associate. He said some of the factors influencing lower rates of attendance in fall, 1978, probably include:

+ students choosing jobs over further education in 1978, a year of relatively high employment;

+ increased federal audits of student aid applications, demanding documentation of a student's financial background, which seems to have discouraged some students from enrolling and delayed others in receiving replies to their aid requests.

Dr. Mingle noted that year-to-year fluctuations in enrollment can be expected for the new few years, and said it is possible that a slowdown in the economy, coupled with another large pool of high school graduates anticipated in 1979, could produce increases again next fall.

While there will be fluctuations between 1978 and 1986, SREB's projections of headcount enrollment in the South for 1986 show the same level of enrollment as in 1978. But, when the 1986 figure is projected on a full-time-equivalent basis, enrollment in the South may drop by as much as four percent between 1978 and 1986. This difference of more than 100,000 full-time-equivalent students is significant to the revenue and workload prospects of higher education. If an institution loses one full-time student, it needs to attract nearly three part-time students to recoup revenue losses.

Is the Hi-Po meeting the needs of the High Point College student? Many people would say "yes" but... The newspaper is intended to be the voice of the students. Many students only glance at it and throw it down.

Out of twenty people surveyed on the Hi-Po's effectiveness half of them said the paper could use some improvement, but did not have any ideas.

—Nine thought a comic strip and publication of cafeteria menus would be good.

—One person thought the Hi-Po was great and did not need any improvement.

—18 out of 20 thought the quality of writing was good, and that coverage was excellent.

First Trip In Ten Years

Panthers Halted In NAIA

BY DENNIS TUTTLE

All good things must come to an end.

And surely, High Point men's basketball season ended with the deadening tone of defeat with a second round 76-65 loss to Briar Cliff in the NAIA tournament at Kansas City. Not only did the Panthers' hopes of taking the national championship die, but the 18-game winning streak responsible for getting the HPC men to Kansas City was buried, also.

Briar Cliff's strong fast break and overwhelming rebounding advantage (37-26) helped finish the Panthers' season at 23-6. The Chargers' frontline of Mario Butler, Rolando Frazier and Ernest Malcolm combined to score 49 points. But the Panthers trailed only 26-24 at halftime.

Charlie Floyd led High Point with 21 points while brother Bruce added 16 and Danny Anderson chipped in 13.

The Panthers advanced to the second round after crunching Oregon Tech 91-62 in the opening round. Charlie had 21 points hitting 10 of 16 shots from the floor while Bob Hovey's 17 points helped guide HPC.

By whipping Pfeiffer 71-56 in the District 26 championship at Winston-Salem, High Point took its first and its first trip to the NAIA tournament in Kansas City in 10 years. Anderson had 13 points in the final six minutes of the game that pulled High Point away from its arch rival.

The Panthers stopped St. Augustine 93-90 at High Point March 4 in what turned out to be the best individual performance in Charlie's career. The senior forward hit 24 of 27 free throw attempts in a 46 point performance. HPC followed that narrow win by routing Winston-Salem State.

And by taking the Carolinas Conference title with a 54-51 win over Pfeiffer at Catawba College, HPC became the first school since Elon in 1971 and 1972 to win back-to-back conference tournaments. Two free throws by Charlie with two seconds left sealed the win for HPC over Pfeiffer. High Point stopped Catawba 64-57 in the tourney opening round and halted Atlantic Christian 45-36 in the semis.

Security Now Full Time

BY KIM DARDEN

Due to an increase in criminal activity and vandalism, Campus Security coverage is tightening. Our security force will be fortified primarily through the staffing of all fulltime officers. "We will have no more part-time officers," says Lt. Don Walton, Campus Police Supervisor.

"A full time officer is more aware of situations and of what's going on, he has a closer working relationship with the students and faculty, and is often more adequately trained and equipped," explains Walton.

In addition, campus officers are now working varied shifts instead of just one regular one. "This way an officer will notice different situations on different shifts," says Walton. "No two shifts are alike." This move will also heighten each officer's awareness.

Finally, the security staff will now be equipped with belt radios, instead of the one mobile telephone in the security jeep. "Now there will be a radio on our persons at all times," says Walton. "We had complaints that we weren't receiving all calls."

Walton feels that the improvement in communications and personnel will virtually improve our security coverage. He also stresses that we as students should become more security conscious.

If you'd like to talk to Walton or any officer, the security office is located beside Harrison Hall. Walton says he'd be more than happy to talk to anyone.

Fever Epidemic Hits HPC

It's almost 70 degrees outside. The sun is burning down steadily, scorching the bare backed bathing beauties in the sun court as they slowly but surely deep fry in their Hawaiian Tropical oil.

Everyone finds some kind of excuse to avoid studying. Frisbees fly, soccer balls bounce across campus and everyone is happy except for the poor souls who have lab on the prettiest day of the week. Somehow it always works out that way.

Let's face it folks, Spring Fever is definitely upon us. At epidemic state, you lose your appetite, you never even open a book, you find it extremely hard to get excited about a fetal pig and all you ever want to do is sleep and bask in those golden rays.

Life suddenly becomes a contest of peer pigment comparison. The variety of tans is as diverse as it is interesting. You have the white-tights-under-shorts look, the salmon pink look, the slightly freckled look and the severely freckled look.

Then there's the poached look, the baked look, the dry roasted look and the deep fried look. Interesting diversions are the farmers' tan, the softball league tan, and the shoes and kneecocks tan. Still another interesting one is the eye glasses tan. It gives a reverse racoon effect.

Spring Fever is the perfect excuse to nurse your obsessions. Do what you want to do. Lounge on your blanket in the grass from nine to five. Sleep in your bathing suit. Go on strike from bio lab. Just remember to blame it on the sun and pray for a few rainy days every now and then so you can pass this semester. Every little bit helps.

Preserve Athletic Fields Fields

To the Editor:

With the spring weather upon us, many students wish to once again engage in outdoor physical activities.

The college does provide an intramural field for the students to use. We ask at this time that the students use this field instead of the team fields (baseball, field hockey & soccer).

The costs of maintaining these fields are very high and as much cooperation as possible is needed from the students to help in their upkeep.

We would appreciate your cooperation in this request.

Thank you,

Cole Discusses Obsolete Rules

BY CURT EWING

A group of fun-seeking students, a basketball star and a whole fraternity were victims of severe penalties for breaking now obsolete college rules.

Looking back at incidents as recent as fifteen years, High Point College has shown considerable changes in disciplinary rules.

Dean David W. Cole remembered three incidences in High Point College history that show that the college has changed with the times.

A group of High Point College students decided to have fun. To keep any college personnel from inhibiting their frolics, the students left the campus to have a carefree party. Unfortunately for the students, they did not go far enough away.

Thinking that anywhere off campus was safe, the students had their party in a room rented from the Holiday Inn in High Point. The students' plan may have been a complete success if their party had not resulted in damage to the motel room.

The motel manager contacted the school and told school authorities about the damage and divulged some key names of the students responsible. From those few names, the authorities discovered the names of all the students involved in the party and "...kicked the whole lot of 'em out of school", as Dean Cole put it.

Apparently most parents of students greet with High Point College's strict rules. Dean Cole recalled when a good basketball player was suspended for walking through the women's dormitory. A male student caught walking through a women's dormitory in the 1960's at any time of the day was ripe for suspension from school.

Just in case the basketball player's father decided to argue the college's decision of suspension, school authorities sent the basketball coach home with his player to help the High Point College dribbler explain the situation to his father. As coach and player climbed out of the car, the young man's home, his father (who was a small man) welcomed him home with a punch that changed the basketball player's position from vertical to horizontal. Obviously, the basketball coach did not have to do as much explaining as he originally thought he would.

A rush method used by a fraternity to enlarge their numbers proved to be their complete downfall.

When the Tau Kappa Epsilon chapter at High Point College was caught showing stag films in a dormitory, the school suspended the fraternity's activities and pledge program for a year. The year that TKE lost for recruiting members hurt them badly enough to prevent the organization from building its number of men to the minimum needed the following year-so they had to fold.

The mischievous actions of High Point College students, even if off campus, was school business. Dean Cole says that today, the Holiday Inn type of incident would be dealt with by the students themselves.

Men are now allowed into the women's dormitory at certain times of the day and night.

Fraternities are left alone to practice just about any kind of rushing method they like.

New Doors Guard Dorms

out by the fire inspector."

"The fire marshalls were very strongly concerned about the doors this fall," says Dean Hanson. The new doors are of a fire resistant material, and also constructed so as to open automatically with a "crash bar". If there was a fire, these doors would open as people pressed against them; the old doors would not.

Security is another factor with the new doors. "The other doors were so old - they were swelled, didn't close properly or lock properly," says Dean Hanson. "The locks on the new doors are much better."

Dean Hanson and many others have been concerned all year with the number of "uninvited guests" from the outside the school who have gotten in and wandered the halls of the dorm in the late night and early morning hours. Hanson says she can number at least four such instances offhand. "It's very frightening to think what might have happened in a few of those instances," she says. "Of course, if the girls coming in late at night don't lock the doors, the new locks serve no purpose," she adds. "But what we want to do is provide the students with the very best security we can, and then if something happens, we'll know we had done everything we could."

Indeed, the school's effort to make the dorm more safe and secure is genuine - the doors have cost a little over $4200.

But as Dean Hanson commented, the improved locks are useless if girls continue not using their late night keys to relock the doors when they come in after hours.

Campus Police Supervisor, Lt. Don Walton, states with dismay: "Our officers check that dorm 3 times every night after lock up, and not once have we found all the doors locked. That's nothing but an open invitation to anyone."

"One door open - just one - and that whole complex (Women's Wesley/Yadkin/North) is vulnerable. It would be so easy for someone to watch and see how to get in. Who knows who's out

Keep The Man Running

BY RAY DANIEL

Dave Flory is a sophomore, majoring in American Humanities, but he appears to be majoring in extra-curricular activities. His schedule allows little free time.

Dave is a member of Student Union and the American Humanities Student Association. He is chairman of the committee in charge of field trips, and also runs track in the spring. Off campus, he works with Cub Scouts once a week and is second vice president of the Explorers Officer Association, while being president of the Explorer's Post here at H.P.C.

However, his "pet project" is the Run for Fun Club, of which he is president. The club was formed last year by athletes who had planned on running in the cross-country team. When they arrived at H.P.C., they were told that the cross-country program had been dropped, so they organized the club. There was originally only about five to six members, but the number has now grown to twenty-three.

Last year's president left for the first semester of this year, and the advisor transferred, so Dave earned the presidency by being the one who worked to carry over the club and to keep it going. He picked up where last year's group left off.

The club is open to any H.P.C. student. Other than just giving people the chance to run together, the major function of the club is to allow its members to run races. Dave receives applications for entrance in races, and anyone interested may enter.

With all these activities, Dave has little time to do everything that he would like to do. In particular, he would like to be able to play his cello more often. Now the instrument has become only an interest to him because he has no time to practice it. But he has played the cello in high school and youth symphonies, and last fall he played with the UNC-G Symphony. He became interested in playing in the fourth grade, when a teacher demonstrated all of the stringed instruments to the class. "I wanted the biggest instrument, and I goofed." The cello was bigger than he was at the time, and now its size stops him from keeping it in his room. Dave hopes to play with UNC-G again next fall - if he has the time.

After graduation, he plans to enter Professional Boy Scouting. As an executive in the organization, he would have such duties as rechartering Boy Scout troops, getting new memberships, and influencing the activities of various Scouting troops. I it sounds like a career that is busy enough to be right down Dave's alley.

Studio Play Exhibits Variety of Talents

BY APRIL CALLAHAN
Spoon River Anthology, written by Edgar Lee Masters, was recently performed at High Point College. This rendition, adapted, directed and designed by Chip Aldridge, assisted by Donna Fioravanti, provided an evening of entertainment for all who saw it.

From the graveyard of Spoon River, deceased townspeople speak out and tell their stories. Some of these stories are tragic and make the viewer reflect on his own life. Others are light and happy as they relate the happenings of a small town.

With many fine performances by seasoned actors and actresses, and some debut performances, the show came off as a great success. The show was dotted with musical interludes. Lively banjo, guitar and auto-harp pieces provided background music and set an atmosphere of country-like hominess.

Special effects were created by the use of slides projected on a screen behind the performers. These included scenes of mountains, trees, flowers and tombstones. A chuckle was raised when on the last night of the show a marker with the name ALDRIDGE was shown on the screen.

ROTC Program Stirs Interest

BY LINDA CAIN

Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) came to High Point College last Fall. The High Point College program is an extension of the one at Wake Forest University.

The course called Orienteering meets every Tuesday and Thursday afternoons in Cooke Hall and is taught by Captain Walters.

The class prepares one to enter the service as a Second Lieutenant. It in no way obligates a person to enter the service except if he/she is accepting money from the military.

Andria Blanchard, a member of the class, believes that entering ROTC was the best thing she has ever done. Blanchard stated, "As soon as I get out of college, I will enter what I want to do and will not have to worry about unemployment."

Debbie Hurst, another member of the class said taking the class was a good way to find out about the army.

Hurst had been interested in the navy until she entered the class; now, she plans to enter the Transportation Corps of the army after graduation from college.

The class prepares one for base camp. Students learn rank, position, and Orienteering (reading maps and compasses). The class will be utilizing their skills learned in the classroom in various situations outside in the spring.

Blanchard believes that having ROTC at HPC will add a new dimension to the campus and attract more people to the campus - that is those who want to enter the army without starting at the bottom.

The class has 15 people in it, and at least half of them are seriously interested in the army.

Lack of Interest Threatens FCA

BY STEPHANIE HIGGINS

A meeting was held Sunday night, March 18th, to discuss the future of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. According to advisor, Rev. Bob Lowdermilk, there has been a decline in membership in the last three years with this year being one of the lowest for involvement. A small handful of interested persons attended the meeting and expressed an interest in the continuation of the organization, but the future of F.C.A. is still questionable.

Fellowship of Christian Athletes was first organized on this campus to meet the needs of student membership involved. This ranged from recreation, study and dialogue, to service projects, and although many of the students involved were in athletics, membership was not limited to non-athletes.

Rev. Lowdermilk and chairperson of F.C.A., Debra Weber, are now questioning the validity of its existence.

"An organization existing only on paper should not exist," stated Rev. Lowdermilk. "There is great potential on campus for an active organization, but the students have to assume the responsibility of getting involved. If their needs are being met through other organizations then the validity of F.C.A. as a campus organization must be examined. If F.C.A. is to remain chartered and supported by student funds, it must be a viable campus organization with an active membership."

The future of F.C.A. depends on the number of students willing to give their time and be involved. Possible goals discussed for next year included fielding intramural teams, two service projects, a camping trip, and various other recreational activities. Interested persons are asked to contact Rev. Bob Lowdermilk.

The spring weather which has hit the HPC campus provides time for softball practice and time for sunning.

Minority Report - Part II

Black Representation Shows Weak Distribution

Black representation on college faculties in the South's public institutions continues to be low, compared to the black share of the region's total population and of college enrollment, according to a recent survey by the Southern Regional Education Board (SREB).

Partially supported by the Ford Foundation, the SREB survey of full-time faculty in Southern public higher education concludes that "it will be very difficult to increase black representation on college faculties in the region" until there is an increase in the number of advanced degrees earned by blacks in the South and until black graduate students become more widely dispersed among disciplines other than education.

The SREB study also concludes that even if only a small portion of the pool of new black doctorates takes jobs in industry and government or in two-year colleges, "the remainder would not be sufficient to maintain the present level of black representation in four-year institutions, much less to increase it."

Here are some of the highlights of SREB's report, Racial Composition of Faculties in Public Colleges and Universities of the South, which was prepared by Eva C. Galambos, SREB research associate:

- eight percent of the total faculty in the South's public institutions is black, compared to a black share of 18.8 percent of the South's population and 15.1 percent of Southern collegiate enrollment;

- the most striking concentration of black faculty comes in the field of education — one-sixth of all teacher education faculty in the South's four-year public institutions are black, and one-third of all black faculty in these colleges and universities teach education subjects;

- blacks are relatively well represented among faculty in library science, home economics, and public affairs (which includes social work);
- blacks have lower than average representation in architecture, accounting, engineering, and the physical sciences;

- almost three-fourths of the black faculty in the region's four-year public institutions are employed in the predominantly black institutions;

- a black faculty member is less likely to be tenured, to hold the rank of full professor, and to have earned a doctorate, than is a white faculty member;

- over all four-year public colleges and universities in the South, doctorates are held by 37 percent of black faculty, compared to 65 percent of total faculty;

- the representation of black faculty in two-year institutions (7.2 percent of total faculty) is even lower than in four-year institutions, despite the fact that blacks comprise a greater proportion of total enrollment in two-year than in four-year schools.

The report compares data on new doctorates against the survey's results for areas where blacks show underrepresentation on Southern faculties, and concludes that "the number of such degrees earned by blacks in the Southern region is not sufficient to augment the current representation of blacks on the faculties of the region."

Dr. Galambos notes that the situation is "aggravated by the fact that 75 percent of all degrees earned by blacks in the region at the master's and doctoral levels are in the field of education — a discipline in which black faculty representation is much higher than average, and in which enrollments are declining."

The SREB survey includes data on the race and discipline of 97,000 four-year and 35,000 two-year full-time faculty members in the 14 Southern states for 1976-78. Four-year institutions were grouped according to the racial composition of their student bodies; (1) white (less than 5 percent black enrollment); (2) black (80 to 100 percent black enrollment); and (3) substantially integrated (all other). By this classification, 51 percent of all four-year faculty work in "substantially integrated" institutions; 41 percent, at "white" institutions; and 8 percent, at "black" institutions.

As noted in the highlights above, there is a high concentration of black faculty in teacher education — twice as many faculty than the average black representation in all fields of study.

Among these other disciplines, there are important variations within subfields. For example, among the social sciences, there is greater black representation in sociology and history than in economics. In engineering, there are considerably more black faculty in engineering technologies than for the field as a whole. The same is true for secretarial studies as compared to the entire field of business and management. Nursing, a subfield of the health professions, has a greater representation of black faculty than is true for the field in its entirety.

The increasing number of blacks earning master's degrees may provide a supply whereby black representation might be strengthened in the region's two-year colleges, where a master's degree is the norm for faculty. Another recent SREB report, Degree Output in the South, 1975-76: Distribution by Race, showed a concentration in teacher education reaching 75 percent of the 8,900 master's degrees earned by blacks — leaving only 2,200 degrees available across all other disciplines; one-fifth of those are in public affairs (including social work), another field in which blacks are already strongly represented.

Dr. Galambos notes that the market for college faculty is a national one, so that supply of faculty, by race and discipline, in 14 Southern states provides only a partial view of the total supply within the nation. "However," she writes, "the distribution of faculty by race and discipline in the Southern region is illustrative of the national picture."

Lack of Interest Threatens FCM

Financial Crisis Management, a new company that has been set up to help companies in financial trouble, is facing a serious problem. The company, which was founded by a group of former executives of the Federal Reserve Bank, is struggling to attract enough interest from potential clients. The company's business plan is based on the idea that companies in financial trouble will need help from an outside firm to negotiate with creditors and restructure their debt. However, the company is finding it difficult to convince companies that it is worth the cost of hiring it. The company's founders are now looking for ways to raise the company's profile and attract more clients.

Stock Representation Shows Weak Distribution

The distribution of stock representation among companies is weak, according to a new study. The study found that only a small percentage of companies have a significant number of stockholders. This is a problem because it means that the companies are not able to raise as much money as they need to grow. The study also found that the companies that do have a significant number of stockholders are often in industries that are not very competitive. This means that the companies are not able to raise as much money as they need to grow. The study suggests that companies should try to attract more stockholders to help them grow.

Chapin Appearing Here

BY LINDA CAIN

The versatile entertainer, Tom Chapin, will appear in concert on March 24 at 8:00 p.m. in the Memorial Auditorium. Chapin is singer, songwriter, and storyteller rolled into one.

His career began in high school when he played with a band called The Chapins Bros. The band consisted of his brothers, Harry and Steve, and his father, Jim. Later, he teamed up with his brother Steve, and formed 'The Chapins.' The band was hailed by Rock Magazine as being one of the best bands of 1971.

He has appeared in more than 300 engagements in the last two years. He has toured with Janis Ian and played in numerous festivals such as Wolftrap in Washington, Ravina in Chicago, and Temple in Philadelphia.

Chapin wrote the score for the movie, "Blue Water, White Death." His ABC-TV series, "Make A Wish," won numerous awards.

In 1977, he recorded his first album, "Life is Like That." A second album is scheduled to be released sometime this year.

Currently, he can be seen in the syndicated comedy series "Everyday."

These steps would look like a large mountain to handicapped students or visitors.

No Handicapped Facilities At HPC

BY JILL CHRISTIANSON

According to HEW, all colleges should be equipped to facilitate handicapped students.

"Nobody can afford to do what needs to be done," Dalbey said.

The Campus Utilization Program conducted by the North Carolina Department of Higher Education has determined that High Point College currently has "no classroom facilities on campus to accommodate the handicapped," Earle Dalbey, Vice President of Financial Affairs at HPC said.

Currently there are no permanently physically handicapped persons attending HPC. Dalbey commented that if a handicapped person enrolls at the college then HPC would "be obligated to provide all facilities."

Entrance ramps, elevators, drinking fountains, sinks, bathtubs, toilets; all of these will presumably have to be added or changed if a physically handicapped student attends HPC.

The cost of renovation at HPC would be expensive for the college. Dalbey quoted a figure of $25,000 just to make Hayworth Hall equipped for the handicapped.

Dalbey said that there is already an elevator shaft in Hayworth, an elevator and installation would cost "around $20,000."

Very few colleges or universities in the country have followed HEW's guidelines of providing facilities for handicapped students, according to the vice president of Financial Affairs. "No school has the money to go and convert," he said.

Although few academic institutions have renovated to facilitate the handicapped, they must provide the facilities when needed.

The American Council on Education has begun lobbying congress against the decision that all educational facilities must convert, Dalbey said. The cost of renovating the older buildings on campuses would ruin the finances of many small colleges and universities, he commented.

HEW published a "self-evaluation" guide for learning institutions last year. The piece "tells you where you are in the picture for accommodating the handicapped," the vice president said.

Dalbey mentioned that the "self-evaluation" guide has never been fully done at HPC. Apparently the form is very lengthy detailed and it would take a great amount of time to evaluate the college's facilities properly.

High Point College has taken no action on the HEW guidelines about providing facilities for the handicapped. Structural changes will be made however, as soon as a physically handicapped student enrolls at the college.

"Well, I'll tell you," concludes Walton, "we've talked and talked about those doors until we're blue in the face. But all it takes is just one person who doesn't care and leaves a door unlocked, even if others don't abuse the freedom. We've just really been lucky so far that nothing's happened."

Black Awareness Week

BY JERRY BLACKWELL

This year, for the first time in HPC's history, Black History Week will be officially observed on campus. During the week of April 2-8, there will be many scheduled events taking place here, commemorating this seven-day observance of Black history. Many distinguished guests will speak, and various other activities are planned for this week, saluting Black awareness.

Tanya Burton, a senior here, and coordinator for this affair, is very happy that this occasion is being observed on campus. Finally, during her last year here, something is being done which she feels "will help strengthen the relationship among Black students on campus."

Even though it has not been decided whether or not Black History Week will be annually observed here on campus, there is a great chance that it will. In speaking with Dr. Wendell Patton, President of HPC, he suggested that "if this first observance proves positive, then there is a possibility that it will be observed yearly."

A list of the week long activities are as follows:

Monday, April 2: Bishop L. Scott Allen, resident bishop of the Western N.C. Conference of the United Methodist Church will speak.

Tuesday, April 3: Cultural show, recognizing local talent, saluting Black awareness.

Wednesday, April 4: Rev. Belvin Jessop, pastor of The Memorial United Church of the High Point District, and Bob Brown, former advisor to President Nixon, and a the 1990s, the U.S. economy has been able to grow at a rapid pace, despite the fact that the federal government has been running a large budget deficit. This is due to a number of factors, including a strong private sector, a growing service industry, and a relatively low level of government spending. However, the federal government's budget deficit has been a major concern for many years, and it is expected to continue to grow in the future. This is due to a number of factors, including a growing population, a rising cost of social security, and a growing need for infrastructure. The federal government's budget deficit is a major problem, and it is important to find ways to reduce it. One way to do this is to increase government spending on infrastructure, which would create jobs and stimulate the economy. Another way to do this is to increase taxes on the wealthy, which would generate revenue that could be used to pay down the debt. The federal government's budget deficit is a major problem, and it is important to find ways to reduce it.

There is a growing trend in the U.S. to use the term "diversity" to describe the mix of people in an organization. Diversity is a broad term that encompasses a wide range of differences, including age, gender, race, ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation, and physical ability. While diversity is a positive goal, it is important to understand that it is not just about having a mix of people. It is about creating an environment where all people are valued and have the opportunity to contribute their unique perspectives and skills. This requires a commitment to equity and inclusion, where everyone has a fair chance to succeed. Organizations that embrace diversity and inclusion are more likely to be innovative, productive, and successful in the long run.

Marcel Marceau performs a Bip pantomime at UNC-G.

Marceau Exhibits Genius

A Review

Marcel Marceau lived up to his title as the master of Mime March 12, in a performance at UNC-G's Aycock Auditorium. The artist won the hearts of a full house crowd without a single word and left them applauding long after the house lights came back on.

Since his first appearance in the United States in 1955, Marceau has risen to universal heights of recognition in the most difficult of the performing arts - pantomime. His visit to UNC-G was one out of 55 appearances scheduled in America for 1979.

The show contained two parts - style pantomimes, and Bip pantomimes. The first half of the show incorporated style selections from Marceau's repertoire.

He began the program with a superior representation of a glasshouse visit in an amusement park. Without a single prop, he silently amused and amazed the crowd, sucking them deeper into his world of imagination and fantasy. One could almost see the vapor of his breath on the "glass."

Next, he performed the Angel. This was the beginning of Marceau's evening of satire as he parodied aspects of human existence. When given room to fly, the Angel began to battle the righteous way versus his own human desires. His escapades of beer drinking at German festivals along with a few hugs and kisses finally brought the light from above down on his head - literally and figuratively.

Later Marceau made a very valid dramatic point about gluttony in The 7 Deadly Sins. He pointed out the hypocrisy of a charity dinner worker as he slipped behind a curtain to gorge and stuff only to humbly refuse any food before others.

Perhaps the continuous stream of chuckles and guffaws throughout the performance was only nervous laughter. It was terribly funny but terribly true and I, along with all others whose toes had been stepped on, found myself laughing and squirming in my seat.

Marceau continued the show amazing all with the remarkable ability of his total body control. He whirled, twirled, cringed and crested before hundreds the illusion of walking while not moving an inch. His total silence only magnified his tremendous presence on stage and other than an occasional box to step on or screen to hide behind, he remained without props the entire show.

Marceau's partner, Pierre Verry, was the dramatic presenter of cards before each selection. Dressed in gayle attire similar to French Renaissance clothing, he showed the titles of each act on banners or cards, all the while with a perfectly frozen little smile on his face. Eventually, the audience began to clap for him also.

Bip came to life in the second half of the show. Born 32 years ago, Bip, Marceau's own alter ego, proved to present the more comical aspect of the performance. Called the blood brother of Charlie Chaplin's "Little Tramp," Bip, with white face, striped pull-over and opera hat (with a red flower), frolicked in over exaggerated realism to the laughs and claps of the audience while once again the satire permeated his every move.

There was the ice skater with splits and smiles and the shabby china salesman. Then with the most careful quality of himself, Bip played both David and Goliath. Finally he presented the infamous Maskmaker.

As the master bowed in his curtain call, one couldn't help but realize that no matter how many times or how many others had momentarily become a Maskmaker, there would only be Marcel Marceau to really represent all that the mask encompasses. That evening of imaginative entertainment was truly a work of genius and an opportunity to be savored in the years to come.

High School Science Academy Meets Here

BY STEPHANIE HIGGINS

The North Carolina Academy of Science, District IV, met at High Point College on Saturday, March 17th. About 150 students, grades 7-12, from Guilford, Randolph, Caswell, Alamance, Surry, Yadkin, Davie, Stokes, Forsyth, Davidson, and Rockingham counties attended the day-long program held in Haworth Hall.

Selected students submitted papers and projects in the areas of biological science, earth and space science, environmental science, behavioral science, physical science, technology and engineering, and mathematics. The projects were judged by high school teachers and the professors and science majors here at High Point College. The twelve winning papers are now eligible for the state competition which will be held at UNC-G the last week in March.

After lunch in Holt McPherson Campus Center, the Student Academy elected officers and the winners of the competition were announced. Students and teachers were also given the opportunity to tour the science facilities at the college at the end of the meeting.

Dr. John E. Ward Jr., Associate Professor of Biology at High Point College and Co-director of District IV, termed the meeting as "very successful," and commended the whole science division here at High Point for serving as host.

MILITARY LEADERSHIP

MSC 151

T-Th 10:30-11:20

[2 Credit Hours]

The purpose of this course is to provide the student with a basic reference for the study of individual and group behavior and the principles and techniques of applied leadership. There is no standard solution to becoming a good leader, and none will be presented here. Leadership is intangible, hard to measure, and difficult to describe. However, by understanding and applying what is presented here, the leader will understand what motivates his subordinates, and will develop a personal framework for leadership.

A basic understanding of human behavior is a prerequisite to good leadership. Although the study of successful leaders is helpful and can provide a background to assist in forming an individual leadership style, each leader must recognize that he cannot completely adopt the style, method, or attitude of another man and expect to be totally effective. In recent years, a wealth of new information in the field of human behavior has been developed through both military and civilian efforts. The material presented here is a condensation of this new information and represents the latest thinking concerning the relationship between human behavior and good leadership as it applies to the military.

MILITARY HISTORY

MSC 111

Tuesday 3:00-4:40

[2 Credit Hours]

This course will differ from other history courses in several ways. It is designed to give you an up front look at the 20th Century conflicts that the U.S. has been engaged in. We use TV documentary films, seminars, and limited readings to develop an understanding of the actual battles that have taken place. Most of the films used are actual footage of the conflicts. The films used were developed as TV documentaries and as such they do reflect a particular point of view. Hopefully, we can overlook some of the high flying rhetoric in the films and concentrate on the real historic value of the events as they relate to modern battles and conflicts of the future. This course will give you a new insight to history using a multi-media presentation that is guaranteed to keep your interest.

Pre-Register (April 4-6) For Fall '79

MSC 110 T-Th 9:00-9:50 [2 Credit Hours]

This course will provide the fundamentals of how the Army is organized; the rank structure from Private to General of the Army and how it fits into the overall organization of the Army; the Branches of the Army and how they compare to the different academic majors; the different decorations, service medals and badges awarded to service members.

Chambers Set For National

When you first meet the towering 6'0 Sylvia Chambers you see a quiet, smiling "Barbie Doll" image. But this young junior is a devastating force under the boards for the Lady Panthers of High Point.

"I've played alot better this year, I'm trying to be meaner and tougher. Sometimes you just get tired of getting knocked around under the boards," Sylvia says. Her rebounding talents have frightened many teams defensively. Grabbing the ball and not letting it go is what makes Sylvia a power force for the Panthers. "I feel stronger when I jump up and rebound other than turn around and shoot," Chambers says.

At the beginning of the year Sylvia felt that things weren't together mentally and that is what affected their playing. "When Marie got hurt we definitely had to work together and alot harder I was really sared," states Chambers. She felt that Marie was a main asset and it affected alot of the team. Chambers states, "We have a strong bench and we overcame pressures. We have alot of talent and the depth is unreal."

When asked what did it feel like to be selected to the All-Conference team Sylvia smiled and said, "We have two All-Americans and a Honorable mention on our team. It really surprised me to make the team."

Sylvia stated that she was really psyched for the South Carolina game. According to the tournament High Point was not favored to beat S.C. State. "I was tired of hearing them having very little support for High Point," says Sylvia. "In the first game of the tournament we were calm, we were playing the host team. The second game we seemed a bit jittery and scared. The Championship game made me nervous and scared, but sometimes being in that state makes me play harder." The last statement of that quote was proven to be true when Sylvia Chambers' layup tied S.C. 66-66. H.P. also out rebounded its opponent 59-53 with Sylvia pulling down 12.

"Coach Briley feels I have improved. She encourages me by just saying good game. It builds up my confidence," says Sylvia.

When asked what she wants to do when she graduates Sylvia states, "I want to teach Senior High. I'm going to miss basketball, especially the physical aspect of the game. But right now I'm ready to stop the season, its sorta tough when volleyball over laps basketball. I'm ready to go to Fargo, N.D."

Sylvia says with a smile, "I like school but I'm not crazy about studying. I just like people. I'm not ready to graduate."

Lady Panthers Claim Regional; Ready to Defend Championship

BY IRISH GAYMON

The Ladies of High Point College came home from Louisville, Kentucky with a Regional win and a berth to the Nationals in Fargo N.D. to defend the title won by the Panthers last year.

The ladies will play North Dakota State in the first game of the tournament. The winner of the H.P. game will advance to play the winner of Air Force versus the University of Dayton.

Winning basketball games have always been the natural thing to do and the Lady Panthers proved it in Kentucky by beating S.C. State for the title.

The first round game for the Ladies proved to be an easy win (89-59) against Bellarmine. The Ladies hit 38 of 66 shots from the floor. Andrea Blanchard paced the Ladies with a career-high 37 points. She hit 16 of 21 field goal attempts and five of seven from the line and led the rebounders with 12.

The second game for H.P. was against Francis Marion. The Panthers were bothered by the opposition's full court press which destroyed a nine-point lead by H.P. "We're just not used to close games or full court presses," said Briley. Andrea led with 30 points and 15 rebounds. Ethel White added 16, Marie Riley 14 and Sylvia Chambers 11 to help make a 82-71 win.

The championship game against South Carolina State was not an easy win for the Panthers. Fouls were the key problem that plagued the team. The spectators thought H.P. couldn't beat

S.C. so the ladies felt they had to prove something. The game was a replay of the regionals a year ago with the Panthers winning 95-89. Both teams advanced to the nationals and met each other again. High Point captured the title 92-88 from S.C. in overtime. This year H.P. defeated the Bulldogs 68-66 for the regional title.

Andrea Blanchard led the team in the tournament with 73 points and 39 rebounds total. Marie Riley scored a total 39 points during the three games. Her first after suffering a broken wrist.

He Overcame Sickness, Controversy to Shine For HP

BY DENNIS TUTTLE

To Charlie Floyd, basketball is life. Once, he was a blue chip recruit from Malvern Prep School in Philadelphia. From Philly to Winston-Salem to High Point, Charlie Floyd has exhibited his basketball talents from the northern plateau to the southern farmlands.

With High Point's loss to Briar Cliff in the NAIA tournament, Charlie Floyd looks to the last avenue of basketball -- the Pros.

Charlie Floyd is a unique athlete who has the shooting touch of a saint and the ability to rebound with the best. His career has been sprinkled with publicity, controversy and praise. He endured problems at Wake Forest, allegedly transferred to St. Joseph's but eventually wound up at High Point. Charlie's career has been so controversial that the media can't decide whether his first name is spelled Charley or Charlie. He accepts the latter.

A Prep All-American

Floyd is a perfectionist. As a high scholar at Malvern Prep, he used to practice by the 'midnight oil'. He would wait until night time to play because all the guys on the block wanted to play games. Floyd just wanted to perfect his touch. And by playing at night, he figured if he could shoot in the dark, he could shoot when the lights went down. Always theoretical, Floyd had his sights set on playing college basketball.

"I really love basketball," he said. "I run across a lot of people who don't want to excel at it. But to me, basketball is a year around thing. You have to devote yourself to it. Some like to fish, hunt and chase girls when the season is over. But I'd rather be working on my game."

Searching For A College

Floyd's high school confidence followed him to Winston-Salem, via choosing Wake Forest for his college career. He averaged 23 points and 15 rebounds as a senior at Malvern while being a first team All-America performer and one of the nation's top 50 recruits. He became a threat from baseline-to-baseline and one Philadelphia sportswriter tagged him as an "Adrian Dantley with speed." Charlie loved that title.

Charlie could have gone to about any college he wanted. UCLA, Notre Dame, Minnesota, Memphis State, Wake Forest and Providence became his final choices. The ACC was his first priority but it was obvious that he couldn't play for Carolina; they had Walter Davis, N.C. State was off the list because of a freshman named Kenny Carr and the others, he didn't really care about.

He turned down Minnesota because he felt that NCAA probation was surely awaiting the Gophers' and Memphis State seemed like a 'Bandit School.' He chose Wake Forest because of its atmosphere and the possibility to play right away for the Deacons.

Health Problems Intervene

But his freshman year at Wake turned out to be one he'd rather forget. Asthma blocked his breathing at times and his stamina was about half of what it should have been. Floyd averaged right under five points per game, started only seven games and managed to hit only 40 per cent from the floor.

There was some pressure because I was an All-America and I hid a good high school career," Charlie said. "Sometimes my breathing was affected worse than others times, and that's why I was kind of spotty. I started off well (23 points against George Washington) but then I started messing around with my shot, and when I played well my shot was still messed up. It just affected the things I do best," he added.

Headin' back to Philly?

Floyd's crack in his relationship with Wake came after his sophomore season when he announced that he would transfer to St. Joseph's, one of five colleges in Philadelphia. But Charlie worked on his game in the summer and decided to enroll back at Wake.

Charlie Floyd No Cheering McGovern, Controversy in Times For '87

BY MICHAEL CROSBY

As the 1987 campaign for the New York State Assembly election got underway, Charlie Floyd, the 40-year-old Democratic candidate for the 10th District, was the only one who was not a member of the Democratic Party.

Mr. Floyd, who was born in 1949 in the Bronx, had been a member of the Democratic Party since 1968. But in 1986, when he was elected to the State Assembly, he decided to leave the party and run as an independent. He was the only independent to win a seat in the Assembly in 1986.

decision to leave the party was a surprise to many of his supporters. They had expected him to run as a Democrat. But Mr. Floyd said that he wanted to run as an independent because he did not want to be part of a party that was so corrupt.

Panther Men Rose Above Expectations

BY DENNIS TUTTLE

Alumni Gym, with its rustic features, scuffed surface and brightened new paint job, has officially closed its competitive basketball season for a good summer's rest.

Echoes roar in its background, bringing out a remembrance of what has been a banner year for the High Point College basketball. A year of dispair for the men turned out to be the most prosperous under coach Jerry Steele. The women, with their usual array of dominance, felt the thundering tone of defeat on Alumni's back only once this year — that to nationally ranked Old Dominion.

The chants and howls of the Panthers' final home game — a District 26 win over St. Augustine's — can easily be heard. Even though that particular Sunday wasn't officially designated as Charlie Floyd Day, it became obvious that the 46-point performance in his finale at Alumni was not going to be unjustified. A 24-of-27 day from the free throw line placed him among the High Point elite.

Drowned in the middle of ACC waters, High Point College crept out of the high tide, soared to an 18-game winning streak, took the Carolina Conference Tournament, the District 26 and earned a trip to the NAIA tournament in Kansas City. The streak ended abruptly with a 76-65 second round loss to Briar Cliff at K.C.

Five ACC teams received postseason bids. So did two Carolinas Conference teams — both High Point. And when last weekend had ended, ACC madness had subsided. All five postseason entries had tasted a bitter and uncommon taste-defeat. From that standpoint, it was up to High Point to bring a national championship to the east coast. Now, only the women survive.

The 18-game winning streak was the longest in High Point basketball history. Not even in the days of All-American Gene Littles had Panther basketball enjoyed such success in such an understaffed manner. But with the nine players that he had, Steele drove his team to the an almost impossible to reality, great solidity and a thriving diet of ambition.

When Briar Cliff had ended the Panther winning string, halted the careers of seniors Charlie Floyd and Dennis West, intervened in High Point's dream of the NAIA championship, and finished Panther basketball for 1978-79 at 29-6, the players sulked their heads with despair in the Kemper Arena dressing room. Jimmy Carroll of the High Point Enterprise put it firmly: 'Who says grown men don't cry?'

The players will no doubt look back on this past season and see how much they did accomplish. Gardner Webb, Pfeiffer, Winston-Salem State and 26 others felt the impact of High Point's great determination to prove themselves. Now it's all over. From nonentity to supremacy. It's all history.

HPC Nine Starts Slow

BY DENNIS TUTTLE

High Point College baseball continues to struggle through the first month of the season as the Panther nine is an even 5-5 after its first ten outings.

But the Panthers have lost close games to ACC teams N.C. State and Clemson. Clemson, the defending ACC champion, handed High Point two losses in Death Valley while State dropped the Panthers 6-3 in Raleigh.

High Point is 2-1 in the Carolinas Conference with the only loss being a 7-1 home verdict to Pfeiffer on Monday. HPC opened its conference schedule with a 6-0 triumph over Catawba as Dirk Curley went the distance in allowing Catawba only four hits. Tim Reid powered the Panther offense with a 2-for-5 game with a double and two RBIs. Catcher Danny Wilbour's double also drove in a pair of runs.

The season opened with a sweep of a double header against Susquehanna. Panther pitcher Phil Cherry came within one-out of hurling a perfect game but Larry Hilton's two single through the middle destroyed Cherry's no-hit bid. The Panther did post a 4-0 win in the night cap. Cherry had

Sometime during that summer Floyd regained the shooting touch that had brought him scholarship offers from 200 colleges. He abandoned his transfer thoughts, packed his bags and headed back down Tobacco Road to share his new discovery with the rest of the ACC. Coach Tracy admitted that Charlie was the best player in Wake's pre-season. He was playing up to his potential, regained his confidence, and was prepared to set the ACC on fire.

'I thought all along that if I could get my shot back, that we'd (Wake) be okay. I really couldn't screw up my junior year since I had planned on transferring and all. Consequently, I did pretty well until . . .

Biology and those Book Blues

Floyd's big chance at Wake fell through like a boulder on paper after he was accused of cheating on a Biology test a couple of weeks before the start of the 1976-77 season. He was convicted for the second time of the same offense by the university Honor Council, suspended from school for the spring semester and forced to take an "F" in the Biology course.

Needing some time to regroup, he withdrew from his fall classes and returned home to watch TV. After the Academic Affairs Committee turned down his application for readmission for the fall of 77, the resentment from Floyd boiled over the pot. "They gave me four 'Fs' and I didn't drop out.

Welcome to High Point

Charlie had to come to summer school to get into High Point because of the "Fs" he received from Wake. He got his grades to the point of acceptance and became eligible to play in January, just in time to drive the Panthers to the Carolinas Conference regular season and tournament championships. He averaged 19 ppq, 10 rpg and hit 90 per cent of his free throws in 18 games for HPC in being named honorable mention All-America.

This season was by far his best since his days at Malvern. He averaged right at 23 ppq and 14 rpg. He led the Panthers to Kansas City and his shot, the one he rediscovered right before his junior year at Wake, was no doubt singing its way to the hoop down the home stretch of the year. His 46 point performance in High Point's District 26 win over St. Augustine was his career high and second highest in High Point history.

Now, he's ready for the big time.

Awaiting For The NBA Call

Charlie could sense the searching eyes of the pro scouts while High Point was in Kansas City. It was doubt that he was the best 'all-around' player at the NAIA tournament. He believes that he'll get a fair shake with the NBA but an offer from any pro team will be gladly accepted.

"I figure that I'll get drafted between the first and fifth round," an exhausted Charlie said right after returning from K.C. "I would really like to play for Portland or Boston, one of those team-oriented clubs. But I'll accept whoever will take me."

Lady Panthers Finish AIAW No. 6

BY IRISH GAYMON

The Lady Panthers of High Point College -- the 1977-78 National Small College Champions -- returned home with a sixth place finish in this year's AIAW National Championship held in Fargo, North Dakota. The Panthers, whose season ended with a 69-59 loss to Tougaloo in the consolation bracket, finished the season with a 34-4 record with a 23 game winning streak snapped.

BLANCHARD

over hostess team North Dakota State. North Dakota entered the tournament with a 12-17 season record.

Each player on the HPC bench managed to get playing time against the Bisons. Andrea Blanchard led the scoring with 21 points -- 21 in the first half. Ethel White scored 15, Marie Riley 11, Teresa Holt 10 and Wendy Knight 10.

"This is probably the most our bench has ever played in one game all season," coach Wanda Briley said.

The second game of the tournament proved a grave disappointment for the Panthers as the University of Dayton ended the quest of a second straight national title for the Ladies of High Point with a 75-65 loss.

"We didn't execute our offense or defense correctly. We rushed on both ends of the court when we didn't have to," Briley said.

Blanchard added 24 points while Riley connected for 18 and White chipped in 11.

"It was like we were there but we weren't. Physically we were there but mentally, who knows," added Briley.

High Point then advanced to the consolation round for fifth place with the first game being an easy 77-62 victory over Pepperdine University. The Lady Panthers had little trouble defeating the Lady Waves even though High Point committed 29 turnovers. Blanchard sparked High Point to the easy win by scoring 35 points.

The second game of consolation play matched the Panthers against Morris Harvey. The 79-73 win was not an easy one for HPC. Morris Harvey led the entire game until eight minutes remained in the game. With White's 26 points and Roxann Moody and Holt both scoring (16 points), the Panthers were on their way to playing for fifth place.

The game against Tougaloo College was nothing but a nightmare for the Panthers. High Point never led in the game and the score was tied only once -- 2-2. Blanchard led the Panther scoring with 17 points.

With High Point's loss to the Lady Bulldogs, the Ladies of High Point College gained sixth place in the nationals. South Carolina State, the team High Point beat last year for the National Crown, captured the national title.

Blanchard led all the tournament scorers with 110 points in five games while White was chosen All-National Tournament for the third straight year.

White and Jody Westmoreland, the only two seniors on the squad, helped the Lady Panthers to compile a 116-15 record in four years of HPC basketball action.

SGA And Class Elections Completed

BY NANCY REICHEL

Jacky Hendrix defeated Ken Swanson in the recent elections and will serve as SGA president for the 1979-80 school year. SGA and class officer elections were held March 28 and 29 during lunch and dinner in the main lobby of the student center. Voting machines were used in the elections.

In other SGA runnings, Kathy Connelly secured the position of vice-president by defeating Mark Poore. Bettie Bolen, after eliminating Joni Powell, obtained the position of secretary. Millie Green ran unopposed for treasurer. These and the other officers will be installed at the next legislature meeting.

Next year's senior class officers will be headed by French Bolen as president. His opponent in the election was Phyllis Griffin. The office of vice-president was a three-candidate race. Theresa Nowak, Mike Taylor, and Kim Cox ran for the office with Mike Taylor the victor. The senior class treasurer will be Jill Beam. She ran unopposed in the election. Also running unopposed was Janet Spaulding who secured the office of secretary for the 1979-80 term. The class legislators are Dave Olson, Teresa Martin, and Winnie Adkins. Chip Aldridge will serve as judicial representative for the senior class.

Scott Hance defeated Peggy Pease for the office of junior class president. Serving a second term will be vice-president of the class of '81, Keith Chance. He defeated Colleen Blackney in the election. The offices of treasurer and secretary went to Laurie Hoover and Tammy Garrison, respectively. Both candidates ran unopposed for these offices. Legislators for the 79-80 term will be Mike Showalter, Sharon Billings, and Steve Burton. Ed Mullis, a write-in candidate, defeated Tom Miller, another write-in candidate, for the position of judicial representative.

Karen Magill, the president of the class of '82 will continue for a second term. She defeated Martha Vink for the office. The new vice-president, Jan Harrison, ran

Eat Your Own Grass

High Point College may not have the fine arts programs of surrounding universities or the versatility of the large campus, but it does have something that perhaps even our neighboring schools can envy—faculty concern.

The faculty here has tried everything in the book to better prepare the student for the future and to provide learning opportunities for all who care to become involved. They are constantly faced with trying to find that perfect something that will suck in the student body and get them involved. Because of the students, most of these attempts are in vain.

Last week, I had the opportunity to attend the English Department's Career Day and I can honestly say that I walked out on air, feeling good about myself and my future. Not only has there been Career Day, but other special events that were designed for the student and her/his needs.

There have been movies, workshops, seminars and lectures presented on campus for the student and I can only say that we are ripping ourselves off greatly by not taking advantage of what we have been provided. There is no need to spend time and gas searching on other campuses for enrichment when we ignore what is here. Somehow the grass on the other side always ends up being as green as from where we originally came, while searching for something better.

It is a shame to waste the efforts of others who attempt to help us and provide us with a better education. It too should be a personal assumed academic penalty to totally disregard the cultural opportunities that are no longer required.

Perhaps this campus needs to go back to the cultural credit program. It does defeat the purpose of these activities to spoon feed them, yet it does at least assure attendance, participation and some degree of awareness, and for those who spend time and energy coordinating, some satisfaction can be derived from it all. More importantly though, the individual grows from that initial step to learn more than what is required of her/him. That in itself is an accomplishment and a beginning of a more fulfilled and well rounded, educated individual.

Thefts Raise Security Questions

BY RAY DANIEL

Three bicycles were stolen from the rack between Woman's and Yaddin Dorms during the week of the nineteenth. The victims were Marion Shriver, Robin Henson, and Lori Forman.

The first theft occurred Tuesday night when Shriver's 10-speed Schwinn Super Sport had its lock snapped off and was taken from the rack. Wednesday night, Henson's 10-speed Schwinn was stolen by having its chain cut and sometime over the weekend, Forman's KIA Sport was carried off, still locked to itself, through the spokes.

A suspect was caught roaming around McCulloch by the Resident Director Paul Lessard, Tuesday night. Security then came and held the suspect until the police could arrive. He was wearing a pair of heavy-duty bolt cutters around his neck.

"He was quite proud of them," Lt. Don Walton said. He had marijuana and amphetamines reportedly, but was able to get rid of them before police arrived. When the HPPD came, they found an automatic pistol in the suspect's sock. He gave the alias of Tony Moore with a false address, and Lt. Walton reports that he is still not talking to the police.

Walton, head of campus security, said that the suspect is charged with possession of burglary tools, trespassing, and carrying a concealed weapon. Also, a student who was pushed by the suspect is charging him with assault, but Walton feels that he will be back out on the streets in a few days. The suspect supposedly stays near campus, but if he is seen on HPC again, "he will definitely be asked to leave, and if he doesn't, then he will be arrested," assured Walton.

The increasing number of thefts and the recent rape on campus have brought serious doubts about security. Forman said, "It upsets me that a guy can come and carry something off as big as that, and not even be seen. I do not have a very secure feeling."

Henson feels that "security is so poor, the school should have some kind of financial responsibility for the articles stolen. Even if they pay half of it, it would help." Shriver felt there should be at least two officers on duty at night.

Lt. Walton said that even though the location of the campus causes problems, "what security needs is more manpower, the officer out there is doing all that he can do. You can only be at once place at a time. Some people put us in a second class... a 'Rent-a-Cop,'" but the men are dedicated officers with practically the same job as police; and they are out there along, risking their lives, armed only with a night stick, protecting the safety of each student. Walton says that he has heard High Point policemen tell him that there is no way they would do his job without their firearms handy.

So, the problem does not rest on an incompetent security force, the officers are very competent and hard working. The fault lies on the negligence of HPC's Administration to recognize the seriousness of the problem and take steps to hire more officers. Hopefully, they will see the importance of improved security conditions before a student is killed by a nervous bike thief, while the entire security force is on the other side of the campus. Action should be taken by the students, and their Student Government to demand their right to safety.

Even locks don't always guarantee protecting against theft.

Cut Policy Still Confusing

BY JERRY BLACKWELL

High Point College's class attendance policy in regard to unexcused absences is quite confusing for many students here. The policy states, in short, that each student is allowed volunteer (unexcused) absences for each class in accordance with the policy announced by the instructor of the class at the beginning of the semester.

It goes on to state that no student may have unexcused absences in excess of 25% of the number of class meetings scheduled each semester. The instructor's announced attendance policy is restricted by this regulation. The perplexing facet to this rule is that many students view this regulation as two different policies: the college's general policy of allowing the student to miss 25% of the class meetings, and the professor's individual policy.

The professor's policy is what is to be followed in the class, however. If a professor does not announce a policy concerning class attendance at the beginning of the year, then the student can be safe in assuming that he or she is allowed to miss one-fourth of the class meetings without being penalized.

Dr. David Cole, academic dean here, stated in reference to the policy that "the student has the right to know at the beginning of the class about the professor's own policy of attendance." Dean Cole also stated that the student should be notified by the professor when he or she is approaching the amount of days allowed to be missed in the class.

He also cleared up another misconception concerning class attendance. Regardless of how well a student does academically in a course, he or she will be immediately dropped from the course and receive a grade of "F" when the number of allowed absences is exceeded. Only as students who have attained a grade point average of 2.50 or better (Dean's List) on the previous semester's work are exempt from attendance regulations.

Students Tried For Conduct

BY STEPHANIE HIGGINS

Following an incident which occurred on March 1, 1979 at approximately 4:00 a.m., two High Point College students were charged with conduct unbecoming students of the college. The incident involved the defendants' behavior towards two campus security officers after refusing to adequately park the vehicle they were driving and were issued a ticket. A confrontation between the defendants and security officers over the issuing of the ticket followed.

"The use of profane and abusive language" and lack of respect shown the security officers resulted in the defendants being charged under General College Rule Number 3 which states:

"Exclusion: Any student whose conduct or academic standing is regarded as undesirable may be excluded by the College at any time. Such exclusion includes both suspension and non-acceptance for subsequent enrollment. In all such cases, fees due or paid will not remitted in whole or part, nor shall the College or its officers be under any liability for such exclusion."

One of the defendants was also charged with public drunkenness. Both defendants pleaded not guilty on all counts.

The trials were held on March 21st, 28th, and 29th. A verdict of not guilty for lack of evidence was passed in regard to the drunkenness charge, but both defendants were found guilty of conduct unbecoming students of the College. Both students were placed on probation for the remainder of the semester with readmittance to the Fall Semester pending review of the present semester.

The point to be made by this trial is the importance of students being aware of the Rules of the College and the consequences which can result in the violation of those rules.

In referring to this trial, Chief Justice of the Student Court, Chip Aldridge, points out that, "In an incident where there is a conflict between a guard and student, or a question of a ticket issued, the student should not confront campus security, but should take their questions to the head of security, the Bursar, or Student Personnel. The student should also be aware of the disciplinary procedure as outlined under Section VII in

Kline Speaks On Math Importance

BY DAVID SCHALLER

Professor Morris Kline, from New York University, lectured on the role of mathematics in Western Culture last week at HPC. Professor Kline was a research assistant for the Institute of Advanced Study for two years. He was director of the Electromagnetic Research Division at Courant

Institute for Mathematical Sciences at New York University. He also holds five patents. Professor Kline is author of the books, "Why Johnny Can't Read," and "Why the Professor Can't Teach."

Professor Kline stated that, "Everything is directly or indirectly influenced by mathematics." He stated that, "Poetry, painting, government, and music, to name just a few, are all backed up by mathematics."

According to Professor Kline, "We can't believe in mathematics anymore, but we can believe in the application of mathematics. Mathematics is not a body of truth, but is a creation of the human mind."

Preregistration Is Slightly Different

BY APRIL CALLAHAN

This year preregistration will be held for three days April 4, 5, and 6. The student will begin by going to his advisor and picking up his preregistration card. The card will be computerized with the student's name, account number, the semester and year, the class, major and advisor.

The student will then complete the card with the times and days of classes, the period number (provided on the preregistration information sheet), department, course number and section. The student must also fill in the number of semester hours, and he must indicate if he is taking a course as a repeat, pass/fail, or audit. He must then go to the professors during regular office hours, and have each one initial the card.

The student must then have his advisor approve his schedule, and if more than 17 hours are scheduled, Dean Cole must approve it. The card must then be validated at the registrar's office where it will later be fed into the computer and saved for the completion of registration.

Although preregistration is not much different from the past, the process of registration has some major changes. The student who has preregistered and pre-paid should go to the gym and pick up a permit-to-enroll card. Attached to this will be a schedule print-out of the preregistered courses. The student can then register his car and have an I.D. made. The permit-to-enroll card will be asked for if a course is dropped, or if a student cashes a check at the bookstore. If the student fails to have an I.D. made, then these color-coded cards will grant entrance into the cafeteria until an I.D. is made.

If the student has preregistered, but not prepaid, he will be sent directly to the business office where he will be given the permit-to-enroll card. Then he can go to the gym and complete the process. The student who has not preregistered or prepaid must go to the business office and get a card, go to the gym and register.

It is best if the student preregisters and prepays (either in full or have payment waived) by August 15. It is hoped that this new method will eliminate confusion and long lines in the gym. Financial aid workers will not be in the gym, but rather in the offices in Robert's Hall.

When planning preregistration the student must consider that certain courses are not available every semester. These courses, which are often for majors only, are not in great enough demand to merit having the course each semester. To avoid missing required courses, the student can talk to his advisor, or the head of the department concerned. It must also be remembered that the student has the option of graduating under either the catalogue he began with, or the present catalogue which may have some program changes.

Robert M. White, president and CEO of the American Road & Builders Builders Association, speaks at a news conference.

Psychology Instructor To Have Article Published

BY JILL CHRISTIANSON

Hall (Skip) Beck "jumped in the air" and was "overcome by joy" recently.

Beck, who is a part-time psychology instructor at High Point College, received news that an article, which he wrote about psychological research he conducted, will be published.

The Journal of Personality and Social Psychology, which has a 95 to 98% rejection rate on submitted articles, will publish Beck's article next winter.

With such a high percentage of rejections, Beck was very excited to hear of his article's acceptance by the magazine.

The research which the article was about took place during the fall of 1977 at UNC-G, where Beck was doing his doctoral work.

The study examined the competition among people in a theoretically noncompetitive situation.

Beck's hypothesis in the experiment, which proved to be correct, is that people are continually competitive, regardless of the lack of performance rewards.

The experimenter said that the tested subjects who were aggressive during the experiment later were totally unaware of that behavior.

Subjects for Beck's study were students enrolled in introductory psychology courses at UNC-G, 60 students in all.

Assisting him in his studies was Dr. Seta, professor of comparative psychology at UNC-G, and seven undergraduate students.

Seta is an advisor to Beck in his doctoral work at UNC-G. The two psychologists have worked on several research projects together.

Beck has been researching with Seta for two years. They have two other articles which are presently up for review of publications; both pieces are based on research which Beck and Seta have done together.

Three additional studies are in the workings for Beck and Seta, all of which should be completed by October.

Beck, who is presently teaching at High Point College, expects to receive his doctorate degree in psychology next December from UNC-G.

Teaching is a strong interest of Beck's, he receives no credit towards his doctorate for his teaching at High Point College.

Staying at High Point College and teaching psychology is one of the options which Beck is considering after he receives his doctorate next December.

The psychologist is also considering doing post-doctoral research and teaching at a larger institution.

The soon-to-be-published article is not the first piece of Beck's to be published, he has been successful with four other works.

Beck has had two articles published about his research of invertebrate learning of sea anemones. These pieces were published in the Journal of Comparative Psychology and the Journal of Bio-Psychology.

The young psychologist has presented a paper on "Learning in Protozoa" to the Animal Behavior Society.

He has also had published a booklet on how to evaluate educational programs for the retarded.

Although psychology plays an important role in Skip Beck's life today, it has not always. Not until his last quarter of his junior year in college did he become interested in the subject.

WWIH Posed With Power Question

BY ROBIN HENSON

The Federal Communications Commission is trying to clear the FM radio band of all 10-watt stations. It says that the airways are becoming too crowded, and it wants to make the band more powerful.

WWIH, the High Point College student radio station is a 10-watt station. Guilford College also has a 10-watt station. Guilford is seriously considering raising their power to 100 watts, the next highest wattage rating. Since Guilford's frequency is very close to that of WWIH, if Guilford raises their power, WWIH would probably be blasted off the air.

Both stations must renew their licenses in 1980. Guilford's license renewal comes up first. If they raise their power to 100 watts, WWIH will almost certainly have to do the same or fold.

The decision about raising the wattage will not come until next year when the license comes up for renewal, said Earle Dalbey, vice president in charge of financial affairs.

Guilford estimates that it will take $14,000 to equip its station to handle 100 watts of power. HPC estimates $6,000. The true figure, according to Dalbey, probably falls somewhere between the two figures. Most of the money would go toward new equipment that could handle the higher wattage.

WWIH is owned by the students in spite of the fact that it is legally licensed to High Point College Trustees, Inc. The money to start the station came out of the SGA contingency fund, and operating costs come out of the SGA budget.

If WWIH does raise its wattage, part of the money will most likely come from the SGA contingency fund, said Dalbey. The rest of the money will probably be borrowed from the school and paid back out of Student Activities fees over a three-year period.

"I think we are probably more likely to go to 100 watts rather than fold," said Dalbey, "but it depends upon the students. Students are the force that makes things happen, but they must support the causes they believe in."

Abzug Slated For Lecture

Bella S. Abzug, a former U.S. representative from New York City who has been an outspoken leader in the women's rights movement, will speak at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro on April 9.

Ms. Abzug will deliver the annual Harriet Elliott Lecture at UNC-G. Her topic will be "Challenges for Women in the 1980s."

"She (Abzug) has been in the forefront of fighting for more extensive and better childcare services, non-discriminatory credit opportunities, equal legal rights for women and most certainly equal employment opportunities for women," the lecture committee chairperson said.

The Elliott Lecture is held annually in honor of the late Harriet W. Elliott, who for many years was dean of women and professor of political science at UNC-G.

Ms. Abzug served as a member of Congress from 1970 to 1976.

Her congressional colleagues voted Ms. Abzug as the third most influential member of the House of Representatives behind Speaker Carl Albert and Majority Leader Thomas "Tip" O'Neill.

Ms. Abzug was defeated in her re-election campaign in 1976. She then chaired the National Women's Conference in Houston.

Ms. Abzug has served as chairperson of President Jimmy Carter's Advisory Council for Women. However, Carter fired her following a dispute in January.

As this year's Harriet Elliott lecturer, Ms. Abzug will be following the world known anthropologist, Dr. Mary Leakey, who was last year's speaker.

The lecture is free and open to the public.

Career Day Guests Informed Students

BY LINDA CAIN

"A student with a liberal arts major should know a little bit about everything," said Van King, writer - Greensboro Daily News at the recent Career Day at High Point College.

King was part of a panel of 15 people who spoke to interested students about careers in English other than teaching. Other panelists included Gazella Carter, Feature Writer - High Point Enterprise; Fred Blackman, News Department - WHOP-TV; Bonnie Peterson, Alderman Studios; Jan Samet, Lawyer; Marilyn Hughes, Smithsonian Institute, Washington, D.C.; and Karen Pool, High Point Arts Council. Many of the panelists were graduates of High Point College.

Major points brought out by the panel were:

- knowing how to write a clear sentence with correct grammar.

- to gain experience on a publication of some type whether it be newspaper or yearbook while in college.

- be able to think creatively.

Each member stressed getting an internship so a person will have experience when he goes out to apply for a job after college.

Mrs. Emily Sullivan, coordinator of the day and Chairman of the English department noted that many of the panelists felt that English did not have anything to do with what they were doing.

New Proposals Head SGA List

BY NANCY REICHEL

Student legislature held its regular meeting on Tuesday, March 27 at 6:30 p.m. in the student center. A number of important business and legislation matters were discussed. Caryn Reinhart announced that the student handbook will be re-done patterned after Gardner Webb's. It is larger than the current one and contains a calendar. Sharon Billings reported that letters are being sent out to obtain the information for the New Student Register.

One bill was proposed by Norris Woody and Mike Showalter; an act to add to Article V, Section IV of the SGA constitution, Sub-section D. This article concerns the budget committee and the procedure for establishing budgets for the campus organizations. A tentative budget will be formed on a percentage basis of the estimated total Student Activity Fund for the next fiscal year. When the actual fund total is known, the budgets will be determined using the percentage figures. The budget will be given to each organization two weeks after the school year has begun in the fall.

Caryn Reinhart, SGA president, presented a resolution to change from a 3.0 to 4.0 grading scale. Several reasons support the resolution: Few colleges or universities are using this grading system. A "D" and an "F" are treated the same on a 3.0 scale. Many students are dissatisfied with the present grading system due to the problems of transferring and employment. Legislation passed the resolution, and copies will be sent to the appropriate people.

Caryn Reinhart also presented a proposal for forming an interclub council at High Point College. The purpose of this organization is to create unity among the various organizations on campus in matters of planning and coordinating campus activities. Membership shall be composed of the presidents of all campus organizations, the presidents of the four classes, editors of campus publications, the president and vice-president of SGA and director of student activities. Other details are set in the proposal which was passed by the legislature.

Student legislature will hold its next meeting on Tuesday, April 10 at 6:30 p.m. in the student center.

Chapin Sings For Response

BY LINDA CAIN

"My lyrics reflect things I have gone through," said Tom Chapin, singer-songwriter, in a recent interview.

Chapin, 32, grew up with music. His father, Jim, played drums with Tommy Dorsey. Tom Chapin got his first guitar when he was 12 years old. He and his brothers, Harry and Steve, were influenced by the Weavers, a four-piece group who performed at Carnegie Hall. During high school, he played in a band with his brothers and father called The Chapin Brothers. Later, he and his brothers formed The Chapins. The Chapins were hailed as one of the best bands of 1971 by Rock Magazine. He played with Mount Airy, a popular band on the East Coast for several years; before striking out on his own.

The singer turned professional four years ago and began to write music. He wrote the score for the movie Blue Water, White Death as well as starred in it. In 1976, he released his first album, "Life is Like That." The album was ranked as being one of Billboard's Top Album Picks for the week ending November 20, 1976. A second album is expected to be released this year.

Aside from records and movies, Chapin has done two television series. "Make a Wish," his first, ran for five years as a Sunday morning children's television series. It was aimed at 6 to 11 year olds. The show received a Peabody Award for Best New Informational Children's Series its first season. The series received an Emmy its fourth season.

Chapin's new series "Everyday" is a mixture of "Saturday Night Live" and "Godmorning America". "The show's more like Merv Griffin," the singer commented.

The show runs five days a week for one hour and is a mixture of songs and skits. It is hosted by Stephanie Edwards and John Perry.

Many of the songs for Chapin's new album have been featured on "Everyday".

"Five tracks (songs) have been completed," said Chapin.

Chapin stated that he done alot of television this year and has missed doing live concerts. He noted, "Live concerts give a performer a chance to learn about himself and get feedback."

The young artist says he writes instinctively with an honest feeling.

He prefers to travel alone because with a crew he feels that one tends to forget who he is and has to deal with roadies (technicians) and entourages.

In the future, Chapin would like to get some hit records and go into the Communications Arts Business.

Chapin said that he heard his first song being played over the radio while driving over the Brooklyn Bridge from Brooklyn to Manhattan and became so excited that he yelled out of his car window "that's me, thats my song".

"A driver in another car gave me a look like I should be committed," laughed Chapin.

A recent No. 1 Best Seller entitled "The Amityville Horror" recounts 28 days of terror experienced by the Lutz family when they moved into a luxurious home in Amityville, Long Island, only to find it infested with some malevolent lent supernatural force that was bent on driving them out. Once called in to investigate the disturbances, Ed and Lorraine soon found themselves challenging one of the most powerful, evil forces they had ever encountered in 32 years of investigating haunting phenomena.

The Warrens will also discuss their recent work with those involved with "The Ghost of Flight 401" as well as two girls who have come under demonic attack in Enfield, England; a case that might rightly be called the British counterpart of "The Exorcist". Following this, a series of "psychic photographs" will be shown in which ghosts and other images have mysteriously shown up on film. A question and answer period will conclude the program.

Students are reminded that there is a limited seating capacity of approximately 175 for this show.

Summer Sessions At UCLA

If you are looking for a change of academic and geographical environment, consider the 1979 UCLA Summer Sessions program.

This year the University will offer more than 400 special programs and courses spanning 50 subject fields from the physical, natural and social sciences to the arts and humanities and other professional fields.

The two six-week sessions, beginning June 26 and August 6, are open to all students. Out-of-state students do not have to pay non-resident fees. However, enrollment in Summer Sessions does not constitute admission to the University.

Summer Sessions students have an opportunity to earn degree credit, take classes otherwise unavailable, enhance career prospects or pursue a particular interest for cultural or intellectual enrichment. A special appeal of Summer Sessions is that most classes are smaller, allowing additional time for interaction with faculty and other students.

Highlighting the summer schedule are programs in Asian performing arts, design, theater arts, English literature and exposition, kinesiology, folklore and mythology, and motion picture/television.

For more information and a free Summer Sessions catalog, write to the Office of Summer Sessions, UCLA, 1254 Murphy Hall, 406 Hilgard Avenue, Los Angeles, CA 90024.

Summer Science Project Announced

Students at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington have been awarded a National Science Foundation grant for research on bio-economic problems of shellfish pollution. It encourages students to address their concerns for society and the environment by tackling real-life research problems while developing their scientific talents.

The project is interdisciplinary, requiring such disciplines as microbiology, population analysis, marine chemistry, physical oceanography, marine geology, socio-economics, math modeling, and political analysis.

Students will receive stipends of $100 per week beginning May 29, 1979, for 12 weeks. Interested juniors, seniors, and graduate students (as of May 1979), particularly those with strengths in microbiology and chemistry, may apply for a team position by forward-

BY JERRY BLACKWELL

Several outbreaks of "stomach sickness" have occurred on campus lately, but one thing for sure, the cafeteria's food wasn't the blame. According to the infirmary staff which includes Dr. A.P. Fortney, and Nurses Eisenhower and Ingram, the sickness which victimized over one-hundred students here, causing many to be admitted to the infirmary, was a gastro-intestinal virus.

The symptoms of the virus were very similar to those of food poisoning - nausea, vomiting, fever, diarrhea - that it prompted many students to believe that food poisoning was indeed what they were experiencing, especially since many felt that their illness erupted the morning after having eaten a steak dinner in the cafeteria.

The infirmary staff eliminated the possibility of food poisoning in their diagnoses for several reasons. "Not only did students who ate in the cafeteria have the virus, but also those who didn't," stated Nurse Ingram. Nurse Eisenhower also informed that HPC wasn't the only place this sickness had struck. Other points in the city were hit as well, and food poisoning is not contagious.

Dr. Fortney also stated in a later interview that if it had been food poisoning, the symptoms would have been more violent. "Food poisoning would have caused a complete collapse," according to Dr. Fortney, "and glucose would have been needed in treating the patient," he continued. This was not the case with the virus, however.

Dr. Fortney also stated that in the case of food poisoning, the symptoms would have persisted much longer than those of the virus. Students who had the virus experienced a rapid recovery.

One student who was a victim of the virus was so sure that the cafeteria food was what produced his illness, that he gave the Guilford County Health Department a call to complain. According to Mr. Caulfield, cafeteria manager here, the Health Department inspected the cafeteria, and upon their findings left a grading of 96 (A). Mr. Caulfield also insisted that if students have a problem concerning the food here, to talk to him or Mr. Walton, assistant manager, about it.

Injuries hindered Marie Riley throughout this past season.

Riley's Season A Near Disaster

BY DENNIS TUTTLE

Marie Riley, High Point College's "franchise builder," experienced a junior season she'd rather forget. While the 5-11 native New Yorker was scoring 25 ppg and enjoying her best overall season ever, the Panther roundballer felt she quickly became burdened with injuries that up to HPC's trip to the Nationals, plagued her and the Panthers' chances at another AIAW small college title.

The season unofficially ended for Riley when she broke her wrist against Campbell in January. From that point until the Panthers' loss to Tougaloo in the Nationals, she was burdened by nagging injuries.

"I knew we could win it again and everybody was up for it," said Riley. "I was averaging 25 points per game and was shooting well over 60 per cent. But when I fell against Campbell, my season just kind of ended. I really felt that I was undercut."

Riley was running a play in which she fakes and goes left. But on this occasion, she faked left and went right. When she fell from the impact of the defensive player trying to make up a missed assignment, she knew that something serious had happened to her left hand.

"The first thing I thought was that it was just a sprained wrist. But the trainer said that it was broken — I started crying — and I cried for a week, all the way through the state tournament."

Riley wore a cast for two weeks and saw some action in the Carolinas Conference tournament and the Regionals in Kentucky. But at Fargo, N.D., she landed wrong on a similar play and she strained her back. In the consolation games against Pepperdine and Morris Harvey, Riley scored three points.

"Coach Briley would play me a little bit and then take me out," Riley said. "I started those games but I couldn't play my best. I'd play a little and then she'd take me out. It was just a nagging back injury — a play I couldn't help," she added.

Panther Nine Out Of Slump

BY DENNIS TUTTLE

After struggling through an early season slump, the High Point College baseball team is beginning to make its move toward another Carolinas Conference title. Coach Jim Speight's Panthers are starting to hit the ball with power and High Point's starting pitchers are finding their groove. As a result, the Panthers now possess a 14-7 record, 5-2 in the conference.

An exhibition of the High Point bat power came this past weekend when the Panthers took four games. High Point swept a double-header from Bethany on March 31 with 3-1, 10-9 wins and on April Fool's, Guilford became the victim of High Point's explosive battery. Trailing 9-1, HPC came back to take an 11-9 triumph over its closest rival.

Jason Crump, 3-0, came on in the second inning in relief of starter Phil Cherry and notched the Guilford win with the aid of Dirk Gurley's eight and ninth inning pitching heroics. Of High Point's 14 hits, two were home runs by Gerald Culler, who was 3 for 5 on the day. Tim Reid, who has also been showing a bit of power in recent games, drove in four runs and catcher Danny Wilbur was 3 for 5.

Jay Schwamberger allowed North Carolina A&T only five hits and Joe Garbarino's three run eighth inning home run powered the Panthers to a 10-0 rout of the Aggies April 2. Reid backed Garbarino's blast with a solo shot, also in the eighth.

Schwamberger, now 3-2 on the season with an ERA of 1.08, pitched the Panthers to a previous win over Guilford. High Point's batsmen once again did the damage racking 19 hits in providing an

Briley National Coach Of Year

Wanda Briley, 26-year-old women's basketball coach at High Point College, has been named as the 1979 Stayfree National Small College Coach of the Year.

The award will be presented April 2 in New York's Waldorf-Astoria Grand Ballroom. Other awards will be presented to the large college and junior college Coaches of the Year. The prestigious Wade Trophy, symbolic of the nation's top female basketball player, and a special award for service to women's athletics will also be awarded.

Briley, a graduate of South Carolina, who is in her second year at High Point, posted a 33-4 record this year enroute to a sixth place finish in the AIAW Small College Tournament.

In 1978, Briley, in her first year of coaching, guided the Panthers to a 30-8 mark and the AIAW National Small College Championship.

In addition to coaching basketball Miss Briley has coached the women's volleyball team to records of 42-10 and 42-7 and took her team to the national tournament in 1977.

The native of Mt. Pleasant, S.C., Briley was named as the Carolinas Conference Coach of the Year in both volleyball and basketball this year. It was the first time she had won either of those honors.

High Point has had one previous National Coach of the Year in Ray Allen, who was selected as the NAIA Tennis Coach of the Year in 1975.

Riley's Season A Near Disaster

When Riley, 24, was diagnosed with leukemia in 1988, he was told he had a 50 percent chance of surviving. He fought the disease for two years, but the cancer returned. Riley was diagnosed with a second, more aggressive form of leukemia in 1990. He was given a 10 percent chance of surviving.

Riley's condition worsened rapidly, and he was hospitalized for several weeks. He was given a 5 percent chance of surviving. Riley's family and friends were devastated. They knew Riley was a talented player, but they didn't know he was so young.

PANTHER PROFILES

BY KIM DARDEN

Afraid and Unsure, Ledford Cracks Barrier

At first, no one knew if Sally Ledford would make it as the only girl on High Point's track team. Even Sally herself was afraid and unsure.

"The guys didn't know how to take me," she says. "A few thought I wouldn't last, or that I was just out for attention." Coach Davidson, too, she says, had a "wait-and-see" attitude.

There was an immediate barrier between Sally and the rest of the team. She says "It was like they were over here, and I was over there—separate." And naturally Sally had to deal with almost constant ribbing and joking. "We really put her to the test," says one of her team members, looking back on early practices.

Doubtless, none of "the guys" knew just what determination they were dealing with Sally. Nor did they know her background, which has helped her to establish the easy rapport and feeling of belonging she now enjoys.

Sally, the only girl in her family has three older brothers. She lives on and helps care for a farm surrounded by woodland. Her brothers have influenced her in at least one way — by teaching her to hunt. "I really like to hunt," she says. "I go with my oldest brother — we go quail hunting. My brothers gave me a gun for Christmas," she adds with a grin. Sally has, from her early high school years, participated in a variety of athletics. It was through AAU swimming competition that she was introduced to track. "We had to run to get in shape — two miles before practice. One day I was running in the gym and the Coach asked me to come out for track," she says. So that spring, Sally found a place on her high school's team — High Point Andrews. She also skis, ice skates and owns two show horses.

But there is something even greater than those factors in her background which has equipped her to "stick it out" with sports and motivated her to come out for HPC track in the first place. She explains, "Last year, at the beginning of my track season, I got hurt. I had been offered a track scholarship to another school (UNC), but because I got hurt, I lost the scholarship. This was a big school with a very good track program — both girls and guys. It hurt when I lost that offer. And it made me mad, so I wanted to try here and see how well I could do after my leg healed — to see if I could have done it. So I came over here last year and talked to Coach Davidson and he said it'd be okay. So this is like a trial period for me — to see if I can learn well again."

Sally didn't think she'd like High Point but, she has discovered different. "My goal isn't to get to that other school now — I wouldn't after that. For now I like High Point."

As far as her progress here, Sally is optimistic. "These are the hardest workouts I've ever had," she says, "and I've gotten in shape faster than I ever have before. I've brought my time up in every meet so far. But my best time is still 11 seconds faster than anything I've run this year. But with these workouts and all, I ought to be able to get there."

It would be hard to discern just which has given Sally the most satisfaction and feeling of accomplishment — conquering the toughest workouts of her life or conquering the challenge of becoming a vital team member through the only girl on the team.

"Some thought I wouldn't last, but I've stayed so I've gained their respect," she says. "I like to think I help the team, too. If nothing else, it gives them someone to pick on," she joked.

"It means so much to me for them (teammates) to accept me, to root for me, to get out there at meets and yell for me."

So far Sally has competed only against guys — and "unofficially." "But it's serious for me," Ledford said. Later in the season she will have the chance to compete officially against girls in invitational tournaments.

"When I run against guys," she says, "I feel kind of embarrassed. Sometimes I think it gets to them, though, more than it does me. It makes them stop and think a minute about just how seriously to take me."

HPC Netters Post 10-8 Mark

BY DEBBIE SAIE

The High Point College men's tennis team has posted a 10-8 record through matches of April 1. But coach Mike Glover's Panthers have played much better than their record indicates. A tough schedule and some injuries have hampered High Point thus far.

Against N.C. State, only Burgess and the doubles team of Parrish and Hohnhold were able to register victories. Burgess, a walk-over performer, topped David Green in a No. 6 singles match 6-3, 6-3 while Parrish-Hohnhold stopped Gregg Hennemuth-Allen Spizzo 6-2, 7-6 in doubles.

The schedule, which consists of such teams as N.C. State, Wake Forest, East Tennessee State, MIT and North Carolina, is certain to give the Panthers vital match experience when the District 26 tournament nears. The injuries — to top seed Jeff Apperson — has forced coach Glover to switch his playing ladder around. Apperson is nursing a sore back.

The Panthers' most recent win was a 9-0 sweep of MIT. Panthers Willem deGroot, Phil Parrish, Chris Hohnhold, Tom Fitzmaurice, David Burgess and Lane Evans all won singles matches in straight sets.

High Point has also beaten opponents St. Lawrence of New York (9-0), Westchester State of Pennsylvania (9-0) and East Stroudsburg State (8-1) quite handily. However, the Panthers did drop a 7-2 match to N.C. State.

Against East Stroudsburg, only Lane Evans did not get a win as he lost in No. 6 singles. Apperson won at No. 1 singles 6-4, 2-6, 6-4 and Parrish managed an easy 6-2, 6-0 win at No. 2 singles. Hohnhold went three sets before taking a 5-7, 6-3, 6-4 win at No. 3 singles while Fitzmaurice took a 6-4, 6-0 decision. At No. 6, Burgess recorded a 6-1, 6-3 singles victory. In doubles, Apperson-deGroot (6-0, 6-2), Fitzmaurice-Burgess (5-3, 7-5) and Parrish-Hohnhold (6-1, 6-0) notched wins.

Carolina nipped the Panthers netters 5-4 April 2 when High Point dropped the No. 2 doubles match. The Panthers and the Tar Heels were tied at 3-3 going into doubles play but Apperson-deGroot fell in No. 1 6-4, 6-7, 7-5. UNC assured the win with a win over Fitzmaurice-Burgess at No. 2 doubles.

Disappointing Year For Riley

An All-American performer a year ago when the Panthers took the national title, Riley was approached by a Division I college about transferring. "The coach told me that I had accomplished everything that I could at High Point and wanted me to consider transferring. In my mind I wondered what it would be like to play for a bigger school and have a new challenge. I thought about what all the coach had to say but I decided to stay. I like smaller schools."

Riley earned her starting position during her freshman year when Robin Cooper became injured. Riley gained national fame in last season's national tournament when she scored 12, 15, 30 and 41 points in the tournament and headed the Panthers' drive. "I played pretty well the whole second half of my sophomore year. The second half of this year has been like a nightmare."

While Riley has trouble swallowing the losses at Fargo, she couldn't help but notice the trophies that Morris Harvey received for its victory over the defending national champions for fifth place.

"I sit in bed some nights and think about the season, my injuries and the tournament. But I just can't help but notice to think about the awards we received last year for winning it all... and what we got for being No. 6 this year."

"Nothing..."

Bolen, Aydelette Head HPC Duffers

BY KIM DARDEN

Because of the unavoidable disadvantages imposed upon the golf team this year, their early season performance is not the optimum originally expected, though it is by no means poor. After the unexpected loss of two returning lettermen and a promising freshman recruit, the team knew their expectations for the year would be limited. Yet this far their performance is respectable.

The High Point golfers finished 4th out of 16 schools in last week's Pfeiffer College Invitational Tournament, and in a match against strong conference rival Guilford, they lost by only one shot.

"Right now," says Coach Gibson, "except for French (No. 1 Bolen) and Bob (No. 2 Aydelette), who are playing well as expected, we're just not playing well as a team. We have three or four guys with potential - what we need to do is develop strong number three and four men. And most of all, these players need match experience."

Flexibly playing No. 3 and

No. 4 are Mike Dombrowski and freshman Larry Corson.

"Mike has the greatest potential," says Gibson. "At one time he was a really good player, but he's been out of school for a few years, so he just needs to overcome this lack of match experience."

Larry Corson too, has great potential if he can develop his consistency. I myself being seen Jeff Hall (No. 6) playing very well in the past - these are key people."

Bob Aydelette is optimistic about the team's potential. "All we have to do is develop it - we've got it," he says. Right now everyone is making the effort - we had six guys practicing the other day and it wasn't even required."

Considering that these golfers were originally projected as No. 6 and below men and have been forced to step into 3rd, 4th, and 5th positions, their efforts are admirable. Their next competition is a re-match at Guilford on Thursday.

Walk-On Shortstop

Freshman Pisano HPC Surprise

BY DENNIS TUTTLE

It is no surprise to freshman Mike Pisano that he is the starting shortstop for High Point College. With a wicked sense of confidence and some basic luck, Pisano is quickly filling the shoes of graduated All-American shortstop Jim Mugele.

"I felt that I could play college baseball and maybe even start," the native Baldwinsville, New York, said. "I knew I had a good shot to play because I had confidence in my fielding. I've always felt that I could play defense in college."

Pisano wasn't recruited by that many colleges while at Baldwin High School. In fact, he took a chance by coming to High Point and made the team as a walk-on. "I knew High Point had a good team and I hit .383 in my senior year in high school. So I felt that I could make it here. But I was slightly worried."

The reason for Pisano's fears was senior transfer Skip Dufflemeyer, who platooned in the No. 6 infield position in the first games of the year. But Dufflemeyer suffered a lower back injury and Pisano responded to coach Jim Speight's call for a reliable shortstop.

"Coach Speight has really helped me a lot," says Pisano. He used to be a shortstop and he's given me confidence and infield tips that has really helped me. I've made only three errors this season (fielding average is just over .900)."

Pisano's offense productivity is coming around, also. He is hitting right at .270 and is finding college pitching beginning to get easier to hit. "I'm beginning to find my pitch and not go at a bad one. I'm batting No. 9 in the order but heck, that's alright with me. There isn't any pressure down there."

MIKE PISANO

18-3 verdict over the Quakers.

High Point jumped out to a 9-0 lead in the first two innings as Reid's two-run homer in the second, Ken Carter's three-run shot in the fifth and Chip Baker's solo round-tripper in the sixth staked Schwamberger with all the runs he needed.

Reid was 4 for 5 in the contest while shortstop Mike Pisano was 3 for 5 and Jeff Kennedy drove in five runs with a 2 for 2 day.

The Panthers also swept a double-header from visiting Princeton in the recent surge. The Panthers stopped Princeton 3-1 in the opener of the twinbill as Reid's solo homer and doubles by Pisano and Carter in the second backed Cherry's fine performance on the mound.

High Point came from behind to claim a 6-5 win in the nightcap of the Princeton double-header. A three-run seventh and a fine pitching performance from freshman Micky Powers allowed High Point to stage the win. Powers made his first appearance in an HPC uniform by limiting Princeton only six hits in 5 2/3 innings of work

McCulloch Incident Provokes Concern

BY ROBIN HENSON

A twenty-year-old man with a pair of bolt cutters around his neck was found in the lobby of McCulloch dorm at 12:40 a.m. March 27. He was bent over a bicycle when Brad Clifton and Ken Swanson walked in and disturbed him.

Clifton and Swanson went immediately and reported the incident to Paul Lessard, the head resident assistant, who called campus security. The three then went outside to see if they could catch the man before he could escape.

They caught him and held him until security arrived. Lessard borrowed security officer Hurley's billy stick, but kept a firm hold on the suspect. Security called the High Point police.

When the police arrived, Lessard loosened his hold on the suspect for the first time. The man bent over and pulled a revolver out of his sock, cocked it, and was lifting it when the police realized he was armed and took the gun away from him.

There were no injuries during the incident, but there could easily have been. HPC security guards do not have the right to frisk or handcuff a suspect without the suspect's consent.

Guards also can't carry guns. Lieutenant Don Walton, head of campus security, said that guards feel their hands are tied in a situation like this, because they have no show of force.

To be able to carry guns, the security officers would have to go through a training program so they could be licensed by the state. But to train the officers would cost money, and HPC doesn't have the money now.

High Point Crime Prevention, a division of the High Point police, sent a man to talk to the residents of McCulloch at Lessard's request. Crime Prevention suggested that all the door locks in McCulloch be changed to dead bolts.

According to Lessard, Crime Prevention said that McCulloch is the campus building most susceptible to crime. It is the hardest building to patrol, it is right on Montlieu Avenue, it has more entrances than any other building and it is the building that is least equipped to prevent theft. The doors are easily breakable and the locks are not dependable.

These are a few of the reasons that McCulloch has been plagued by theft this year. Another is that a master key was lost last year. Lessard estimates that between two and three thousand dollars worth of goods have been stolen this year. And in most of the thefts, the thief has used a key. The only way to remedy the situation is to change all the locks, a process that would cost nearly three thousand dollars.

The police suspect that the man caught by Lessard, Clifton and Swanson was the same person who has been stealing bikes from campus. But he is probably not the one who has been breaking into rooms.

With the testimony of Lessard, Clifton and Swanson, the suspect was brought up on charges and tried. He now faces a 25-30 year term in prison.

According to Crime Prevention, the best answer to crime is prevention of the crime in the first place. To do this, there has to be a deterrent to scare away possible burglars. New locks and doors would help. So would a stronger security force. But until the money is appropriated, nothing can be done.

Sullivan To Be Leaving HPC

BY RAY DANIEL

Mrs. Sullivan, an English teacher here at HPC for 18 years, will be leaving our school at the end of this semester. "I feel that it's time for me to go," she remarked.

The reasons for her leaving run deep, but they are reflected in the general behavior of the whole College. She believes that lethargy has taken over and that the students have become too business-oriented. They have neglected the humanities and fine arts. This has distressed Mrs. Sullivan. She has shown her concern to improve the attitude of the students previously in a letter to the editor of the HI-PO. In the letter she asked, "Where is the glow, the inner joy, that should erupt spontaneously when people join together to discuss new ideas, old ideas...?" She called for "an interlun leap into the heart of the educational process."

Mrs. Sullivan suggests, "We need to start at the core of the problem." She would like to bring about the exchange of ideas in the classroom and "make learning fun again." Last year she tried to spark the desire of learning and the enthusiasm that an interesting course can offer. She hoped to do this by introducing a new class dealing in the humanities, with discussions of Man and God. But, much to her displeasure, the class was never even accepted by the administration. Whenever a new course is added to the program, an old one must be dropped. This makes it difficult to develop and improve the selection, quality, and interests of the subjects. This difficulty in promoting new and better courses was another factor which discouraged Mrs. Sullivan.

Her dedication showed in her statements. She said, "If I didn't really care about humanities and the fine arts,

The opinions herein are not necessarily those of the college or the majority of the student body, rather, those of the writers. The editorials printed in this publication are the expressed opinions of the Editors of the Hi-Po.

We've reached the conclusion of another school year. God only knows where it went so fast. As Editor of the Hi-Po, I have had the opportunity this year to try to better represent the ideas and feelings of this campus community. At times things were frustrating, but I assure you, never were these intentions forgotten.

I've learned a lot this year. I've learned to whisper when I've wanted to scream. I've learned that one can easily stagnate in her tracks if so desired. I've learned to eat dinner with a vegetarian on steak night. The list goes on.

I can not possibly sum up my feelings about this year on the Hi-Po staff in this short space. All I can do is thank the people who put themselves into something in which they believed and were willing to give up so much of their own time just for the written word.

My thanks are due especially to Scott Hance, my associate editor and right-hand-man, who helped so much with the design of this publication. And thanks are to be given to the entire staff for putting up with me and my push all year. We did it, didn't we?

I have to single out Kim Darden for her enthusiasm. Ray Daniel for his dry wit. Dave Schaller for always coming through with the pics and Sharon Kaler for her sheer conscientiousness and dependability on the business end.

There were a lot of new faces on the staff this year. Dennis Tuttle is one of them who has done an outstanding job with sports, innovating faster than we could have the headlines set, while many others came to our rescue in so many other ways.

There have been times when I was so pleased with an issue I could have burst, but I feel that the one thing that has been the climax of the entire effort for me was seeing people on the staff really start to enjoy what they were doing and come to love journalism, communications, expression, creativity or whatever you want to call it. My subject faults were reconciled when one previously uninvolved staff member stated that she wanted to continue in the newspaper world as a profession.

It is hard to be a journalist. Not everyone can stand to talk to themselves in a column like this. I never know if you're listening. I never know if you really care. But the writer must always believe that someone out there does. It is that faith that brings you this publication.

I thank you all for picking the Hi-Po up out of their piles in the cafeteria. Even if you only wanted a Peppi's coupon, I'm betting you at least glimpsed at something else.

Thanks also to Terri for typing, to the English Department for their constant support, to Pete and Peggy, for everything possible and especially to Ms. Sullivan, who first cared and encouraged me to write.

This year has been fun and I sincerely anticipate 1979-'80 as your Editor once again. I guess once is not enough.

Letters To The Editor

Greek System Causes Dissension

Dear Editor,

An "innocent" student arrives at college -- often alone for the first time in his life. It is essential to make a good impression and meet new friends. The Greek system makes this process achievable for most students, but not all.

As is, this commentary is aimed at the Greek system. It is not aimed at any particular campus fraternity or sorority. Each group is different, yet some groups practice the selection-rejection process.

Perhaps you've heard of Mrs. Eileen Stevens who is appearing on nationwide television to promote her new book outlawing the inhumanity of fraternity hazing. Her son, Chuck, was killed in a college hazing by being forced to drink a mixture of alcoholic beverages while locked up in a car trunk. Instead of vomiting when he returned to his room, he died.

On the Tomorrow show of April 3, 1979, two members of a national fraternity spoke. They referred to several inhumane fraternity incidents, and said that they felt brainwashed. They highly denounced ever joining their fraternities. One guy had been kicked by his "loyal" brothers, and admits still being scared.

This particular fraternity Chuck Stevens was killed by was not a national fraternity. Yet what shocked me was the two national fraternity representatives -- one of which is on this campus. They seemed to express a common experience known as mental hazing.

As Mrs. Stevens says, "I'm not anti-fraternity, I'm anti-abuse." I feel this way too. Yet some social fraternal organizations are subject to mental hazing. What better way to promote a fraternity than by word of mouth, and to continue encouraging all rushees.

Sure, High Point College does not allow hazing. Yet the promotion of encouraging and re-encouraging prospective rushees is a form of mental hazing that the Greek system enforces each rush season.

There have been numerous cases of students rushing for a fraternity or sorority on this campus who for reasons were not "selected." Of course, this probably does not hurt everyone -- only some. And the varying degrees of that pain differ for every individual.

After formal rush, the process may continue. The rejected rushee must then talk the old members rewinning their votes, while trying to get to know all of the new members. It is understood, a bid may be given a long time.

Often, students have, repeated rush only to be turned away and torn-up again. Maybe some were lucky and were told the reason why they were not selected instead of having to wait or finally give up. Maybe such information can help a person, but to be led on is cruel. And often, perhaps the information would be helpful if all members were honest or really concerned enough to admit why the rushee was not selected.

For Day students, the process may be more severe. The only time they'll see a member is in class, between classes, or on their own time.

However, there are many positive advantages for fraternity/sorority membership. Such groups offer excellent chances for friendship, good times, trust and yes, love.

Yet, why must a person feel so bad, hurt and worthless when they are not selected for a fraternity? This is how the Greek system tears up a person. Sure, all of us have to learn to face disappointment. College is supposed to be one of the happiest times of our life. What does it really do to someone to be rejected by a large representative group?

My opinion of fraternal groups has definitely lessened after finding out what the Greek system seems to practice. Sure, if a person has expressed little or no interest, perhaps they should not be considered. But, what about the upset guy or gal who keeps trying because they cannot find any other answer?

Perhaps, some of it is self-determination to prove to all the other members that "I'm just as good as you." Maybe it's good friends that you don't want to lose -- fraternity or not.

In some ways, the fraternity I rushed for helped me to be myself, but the way of learning is never totally erased by the scare.

To those of you who rushed for a fraternal group and were not accepted, you have my respect and sympathy. It's just so hard to accept, but it happens everywhere the Greek system is practiced.

May I further suggest that this college have a formal program that explains rush policies and the Greek system to "innocent" students. Seeing students on a one-to-one basis as they are not selected is advisable. This

English Teacher Confused By Story

Dear Editor:

I appreciate the coverage (in the last issue of the HiPo) given to the English Department's first Career Day. I was happy that you could express in your editorial a feeling of elation about the seminar, as though walking "on air, feeling good about myself and my future." Yet I was ironically amused when I read the conclusion to Linda Cain's article. She quoted me as saying that "many of the panelists felt that English did not have anything to do with what they were doing." The whole purpose of the Career Day was to give concrete evidence to the exact opposite -- that English very much did have something to do with what they were doing -- that in some form or another it was at the very center and core of their careers. Again, I appreciate Linda's good article, but yet I would like to clarify her misinterpretation of my introductory remarks at the seminar concerning the failure on the part of some students to realize that careers in public relations, law, advertising, printing et cetera do have something to do with being an English major.

Sincerely,
Emily Sullivan

Yearbooks To Be Received Late

Because the responsibility of meeting the required schedule for the Zenith could not be met due to production problems on campus, HPC students will not receive their yearbooks before summer break.

The Zenith will be delivered during the summer and will be mailed to graduating seniors. Returning undergraduates may pick up their books in September.

The late delivery of the Zenith has posed great questions among the Publications Committee as to the consequences for future publications. It is obvious that there is not enough student interest and it is also quite apparent that things are not working out, and possibly in the future, will not work out the way they have been.

It is at great expense that the yearbooks will have to be mailed out. It is also at great convenience that it has come to this.

Dr. Gray Bowman, Publications Committee Chairman stated, "If students are going to have publications, they need to have enthusiasm for it because it is their own product."

Because of the lack of student support, the question as to whether or not the Zenith should continue as a publication has been raised. Certainly there are alternatives that are cheaper and easier to produce.

Also, the ideal selections process of the Editorship should have several candidates vying for the position - not just a situation where the committee is forced to either choose from a slim line of candidates or to practically coerce anyone who will take the job. According to Mr. Raymond Petrea, co-Advisor of the Zenith, "Good yearbooks are not produced under such circumstances."

Co-Advisor, Ms. Shirley Rawley stated, "It has been four years or more, since we've had a real Zenith staff. I think students should decide if they want one or not and if they do, they need to do something about it."

She continued saying, "In the past there were elections for the position of the Editor with two or three people running for that position. I think as a result of the 60's, students have lost faith in institutions and publications because of censoring. Things have changed since then. We need students to stand up and say they're going to do it and do it."

Students must ask themselves if they do in fact wish to see the yearbook tradition continue and if they do, they should add their own talent and time into making it happen instead of relying on that other guy. The positions are open. I remind you that nothing can't be learned on the job.

In hope to retain the tradition and spark enthusiasm, I and others would encourage you, the student body, to become active and make your yearbook existent and successful.

Dr. Gray Bowman summed up his thoughts saying, "It is hoped that all students with strong interests in the areas of communications and journalism will consider working on the yearbook. The success of this publication depends on the interest of the student body."

LISA MICKEY

Students desiring the editorship of the Zenith in the coming year should submit a list of their qualifications for the position to the Publications Committee. Your list should be delivered to Dr. Bowman's office in 215 Haworth Hall no later than noon, Friday, April 20. Final decision by the committee will be made Monday, April 23.

Other positions available are Associate Editor, Copy Editor, Business Manager, Senior Editor, Class Editor, Sports Editor, Activities Editor and Organization Editor.

Unrest With Greek System

act of finding confidence in yourself again is highly necessary.

Every student rushes for different reasons. Certain people in the fraternities have confessed that the process is cruel by rejecting certain rushees. Most of all you have probably voted for students who were never "selected." Something needs to be corrected or else the next innocent student may be subject to the same hurt and scarred feelings - maybe even more.

SGA Busy With New Bills

BY NANCY REICHEL

Student legislature held meetings on April 4 and 11. Many important matters of legislation were discussed.

Four of the bills concern changes in the SGA constitution which appears in the student handbook on pages 5-17. These bills, therefore must come before the student body in the form of a vote. This will take place on April 25.

One bill is a rather lengthy bill designed to amend the section in the handbook concerning judicial procedure. Its main purpose is to detail the judicial procedure by setting an exact structure to follow. Copies of this and the other bills may be obtained in the student activities office.

Another bill will give the attorney general the authority to supervise the work detail assigned to persons by the Supreme Court. Another bill will give the Executive Council authority to direct two fire drills per year, one per semester, for the entire campus. The final bill would establish a handbook revision committee.

Legislature also passed a resolution to propose a student services student-faculty committee to allow additional student input concerning the cafeteria and the book-store.

Mike Showalter was elected speaker of legislature for next year, and French Bolen was elected speaker pro-tem. The newly elected officers were also sworn in at the meeting.

The freshman information booklet originally scheduled to be published for next year has been cancelled due to expense and other problems. More research will be conducted about the possibility of a booklet in the future.

Also, President Patton has decided that HPC will change to a 4.0 grading scale as soon as the change can be made.

Legislature will meet again on April 25 at 6:30 p.m. for the final meeting of the semester.

Chimes Cause Of Mischief Over The Years

BY KIM DARDEN

What could cause President Patton to sprint across High Point College's grounds in his bathrobe at midnight? Try the chords of a Stephen Foster melody peeling full blast from the tower of Robert's Hall.

Our sweet, soothing, Sunday-music chimes were the culprit. Whoever had set the timer on the chimes on that day years ago had accidentally set it for twelve midnight instead of twelve noon, and had unintentionally turned the volume up as well.

Dr. Patton tells of how his small children were awakened that night and began to cry, and then the phone rang with a very angry neighbor on the other end. Dr. Patton stumbled into his clothes after trying to calm the neighbor and his children. Then, after he ran over to the college, he couldn't find the switch to turn the music off.

"Finally I got the campus policeman to help me," he says, "and we got it off. But it seemed like forever before we did." Dr. Patton says that it was pure coincidence that the chimes were playing "Beautiful Dreamer," "Awaken This Me."

Into incident, which President Patton tells of, chuckling, is only one of many he can relate about the chimes, which have been the cause of much mischief over the years.

The automated chime system was given to the college in the late 50's by Mr. Eliot S. Wood, a member of the board of trustees at the time. From the time the college opened in 1924 until the time of the automated chimes, bells played regularly from the tower. So campus life here has paused a few moments for music since the very beginning.

The present chime system is locked in a musty little room in back of the radio station. The system is connected to speakers in the tower which project the music across the campus and to surrounding areas of the city of High Point at twelve noon and 6:00 p.m. The system includes a manual keyboard, though most people don't know this. Dr. Patton says that someone used to play "Happy Birthday" to him each year on the keyboard.

Engraved on the automated console in gold are decorative half and quarter notes and the trademark "Norton Chimes from Atlanta."

The chimes often share their little room with intruding pigeons. A visitor to the room can find evidence of this even if the pigeons are not present. Mr. Bulla, who is in charge of the chimes, says that, because the chime system is up so high, they have been struck by lightning on numerous occasions. If they are struck, there is no real damage; at worst the power outage clips a breaker and the chimes have to be reset.

The chimes sometimes do not sit quietly and behave perfectly in their allotted space, but have indeed been the cause of mischief over the years. As Mr. Holt says, "I can remember when boys used to sneak up there and mess with the chimes and put some jazz and boogie-woogie music up there. Mr. Holt even vaguely remembers someone using the system to make a speech one Sunday morning."

Dr. Patton remembers back to before the chime system was installed and the bells were used. "Poor ole Mr. Yarborough (the present part-time German teacher here) was living in McCulloch then as the Resident Counselor," tells Patton. "I used to feel so sorry for him. Some boys would climb up to the tower and tie a string around the bell, and climb up in a tree. Then they'd play, 'Whang! Whang! Whang!' in the middle of the night. Mr. Yarborough would wake up and run out there and see the string in the tree but not a trace of anyone. This went on until finally he caught the pranksters."

The chimes are viewed differently by the members of the college community. Most people like them, but for a wide variety of reasons.

Says freshman Martha Vink, "They remind me of home and my church, which has chimes. I like the music, too, and like to sing along with the hymns."

Junior Ken Swanson likes them because they "give a sense of serenity to the school." "And they're one of the few signs of religion on campus, he adds.

Says freshman Jan Harrison, "They remind me of going to church in my childhood."

Mr. Holt feels they're a "nice break in the silence of the campus."

For senior Jeff Apperson, the chimes give a more academic atmosphere. "All the colleges in Europe have chimes," he says.

The chimes lift freshman Patty Fortus's spirits when she's feeling down. Another student says they're "inspirational and soothing, and put me in reflective mood."

Says Woman's Dorm Housemother, Margaret Boyles, "They're like something that sort of unites campus. You know that something everyone else hearing at the same time are."

Sorne, however, are not fond of the chimes. Senior Don Wright, "I think they're tacky and tasteless and a bit inspiring. I'd rather Led Zeppelin." To Todd Miller, the only thing about the chimes that they tell him what it is. "Everyday it's same 'ole thing," he says.

Tom Burke says he takes them or leave them, that sometimes the selection could be better. (The selection is not as so appropriate as on night years ago when chimes played "Beautiful Dreamer"). Says Burke, remember on one of the bad snow days we had, I was budging through the snow and they were playing "Summertime, and the Spring is Easy..."

But those who are mental about the chimes think they're inspiring and feel that a selection of mischievously by a tiny once was very humorous with the chime meaning purpose—'Stairway to Heaven.'

Children Come Of Age Over The Years

As children grow up, they learn to deal with the world around them. They learn to cope with the challenges of life, and they learn to become responsible adults. This is a process that takes time, and it is one that parents and teachers must guide them through. Children learn from their experiences, and they learn from the people around them. They learn to be kind, to be honest, and to be responsible. They learn to be good citizens, and they learn to be good people. This is the goal of education, and it is the goal of parenting. We want our children to be happy, to be healthy, and to be successful. We want them to be good people, and we want them to be good citizens. This is the goal of education, and it is the goal of parenting.

New Librarian Appointed

Larry B. Keesee has been named head librarian at High Point College to replace Miss Marcella Carter upon her retirement at the end of the academic year. The announcement of Kee-see's promotion from assistant librarian to the top-ranking position was made by Dr. Wendell M. Patton, president of the College. Miss Carter, head librarian since 1966, joined the staff of Wrenn Memorial Library at High Point College in 1947.

A resident of Jamestown, Keesee was on the staff of Greensboro Public Library before coming to High Point College in 1977.

Wrenn Memorial Library has over 100,000 volumes plus a large collection of journals — bound magazines — and microfilm material. Keesee will take over a staff of two assistant librarians, two full-time assistants, and 25 part-time student employees.

Keesee said he expects to suggest changes in procedures and in the handling of materials to make the library more inviting to students.

A big problem is the continuing rise in the cost of books and in the technical services required to keep a book in circulation. Keesee said the cost of purchasing a book and putting it on the shelf processing it for use is between $20 and $25.

Keesee has served on the staffs of libraries at the University of Virginia, Sweet Briar College, and the National Archives in Washington, D.C.

A native of Washington, D.C., he graduated from the American University and began his graduate work there. He earned his master's degree in library science from the University of North Carolina, and has done additional graduate work at UVA and UNC-Greensboro.

Bookstore Options Not Good

BY KIM DARDEN

The bookstore announces that the used-book-buy from students begins Wednesday, May 2, and continues through Friday the fourth. Students should have their I.D.'s when they present their books for trade.

Questions have been raised by students who feel that they are not getting a fair price for their books in the bookstore. The bookstore personnel enumerate the following considerations which affect buy-back value: (1) The instructor has dropped the book and it will not be used next semester; (2) the publisher has a new edition and the old edition has no value; (3) the bookstore is now overstocked and has more of that book than is needed; (4) the instructor has not indicated that he will use books next semester (mainly pertains to paperbacks); and (5) the book is in too poor a condition to be re-sold. One or several of these reasons may affect the price offered for the book.

Mrs. Webb of the bookstore says that they cannot buy a book back for as high a price as they will re-sell it for because this would result in a loss of money for the bookstore. "First of all, she says, 'the book has to be processed, cleaned, re-marked, and put back on the shelves. This handling of books involves time, thus money for salaries. Secondly, the North Carolina Association gives us a set price at which to re-sell the books. It's the same as on all other campuses. We cannot mark the books at what we want to mark them.'"

Mrs. Webb adds that sometimes after buying back a book, they will find upon closer examination that the book is too ragged or marked up to be resold. "Then this book is just discarded and we lose that money completely," she says.

As for books that are purchased in the bookstore by off-campus wholesalers, Mrs. Webb says the bookstore is not responsible for these prices. "He may buy the book back for less than one-half its value, but we cannot dictate the prices of books which will not be used again on this campus."

"It's only to help the students that we buy books back anyway," she says. "And even if we buy an originally sixteen-dollar book back from you for eight dollars, you are still getting a good deal because you have then in effect used the book all year for eight dollars."

If students want more than the bookstore can pay, they have the option of giving their books to Alpha Phi Omega, though they will not receive any money until the book is sold.

Do You Wear GLASSES?

Here's an effective new eye-exercise program that can produce astonishing results in a very short time...

The Batesvision Eye Clinic is now offering a program of eye-exercises that can safely correct most cases of poor eyesight—no those glasses or contact lenses are no longer needed. Originally devised by Dr. William H. Bates of the New York Eye Hospital, this method has been widely used by the Armed Forces, schools, clinics, and thousands of private individuals, for the treatment of:

- nearsightedness
- farsightedness
- astigmatism
- middle-age sight

For many years it was thought that poor eyesight was just bad luck, or something you inherit from your parents. Scientists now know that most eye problems are caused by accumulated stress and tension—which squeeze the eyeball out of shape, and affect the muscles that do the focusing. The result is the eye cannot form a clear image, and the world appears to be blurry. In people over 40, the natural aging process is also an important factor.

No matter what your eyesight problem, the Bates Method can help you. This is a health care program, and will benefit everyone who follows it—children, adults, and seniors.

It is important to understand that glasses do not cure a visual problem. They are simply a compensating device—like crutches. In fact, glasses usually make the condition worse. Because they make the eye weak and lazy, a minor problem often develops into a lifetime of wearing glasses.

The Bates Method corrects poor eyesight by strengthening the eye muscles and relaxing the eyeball. You do simple eye exercises that increase your focusing power, eliminate eyestrain, and bring your eyesight back to normal.

Because the Bates Method deals with the basic cause of your eyesight problem, you can expect to see a definite improvement in as little as 1 or 2 weeks. Even if you have worn glasses all your life—things will become clearer and easier, and you will have freedom of good vision—as you go through the program, frequent, gradually blinding into permanent better sight—at which point the exercises are no longer necessary.

We usually find that people whose eyesight is not too bad can return to 20/20 vision in about a month. Even if your eyesight is really poor, within 2 to 3 months you should be able to put away your glasses, once and for all. Read these eye histories:

The Bates Method can mark a turning point in your life—better eyesight without glasses or contact lenses. The program is guaranteed. Try it for 30 days, and if you're not fully satisfied, return it for an immediate refund.

Tuition Increase Stated

BY APRIL CALLAHAN

These cost increases approved at the Spring Board meeting will be used mainly for salary increases. Dr. Patton says that the increase is unavoidable, but every measure to keep the cost as low as possible has been taken. The $50 Student Activity Fee will go to the Student Union, and the SGA will handle its appropriation.

The $40 increase in board will cover only one half the increase in cost of food. These measures have kept High Point College as the fifth least expensive private college in North Carolina. It has also been proposed by Governor Hunt that the North Carolina Residency Grant be raised from $400.00 to $475.00.

Underwater Film Festival Upcoming

An underwater film festival, "Planet Water '79," will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Friday, April 20, in Dana Auditorium at Guilford College in Greensboro.

The door prize will be a four-day scuba diving vacation at Walkers Cay in the Bahamas.

"Planet Water '79" should be of interest to all divers and nondivers alike since it offers a panoramic view of the underwater world, according to Rick Frehsee, well known underwater photographer who will narrate the presentation.

"The theme of the show is to celebrate the beauty and uniqueness of the ocean world, and it will appeal to all travelers and ecology minded people," he said. "Eight films plus still photography will be presented during the 2½-hour show."

Tickets may be purchased in advance for $3 each at the Scuba Shack, 4623 D High Point Road, Greensboro, or at Dana Auditorium, Guilford College, on the evening of the presentation.

Elders Day Slated Today

Dr. Elizabeth Welch, advocate of legislation for older Americans, will speak at High Point College on April 18 as part of a program for older persons.

Named Elders Day on Campus, the day-long schedule also includes class attendance, lunch, and a discussion with Dr. Welch on special concerns of older persons.

Sponsored by the College's program in gerontology, the Day is intended to furnish a stimulating intellectual experience to persons who are interested in specific subjects.

Visitors may attend regular college courses in the humanities, fine art, business, athletics, the sciences, mathematics, religion, sociology, and other areas.

The classes for the day begin at 9 a.m. and 10 a.m., with visitors being invited to participate in one or two classes.

The highlight of the day is the address by Dr. Welch in Memorial Auditorium at 11 a.m. The public is invited to attend at no charge.

Dr. Welch, retired Salem College professor of psychology and education, was elected last year to the Democratic Party's platform advisory committee on older Americans.

Dr. Welch's career includes two decades as a public school teacher in North Carolina and over 25 years as chairman of the psychology and education department at the women's college in Winston-Salem. She has also received recognition and awards as a playwright, speech and education consultant, composer, author, and executive.

With a Federal grant, she studied psycholinguistics in the South Pacific and has toured Central and Eastern Europe and the Far East as a participant in international seminars dealing with education.

Dr. Marilyn Karmel is the coordinator for Elders Day and director of the program on gerontology.

Abzug Urges Political Activism In UNC-G Lecture

BY JILL CHRISTIANSON

Women "have got to become a major political force," former congresswoman Bella Abzug said at UNC-G last week.

As guest speaker for the Harriet Elliott Lecture, Abzug spoke of the "Challenges for Women in the 1980s."

Abzug stressed the need for women to become more involved with national politics.

"We are the majority," Abzug said, in referring to the United States' population of women. Abzug would like to see American women more concerned about political issues.

The speaker cited citizens are defeating the principle of a democracy every time they fail to cast a vote in elections. She pointed out that less than one-third of the citizens between the ages of 18 and 21 vote.

"When people don't care enough to participate, government suffers," Abzug said.

Women, the former congresswoman said, have the numbers and the force to control the United States government if they chose.

The lecturer said she was pleased to be invited to speak at Harriet Elliott's commemoration.

In addition to being Dean of Women Students and professor of political science for several years at UNC-G, Elliott was a leader in the suffragette movement.

Abzug said that Elliott believed in activism, "which I don't see enough of on campuses across the country."

Abzug would like for students to become actively involved in the future of the country and the environment.

"The campuses of America have shown greatest vitality when (students have been) involved with the role of the nation."

The guest speaker made mention to the activism of college students opposing the Viet Nam war.

In her plea for women to become more involved in government politics, Abzug spoke of her dismissal from the National Advisory Committee for Women, of which she was co-chairperson.

Abzug was let go from her position directly after the committee recommended that the president's programs (especially the anti-inflation program) hindered the movement for equality of the sexes.

The dismissed co-chairperson was offended that White House officials thought it not proper for a women's committee to concern themselves with national issues.

"Women's place is every place," Abzug said.

The guest speaker for the Elliott Lecture ended with a comment which stilled the audience.

Abzug said she was anxious for the day when children are amazed to read in history books that women, at one time, did not have equality.

Dr. Reuther Delivers Finch Lecture

BY STEVE FISCHER

Can Christianity liberate women? Dr. Rosemary Reuther says yes, and that in fact Christian ideology offers the most viable context within which to pursue equality of the sexes.

Reuther spoke on religion from a feminist perspective to an audience of High Point students, ministers and other visitors (twice Wednesday, April 11, at Hayworth Chapel).

During her morning address, . . . Reuther dealt with the compatibility of feminism and Christianity. Despite what she termed lengerong Judae-Christian stereotypes which refer to women on inferior roles, she feels the modern church is ripe for egalitarian changes.

She says a new interpretation of old teachings will reveal a theme of equity rather than a male-dominated church hierarchy. Reuther quoted one of St. Paul's early letters which stated God knows no distinctions between slave or master, male or female. So she sees a need not for revamping but for re-evaluating old scriptural and doctrinal teachings.

Many feminists who believe traditional religion should be abandoned are creating small cliques of separatist utopians, she said. Instead of working within current frameworks for improvements, she says these "primitive niches" and such problems by maintaining an unhealthy distance.

After her first presentation, Reuther hosted an informal discussion with area pastors as a part of the HPC-sponsored Ministers Appreciation Day.

In her evening lecture, Reuther spoke on "God, Creation and Ecology" from a feminist viewpoint. She believes that nature has been demonized for more than 1400 years. Since women are generally linked more closely than men to nature, its life cycles and processes, they too have suffered a technological exploitation.

She called for a return to a "harmony of elements" as the only means of enacting capitalistic oppression of both women and the earth.

Dr. Reuther is the Georgia Harkness Professor at Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary. She has held previous positions at Howard University School of Religion, Immaculate Heart College, and George Washington University.

She is the 18th speaker and the first woman lecturer in the 1979 Finch Lecture Series.

Does Your Blow Dryer Have Cancer?

BY LESLIE DAVIS

It's something you usually do daily. Blow drying your beautiful locks that is; however, a recent Associated press wire reports that the head of the Consumer Product Safety Commission says some hair dryers contain asbestos, a material the Government has found to be a cause of cancer.

Several dryers were tested at the National Bureau of Standards to determine the dangers to the consumer. Out of 112 new and old dryers tested, 24 of the brands contained asbestos.

Officials say they don't have a definite list of dryers that contain the element, but General Electric, Sears, Montgomery Ward and Hamilton Beach models were found in the tests to have the dangerous material.

Warrens Entertain*Psychic Researchers Not That Mysterious

BY KIM DARDEN

Psychic and demonology researchers Ed and Lorraine Warren, who visited our campus last Wednesday night to present a multimedia program on "The Amityville Horror," are not the mysterious, eerie, elusive people one might expect them to be. They are instead, exceptionally personable, warm, and open.

Their sense of humor and well-being have apparently been undampened by the 3000 cases of haunting and demonic phenomenon they have investigated over the past 32 years. When asked in an interview how they became involved in their unusual work, Ed answered, his voice rising theatrically, "It was a dark, dark night in Transylvania. . . ." Then both the Warrens laughed.

Mrs. Warren goes on to explain how they actually became involved. "Ed's childhood home was haunted," she says. "His father was a stern man who programmed the family to believe there was a logical explanation for everything that happened in that house."

"After we were married, and trained as professional artists, we did quite a bit of traveling," she continues. "Whenever we'd hear of anything paranormal, Ed would be very curious. At first we just did some casual investigating here and there as amateurs. Eventually as we spent more and more time with this, we became knowledgeable, and 'experts' on the subject, so to speak. And our knowledge made us feel a certain responsibility to help people who had 'hauntings.'"

Ed is now one of the seven leading demonologists in the country. Lorraine calls herself a psychic. Ed states that a demonologist is not scientifically oriented. "You can no more put the devil in a test tube than you can God," he says gravely. Ed is, instead, spiritually oriented. He deals with the supernatural, not the paranormal. An example of the paranormal is, he says, "if an inanimate object went sailing across this campus for no reason, ricocheting off of buildings, etc." Angels, on the other hand, are an example of the supernatural. As a psychic Lorraine walks through homes reportedly haunted or infested, attempting to feel abnormal vibrations and energy draws to which psychics are especially receptive.

The Warrens state that there are two types of haunting phenomenon: spiritual and diabolical. Spiritual hauntings are caused by a once-human spirit which is earthbound, usually because of a terribly tragic death, or a death so sudden or unexpected that the person did not accept his/her death. Another case might be when a dead human spirit visits a living loved one in apparition form.

An example of spiritual haunting phenomenon is the case of Ed's childhood home. There were footsteps, doors opening by themselves, strange noises, levitation of objects, an overbearing feeling of uneasiness, and actual apparitions of the dead elderly woman who had once owned his home and apparently was the cause of the disturbances. "These type of spirits are usually not harmful but only frightening," says Ed.

On the other hand, the diabolical, or demonic hauntings, caused by a mysterious "force" which never walked the earth in human form, is not only frightening, but may be extremely harmful, able to cause physical injury and even death. "These are lesser powers of the devil himself," says Ed.

A prime example of a demonic haunting is the infamous "Amityville Horror," case, the investigation of which brought the Warrens to national prominence. The story of the haunting was a recent #1 bestseller and is soon to be released as a movie more publicized than The Exorcist.

The infested home in Amityville, Long Island was, in 1974, the scene of a bloody mass murder by a man who claimed he was "possessed." A year later, George and Kathy Lutz, and their 3 children, undaunted by the house's past and concerned only with the fact that the retail price of the house had dropped to one third of the original cost, moved into the house. Three months later they were to flee from the house with nothing but the clothes on their backs, never to return. In this haunting, to name only a few of the bizarre and chilling occurrences, both Lutzes were levitated bodily, green slime appeared on the stairs, red piercing eyes stared from a window, Kathy's features were transformed one morning to those of a hag, a 3 year old child communicated with a "pink pig," a ceramic lion jumped into the Lutz's bed and attacked them, and numerous subsequent investigators came under violent physical attack.

Demonic possession is another form of diabolical phenomenon. Ed has been involved in over 41 exorcisms, working with numerous clergymen.

The Warrens are devout

New Basketball Coach

Wake Nabs Briley

BY DENNIS TUTTLE
Wanda Briley, who has guided the High Point College women's basketball team to a 63-12 record and the AIAW small college national championship in just two years, will resign her post as head basketball and volleyball coach at the end of this semester to take over similar duties at Wake Forest University.

The 1974 University of South Carolina graduate will take over a splintered women's basketball program at Wake beginning July 1. She will be assistant volleyball coach, also.

Briley was chosen for the job by Wake Forest Women's athletic director Dot Casey. Casey said Briley was the top choice for the job. "Her record speaks for itself," Briley succeeds Barbara Warren, who resigned after this past basketball campaign.

The 1978-79 small college National Coach of the Year, Briley led the Lady Panthers to a sixth place finish in this year's national tournament with a 30-8 record. The High Point Volleyball team was Carolinas Conference champions this past fall.

It has been speculated that Briley would leave High Point sometime in the near future for a NCAA Division I position but not this quickly. But the second year coach told her basketball players Monday that she was going to accept Wake's offer.

"We hope this is a good step for us," said Casey in a phone interview from Winston-Salem. "We feel that with her skill and experience in coaching that we'll be able to put together a more competitive structure in women's athletics."

"We are pleased to have a coach of her caliber. It's our objective to build a strong program and we think that Wanda Briley is capable of doing it," Casey added.

Briley will stay at High Point until the end of the semester and will continue her recruiting duties for the Panthers. Casey noted that Briley will split time in recruiting but will not leave Wake in the hole for recruits before she begins her official tenure July 1.

"She is under an obligation for High Point for this year but she will also be attempting to get her program under alignment over here," Casey said. "She'll be playing a dual role."

Briley could not be reached for comment by press time and Dr. Murphy Osborne, who will find a replacement for Briley, was not available for comment at the time.

Lady Panther Netters Take 3rd Straight Tourney

The High Point College women's tennis team rolled to its third straight Carolinas Conference championship last week when the Panthers won three singles titles and swept all the doubles matches to oust Guilford.

For her team's efforts, Panther coach Kitty Steele was named the conference Coach of the Year. While Kinta Otterman, Kathy Nebilit and Marie Riley won singles championships, one Panther failed to retain her singles crown.

Sophomore sensation Vicki Williams, who won the first flight championship as a freshman last year, lost 3-6, 6-4, 6-2 to Guilford's Shirley Dunn in this year's No. 1 match.

But Otterman defeated the Quakers' Sue Ireton in straight sets 6-0, 6-4 in No. 2 singles and Nebilit stopped Mary Kitterage. Three-sport star Marie Riley then claimed the No. 4 singles title with a 6-2, 3-6, 6-3 win over Pfeiffer's Kathy Tilton. Williams and Nebilit combined for the No. 1 doubles win, Riley-Otterman romped to the No. 2 doubles, and Tema Allen and Donna Pfister rolled to the No. 3 championship.

The Panthers won the championship by sweeping the doubles and now looks to Davidson College this week to defend their state Division II championship.

Mugele Assigned to W-S Sox

Former Cincinnati Reds manager Sparky Anderson believed that finishing second in the National League West Division a year ago was a major accomplishment -- until he was fired for not finishing first.

High Point College track coach Bob Davidson has been the track and field mentor for 17 years and like Anderson, he feels that second place in the upcoming Carolinas Conference Meet would be a major feat. Although Davidson more than likely won't be fired if his team doesn't make that goal, he realizes that the Panther tracksters have done as well as they possibly could.

With only 18 members on this year's version of the High Point track team, the Panthers have posted a 12-10 record, including all the relay meets they have competed in. Davidson has taken what "thinned out talent" he has and has molded a competitive team.

The Panther mile relay team of Keith Chance, Bill McCowen, Randy Larzelere and Mark McIntire or John T. Katz are currently No. 6 in the state among all colleges.

Despite Prowess

Garbarino Aims For Pros

Joe Garbarino loosened up in the on-neck circle waiting his turn at the plate. Behind the screened backstop watching Garbarino's movement was an elderly man, slightly bald, faintly tanned and if it mattered, looked important.

Garbarino stepped to the plate, took two pitches and lashed a single to rightfield, raising his batting average to .375. The elder man sat up straight in his chair and tipped his sun-reflecting hat so that he could see what occurrence was going to take place at first base.

Garbarino, patiently checked the pitcher's motions to the plate and studied batter Tim Reid's intentions. When Reid drew a count of 2-1, Garbarino darted for second. From within a cloud of dust and a flurry of movement, Garbarino stood up, brushed off his pants and cracked a grin.

With the grin that Garbarino gave himself for his effort, the man behind the screen picked up a device, much like a movie camera. When Danny Wilbur's single to the left-center gap brought Garbarino around third at full speed for a High Point run, the man put down the machinery and displayed a grin of his own. Kinda mischievous you would say.

The man was Jim Garland, a scout for the Los Angeles Dodgers. Garland was making his second visit to see the Panthers this spring and each time he has been to Pantherland, he was impressed with not only Garbarino, but pitcher Jay Schwamberger.

Garbarino May Earn Shot in Big Time

"I like Garbarino," said Garland. "He's got great speed, plays a fine center-field and hits like hell. He's a well-made ball player." The device Garland held was a "Judge gun"; you hear Tony Kubec brag about it every week on NBC's Baseball Game of the Week. And Garbarino's speed was well what Garland was looking for. "I like watching these rabbits run," Garland added.

But for Garbarino, now in his senior season, the pro's are as far from his mind as the next galaxy. "Sure, everybody wants to play pro baseball," Garbarino said. "But of course, few can make it."

Garbarino is High Point's leadoff man, his batting average, stolen base production and ability test a pitcher's patience (walks) all favor him when the June draft comes. "I've seen a lot of players drafted who I thought could make it. But you've gotta be lucky to make it. Very lucky," noted Garbarino.

Garbarino's stolen base production is down considerably from his junior year when the Panther road-runner swiped 36. He has only 13 thefts this year and claims that his slow start had a lot to do with early season problems.

As far as stolen bases, I'm behind because of poor weather, coaching changes and all those little things. The team was left in limbo there for a while as to who would coach us," he said.

"But as far as my hitting is concerned, I feel more comfortable at the plate than I ever have. My home run power hasn't come around yet but I guess I'm having a pretty good season."

Joe Garbarino studies pitcher

The season is far from over for the native Long Island, New York outfielder. The Panthers, despite dropping a twin-bill to Elon last week, could still be considered the Carolinas Conference favorites. That is Garbarino's main concern at the moment.

"If the pros want me they'll draft me in June. But right now, winning the conference and going to the nationals is what I'm looking for. We have the talent to go all the way and thinking about the pro's is not on my mind at the present," he says.

Like a pair of shades in the burning rays, Garbarino is reflecting the thought of being a pro prospect at the present. But also like the sun, there is always a glare. A glare of the day when you play in front of 50,000 instead of 50, drive a Porsche instead of a Pinto and dress on carpet instead of concrete.

Garbarino might be a couple of years from that reality. But Garland thinks he can make it. Deep-down inside, Garbarino does too.

High Point Nine Remains In Carolinas Conference Race

BY DENNIS TUTTLE

Despite a crowded schedule in which three double-headers were played in a two week period, the High Point College baseball team continues to roll along on a winning trail.

The only block between High Point and clinching the Carolinas Conference regular season was Elon — which took a twinbill from the Panthers ten days ago. But strong hitting and fine defensive play has kept the Panthers in contention.

High Point took two from Pembroke State when Jay Schwamberger pitched a two hitter and outfielder Joe Garbarino's four RBI sparked the Panthers to a 6-1 win. The Panther sticks caught fire in the nightcap for a 12-0 win.

In the opening game, Schwamberger pitched 4 1/3 innings of no-hit ball before Robert Poole ripped a solo homer to dead left breaking the sophomore lefty's bid for a shutout and a no-hitter. Schwamberger kayped five enroute to walking only one in chalking up his fourth win in six outings.

Garbarino's three-run homer with two out in the second inning and RBI single later in the game gave Schwamberger all the support he needed.

"Jay had a good curve today and mixed in his changeup real well," said Coach Jim Speight. "He threw as hard as he's thrown all year." Schwamberger's fastball was clocked at 83 mph by a visiting scout from the Los Angeles Dodgers.

In the second game, Dirk Gurley and Mark LaFranco combined to hold Pembroke to four hits while the Panther bats burned the Bear pitching for eight runs in the first two innings. Six Pembroke play in the tournament since Atlantic Christian was No. 2 in the nation last year.

Atlantic Christian had a player in each of the nine finals in the tourney with No. 1 Tom Morris topping the Panthers' Jeff Apperson 6-3, 7-5 and 7-6 (on a 5-4 tiebreaker). Morris overcame match point four times for the victory. It was the fourth year in a row that Morris had captured the first flight championship.

errors and home runs by Danny Wilbur and Jeff Kennedy, both two run shots, provided enough offense for the Panthers. Kennedy and designated hitter Mark Lackey added RBI doubles.

A Parent's Day crowd gathered on the hill to watch High Point take two from Lenoir Rhyne April 7. Kennedy's one-out, bottom of the seventh two-run homer lifted the Panthers to a thrilling 3-2 win. In the second game, it took High Point 14 innings before Garbarino's two out single scored Kenny Carter, bringing in the winning run for a 3-2 victory.

Phil Cherry came in the 12th in relief of Jim Purcell for the win. The Panthers started their winning tally in the bottom of the 14th with two out when Carter and Fred Poole bunched back-to-back singles. Garbarino then lashed the game winning hit. Neal Van Asch went 2-for-2 with a home run in that second game.

In the opener, L-R seemed

Mike Pisano Scores to have the Panthers in check pretty much of the game until Kennedy's long blast to rightcenter scored Wilbur, after he had singled to open the inning. Jason Crump picked up his fourth win and struck out nine Bears

Parrish Hohnhold Capture Net Titles, Panther 2nd In Tourney

BY DEBBIE SAIE

The High Point College men's tennis team wrapped up its regular season with a 17-9 record and a second place finish in last week's Carolinas Conference Tournament. The Panthers were second only to Atlantic Christian in the tournament.

But the Panthers had champions in third flight with Phil Parrish and in the fourth flight with Chris Hohnhold. Hohnhold and Parrish teamed to win the No. 3 doubles title.

The Panthers had a chance to take the championship going into the doubles matches but High Point had to win all three duals for the team title.

High Point finished with 22 team points, compared to ACC's 28.

High Point's season was pleasing to coach Mike Glover. He was especially pleased with the Panthers'

Parrish won the third flight with a come-from-behind three set win over ACC's Tom Alvarez. Parrish dropped the first set 3-6, but recovered in the next two frames 7-6, 7-5.

Hohnhold then captured the fourth flight in straight sets with a 6-2, 7-6 decision over ACC's Jay Aldridge. Tom Fitzmaurice fell in No. 5 singles to Brian Staub 7-6, 7-5.

Atlantic Christian sewed up the conference championship at first flight doubles when Dan Attlerud and Aldridge stopped Apperson and Wilhem deGroot 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Fitzmaurice and Burgess dropped the second flight doubles 6-4, 6-0 but Parrish and Hohnhold made up for High Point's earlier losses in doubles by taking a 6-4, 4-6, 7-5 third flight championship over Morris and Soren Blomgren of ACC.

Track Team Ready For Conference Meet

group of speedsters could possibly take the conference.

But javelin thrower Ron Byrne heads the state when his 203-7 toss. Davidson also feels that Byrne could capture the conference. Ric Callicut broke his own school record last Saturday at the Johnson C. Smith Relays when his 6-7 vault topped his 6-5 mark a year ago. Parry McHarris (six mile) and McCowen (120-yard high hurdles) also figure to give High Point a good shot at individual conference titles. Tracy Lyons set a new school record in the pole vault with a 14-7 jump.

However, Davidson feels that his talent only goes so far. "We've performed up to our capabilities," Davidson said. "The people have done what I have expected from them. They've made some good showings and done the very best they can. This year we've been thinner in talent than usual."

"You've got to have the ponies to put into the events and we don't have 'em. We had a lot of good people (freshmen) lined up to come here and they wound up going to other schools," a disgruntled Davidson added.

"We've relied on walk-ons and others this year and we're still left short of people. The kids I have have done as well as they could under the circumstances."

Byrne and Callicut have been pushing the team's chances for the conference with their excellent performances in the field events. Byrne's is contested in the javelin (statewide) by Duke's Jay Swett, who has a 200-9 throw.

Lazelere has been steady in the 880 run as his 1:56.6 places him No. 9 in the state. McCowen's 14.7 in the 120-yard high hurdles will make him one of the fa-avorites at the conference. McCowen is also one of the better 440 intermediate runners with a 56.3 time.

"It will take a real effort for us to come in second in the conference," noted Davidson. "Pembroke is almost a shoo-in for the team championship. But we've made some good showings in some of the relay meets we've been in. Second in the conference would be an ultimate accomplishment."

Foy Recipient To Be Named Soon

BY KIM DARDEN

The annual John C. and Kathleen Y. Foy Award, which recognizes superior teaching and outstanding service to the college, will be awarded soon to a faculty member of HPC.

Nominations from any member of the college community (including students) will be accepted in the office of the president through this Friday. After nominations are closed, a committee of two students, two faculty members, and two administrators will meet on Monday the 23rd to select this year's recipient of the honor.

A cash award of a $1,000 savings bond and an engraved plaque will be presented to the recipient, and his/her name will also be inscribed upon the college's permanent plaque.

Specifically, the award commends outstanding classroom performance, interest in the students, community end church interest, amount of independent research, and interest in professional growth (indicated by, for example, membership in professional organizations).

The student/faculty committee making the final selection for the award is reappointed each year.

Dr. Ward received the Foy honor last year.

Students are encouraged to turn in a nomination.

Goodbye to Sullivan

then I would probably stay." But that is where her heart lies and she feels she must move on to where she may become more involved in the field.

Mrs. Sullivan remarked, "I have mixed emotions about leaving. I know that it's best that I go, but it's always sad to say goodbye. I'll surely leave a part of myself here."

She has found her career at HPC rewarding and enjoyable. She especially loves the interaction with the students, and sharing ideas Mrs. Sullivan says that practically every day she learns of some new relationship in the world of literature while teaching.

However, she still feels that she must leave. Mrs. Sullivan will be either teaching or working with the fine arts in some special way. Possibly she may work with the Arts Council.

And so, we have lost a fine, idealistic, and dedicated professor, who leaves "disillusioned and disappointed at what the College could be, and what it is." When will we wake up?

Psychics Relate Experiences

Catholics and always call on Christ and the saints to protect them in their work. They have devoted 32 years of their lives to psychic research because they strongly feel it is what God wants them to do, and is their special service to him. They admit that sometimes their work bothers and haunts them even when they are not on a case, and at such times, they say, they lean on each other and their faith. When asked how strong the power of evil is, they gravely replied that it is terrifyingly strong indeed. But they added, "The fact that we are standing before you today shows that it can be conquered."
